Redevelopers to Smash 141 Buildings on West Beach, Ex-Winter Tourist Mecca

By GEORGE WEEKS

One of Long Beach's picturesque shoreline neighborhoods is slowly dying, doomed by the progressive ideas and steady advance of the West Beach urban renewal project.

The end is weeks or months away, but already the seven-square-block area south of Ocean Boulevard and west of Magnolia Avenue is pervaded by a last-days air, even on a sunny morning.

In the 10.8 acres are crowded 141 buildings, mostly slum or near-slum dwellings but a few still in good condition. All are a reminder of 40 years ago when the beach extended north to Seaside Boulevard and the tide almost as far.

Many of the smaller buildings are vacant. Many display, besides the signs of deterioration and neglect, red placards warning "Danger—Stay Out." Some have boarded windows replacing windowpanes smashed by vandals. A few show more glaring evidence of vandalism—fronts and even roofs damaged.

The sidewalks are almost desolate in the daytime. In one 90-minute tour no more than a half dozen persons were seen strolling or taking the sun. There were no children.

At night there is more action. Sometimes it is criminal action, occasionally vicious.

Two years ago, about 2,000 persons lived in the 898 dwelling units. Now, it is estimated that fewer than half remain—and the number is diminishing.

In the 26 commercial buildings only a half dozen businesses still are operating; a restaurant, a bar, a tailor shop and two or three locker clubs and laundries. Only one, a locker club and laundry, appeared to be thriving.

It was on the fringe of the project area, on Magnolia near Ocean.

The main activity along the narrow residential streets, such as Surfline Place and Neptune Place, was the moving of furniture out of buildings just being vacated. Around one truck were clustered a small group of tenants.

A Long Beach Redevelopment Agency official waved at them. They waved back, not sullen but resigned.

For the majority of tenants, semitransients accustomized to moving often, it was an old story. For the old-timers it was a period of sadness.

Elements of the population in the area contrast widely.

"There are all types, from the falling-down drunks to solid citizens of the upper middle class," said William L. Tyra, site representative. "There are beatniks and prosperous visitors, juvenile delinquents and churchgoers."

It has been a center of tranquil life for some. For others it was a place of violent crime and a focus of police calls.

All of them will be out within a few months, except possibly a very few who will wait for a court order to move, said Henry G. Van Dyke, administrative assistant in charge of the site office at 534 W. Ocean Blvd.

The neighborhood is also one of contrasting buildings. Most of the buildings date from the 1920s. One of the biggest, the seven-story, 47-unit Palace Apartment, stands on the east fringe at 500 E. Ocean Blvd. Solidly constructed, it withstood the 1933 earthquake without a crack.

The Palace is not yet agency property, but, like the others, it soon will be, according to James H. Brubaker.

20 Tornadoes Rip Nebraska, Kill at Least 3

By Associated Press

More than 20 tornadoes swept through Nebraska early Saturday night, wrecking scores of farmhouses and killing at least three persons.

The deaths were all reported at Primrose, about 100 miles west of Omaha in central Nebraska, where one townsman said half to three-fourths of the town was destroyed. The village has a population of 129 persons.

National Guardsmen were ordered to the village by Gov. Frank Morrison and police officials began herding survivors into a schoolhouse "to see who is missing." First reports had indicated four persons perished.

ONE family of nine was reported injured but no official injury toll was available immediately.

The Weather Bureau said more than 20 tornadoes were sighted in the state. Other twisters also were seen in Wisconsin, Oklahoma and South Dakota.

Five hours after the first tornadoes struck in southern Nebraska, 18 farms were damaged by another outbreak in the northwestern section of the state.

The Weather Bureau had issued a tornado warning for the central plains and many residents fled to cellars to escape injury.

In Wisconsin, a tornado reportedly damaged seven parked airplanes at Waukesha County Airport. Twisters were sighted near a brewery in nearby Milwaukee but no damage was reported.

OFFICIALS said a tornado also touched down near Pewaukee Lake in Waukesha County. The Weather Bureau said a cold front that passed across the Milwaukee area touched off the series of tornado reports.

In Wyoming, three highways were shut down by police because of heavy snows and blizzards.

Landers, Wyo., reported 11 inches of snow on the ground and Butte, Mont., reported a temperature reading of 12 degrees above zero.

A funny thing happened to the boys from County Fire Engine Company No. 9 while they were out fighting a fire Saturday afternoon in the Firestone area.

Sheriff's Deputies from Firestone Station said the burglar went up the pole to the second floor of the building at 7317 Compton Ave., and went through about 23 lockers.

Rusk Urges Permanent OAS Force

WASHINGTON (AP)—Secretary of State Dean Rusk urged Saturday that the Organization of American States consider setting up a standby military force and political machinery able to deal instantly with any future Western Hemisphere crisis like that in the Dominican Republic.

The Dominican crisis has shown, Rusk said in an exclusive interview with the Associated Press, that the OAS is not now organized to keep pace with the speed of actual events.

HE REPLIED to a series of questions submitted and answered in writing.

His replies developed the U.S. government's view that both the rescue operation, originally announced for U.S. forces, and the political mission of blocking an asserted Communist plan to seize the country, had to be carried out with a speed impossible for the OAS to achieve as it is now set up.

The Dominican rebellion broke out April 24 and President Johnson sent in U.S. Marines on April 28. Additional troop reinforcements have now raised the total number to about 21,800.

JOHNSON declared last Sunday night in discussing Communist involvement in the Dominican rebel movement that the United States would not allow the establishment of another Communist government in this hemisphere.

The United States had not sent troops into a Latin American country in a generation. The last Marines on Latin American soil were withdrawn by President Franklin D. Roosevelt as he developed his "good neighbor policy" in the hemisphere.

Here are some of the questions and answers:

Q: When the decision was being made to send U.S. Marines into the Dominican Republic, was consideration given to the fact that this would break a

U.S.-Backed Rulers Held Unacceptable

SANTO DOMINGO, Dominican Republic (AP) — The rebel regime denounced Saturday as "completely unacceptable" a new civilian-military junta put forward as a rival administration in the strife-torn Dominican Republic.

There was every indication here that the new junta group had been created with U.S. backing.

Even as a rebel spokesman charged that the establishment of the junta violated the cease-fire, another U.S. Marine was killed and three paratroopers were wounded by rebel sniper fire.

The deaths brought the number of U.S. fighting men officially listed as killed here to 13. Seventy-five U.S. soldiers have been wounded.

The United States protested Saturday night to the Inter-American Peace Commission against what it called the "continued violation of the cease-fire" by the rebel forces.

U.S. Ambassador W. Tapley Bennett Jr. filed the complaint with the Organization of American States team in Santo Domingo.

By Defense Department count, U.S. military strength in the Dominican Republic stood at 21,800 men Saturday, a jump of 2,500 in the past four days.

The United States carefully shunned formal recognition of the "new government," U.S. officials told.

LBJ Reiterates National Aims

JASPER, Tex. (AP)—President Johnson said again Saturday that the United States is prepared to defend freedom and at the same time willing to advance peace everywhere.

He made the statement by telephone as he dedicated the $61-million Sam Rayburn Dam and Reservoir in memory of "my teacher and counselor."

"We bear and honor our noble trust," the President said. "Burdens are many but we shall not fail. Where freedom is in danger, it will be defended. Where there is an opportunity to advance peace, America will be represented."

But Johnson talked mainly about water conservation and Rayburn, credited with teaching the President much of his political knowledge.

"I am particularly proud to perpetuate his name," the President said of the late House speaker.

First Lady 'Scolded' by Gardening Expert

WASHINGTON (AP) — A garden expert took Mrs. Lyndon B. Johnson to task Saturday for not getting the weeds cleared out at the presidential guest mansion, Blair House, just across the street from the White House.

Despite the First Lady's beautification program, said Tom Stevenson, Washington Post garden counselor, Blair House "probably has more different kinds of weeds on its front lawn than any other turf area of similar size in Washington."

Admitting the lawn isn't exactly unattractive, since its grass and weeds together are neatly clipped, Stevenson said:

"It could be the green lawn of a genteel and impoverished family," Stevenson said May 7.

The Navy plans to put an ocean-bottom base more than 40 fathoms down off the Southern California coast next summer.

Under construction in San Francisco Naval Shipyard, the 50x12-foot cylindrical steel chamber will be brought to Long Beach Naval Shipyard in July for outfitting.

A giant naval catamaran, used earlier in the Polaris development program, will be brought to Long Beach for outfitting as a surface support vessel at about the same time.

is to be completed by late July and Sea-Lab, designed by the Navy's Mine Defense Laboratory in Florida, will be towed to La Jolla and put into place in early August.

Most audacious test yet of man's ability to live and work in the ocean depths for extended periods, the Office of Naval Research project will employ two, possibly three, teams of Navy divers and civilian scientists.

Composed of 10 men each, the diving teams will occupy the undersea house

L.A.C. Says: War on VD

It is becoming increasingly apparent that the epidemic of venereal disease cannot be fought in silence. It is becoming so prevalent that school systems are issuing booklets and television and community meetings are discussing it openly. It is the only way the disgusting, dangerous, infectious disease can be fought. When it is realized the disease causes insanity, paralysis, blindness, deafness, damage to sex organs and death, it is time for drastic action. An idea of what is happening is best given in the following quotations from the Wall Street Journal:

"In Houston, some 5,000 eighth-graders are tackling a challenging textbook, and it isn't a primer in the new math or Shakespeare. It's a 169-page 'Introduction to Syphilis and Gonorrhea.' In Detroit a new 20-minute Technicolor film is being screened for the city's youngsters. Entitled, 'A Quarter Million Teen-Agers,' it, too, is a frank discussion of venereal disease. The title refers to the estimated number of teenagers who get VD each year.

"In cities around the nation, television and radio audiences recently have heard movie tough-guy Edward G. Robinson say that 45,000 young people from 15 to 24 years of age have been stricken by syphilis and gonorrhea in the U. S. in the past 30 days. 'Physicians and health agencies are working to control local outbreaks,' he says in the taped message sent to broadcasters, 'but President Johnson has called on parents, educators and other responsible citizens to help. Ask your doctor or health department what you can do.'

"The books, films and radio-TV spots are all part of a growing war on VD. For years it has been almost a secret war because doctors, health officials and the public have been reluctant to campaign openly. The major reason: Except in rare cases, the major venereal diseases are spread through sexual contacts. But now public health authorities are throwing off their inhibitions and scoring some successes.

"VD fighters are particularly eager to get their message across to school children because the sharpest climb in the soaring VD rate is among youngsters. Dr. William Brown, chief of the venereal disease branch of the Communicable Disease Center in Atlanta, part of the U. S. Public Health Service, says that 55% of infectious venereal disease is in those under 25 years of age, and the greatest increases are among teen-agers.

"Next year federal officials hope the textbook being tested in Houston will be used by one million school-age children across the nation in a five-hour course. 'We simply recognize that this is a problem that students should know about and avoid,' says John McFarland, superintendent of Houston's school system.

"Dr. Brown of the Communicable Disease Center believes only one in 10 VD cases treated by private physicians is reported. The bulk of statistics comes from public health facilities. He estimates that the actual total of Americans being treated each year for syphilis and gonorrhea is more than one million. He calls the VD surge 'an epidemic'."

It is a frightening disclosure that should cause parents to overcome any reluctance to discuss it with their children, or to have them read the reports by the public health authorities and above all, with their family doctor. It cannot be solved by silence when the horrors of the disease may be the greatest factor in avoiding actions that cause the infection.—L.A.C.

LBJ'S CALL DELIGHTS HIM

HST Turns 81, Lauded for Courage, Integrity

KANSAS CITY (AP)—Words such as courage, integrity and dedication were spilled over Harry S. Truman on his 81st birthday Saturday but what delighted him most was President Johnson's telephoned quip that "you succeeded in vetoing birthdays."

"I don't want to count until I'm 100," said Truman to the President. "And then I'll start all over again."

"It's brought home to me every day, how much this country is in your debt," said President Johnson. "The kind of courage you displayed at this desk, the forthright way you faced up to the great problems of the times, the firm way you alerted this world to danger—all these exhibitions of leadership are the legacy you left to the nation, and I might add, to the Presidents who follow you."

"THAT COMES from an authority," said Truman. "I hope you'll put that in writing."

"I will, as soon as I have a minute," said the President. The birthday luncheon is a given yearly by a close friend of the former President. More than 300 guests, including congressmen, governors, an ambassador and close friends from Kansas were there.

Tom L. Evans, treasurer of the drive, said 20,000 envelopes had arrived but there had not been time to total the amount.

He also said according to the Benny method in figuring ages, Truman is only 49. "Your name will always live in the history of our nation and our people," said Abraham Harman, Ambassador from Israel.

"He showed integrity and showed courage and there never was any doubt where he stood," said James Farley, postmaster-general in the Truman administration.

German Musical Poem to Honor Kennedy Memory

FRANKFURT, Germany (AP)—A musical poem depicting the life of the late President Kennedy will receive its premier playing in Frankfurt today.

The musical work, written by German composer Willy Czernik, will be played by the Philharmonia Hungarica under the direction of Franz Marszalek and heard over West German Radio.

The work, entitled "Heros et Sapiens," describes the milestones in Kennedy's life from birth to death. It is dedicated to Jacqueline Kennedy, the widow of the assassinated President. The composer said he has received a Kennedy.

city urban renewal director and secretary of the Long Beach Redevelopment Agency.

Acquiring it will entail some problems, for it is a modified own-your-own, involving a trust agreement. Deputy City Atty. Clemona Turner and Edward Bennett have cut through most of the entanglements and expect to sign a purchase agreement soon.

Near the opposite end of the area, at 831 W. Seaside Blvd., is the Mariner Apartment and Hotel building. It is an attractive five-story building done in Spanish style and housing 36 apartments and 23 hotel rooms with two garages and two parking lots. The agency owns it and expects to have it vacated by July 1.

In between, along the 25-foot streets and narrower alleys, is a conglomeration of small, timeworn apartment buildings, single-family dwellings and commercial buildings. Their architecture and condition vary greatly, but most are strictly waterfront.

Among the people who live there the variety of attitudes and reactions is equally great. Helen Kunz, 17 years a West Beach resident, manager of the Mariner under the former owner, Francis S. Reider, and still discharging those duties for the Redevelopment Agency.

Diminutive, Boston-born Mrs. Kunz is in command of her emotions but nonetheless nostalgic.

"We used to have people waiting in the lobby for rooms and apartments," she said. "Now the place is less than half occupied. We accepted only nice tenants, some of them coming back every winter or summer. A lot of them were from Canada or Minnesota."

"Among our regular tenants were five members of the Mennonite order, all wearing black, the men with flat hats. They were from Kansas, but they lived here from November to April — all nice people."

Asked how she felt about moving, Mrs. Kunz pointed to her heart.

"I'm sick, right in here," she said. "I have made so many friends."

One of her friends was her employer, Reider, former harbor commissioner and owner of numerous properties. When he sold the building, he gave her a $1,000 terminal bonus and a huge color television set.

He also sent her a warm letter of recommendation. She expects to use it in looking for another job as an apartment-house manager.

Then there is a woman who managed a small apartment building not yet acquired by the city.

One day recently she stormed into the project site office to denounce Van Dyke and Tyra in blistering language.

SHE ACCUSED them of calling the police to molest her tenants. About all the police found, it appeared, was a room where the furniture had been removed and the floor entirely covered with mattresses accommodating 16 persons, not all of one sex.

ON WHAT WAS ONCE a thriving beachfront area, two youngsters walk along deserted run-down section of West Beach which will be cleared and then will come to life as an up-to-date, highly desirable residential area through urban redevelopment.

Even she was not incon-solable.

"What am I worried about?" she remarked before leaving. "I'm moving to the desert."

OTHER tenants have problems in finding suitable living quarters to their specifications — within easy walking distance of downtown and at rentals not much above the $45 to $60 a month they have been paying for three-room apartments.

Redevelopment officials conceded frankly that it is almost impossible to meet those requirements. There are plenty of vacant apartments, but not at those prices. In some cases county welfare workers have helped ease the dilemma.

Small-businessmen also have their problems, men like William Hoffman, a tailor who has catered to seafarers and Long Beach firemen for many years in a small shop in the Mariner. They will be reimbursed for any loss of equipment, but some don't like the idea of moving.

There is also a class of tenants who are scraping along on Social Security or small private income. They are proud and don't want help, except perhaps to be referred to a reliable moving firm.

FOR A WHILE after the agency's property acquisitions gained momentum, officials were worried about a swarm of antique dealers who roamed through the area.

The worry was that, by mistake, they might make off with some old agency-owned furniture. This never happened, so far as the officials know, nor were any spectacular stores of antiques discovered in properties still privately owned.

MRS. HELEN KUNZ Remembers When

MOTORCYCLE clubs were a plague in the neighborhood for a while, but even they have given up and gone away.

Brubaker reported that of the 100 parcels in the project area, the agency has recorded deeds to 35, has signed sales agreements for 13 others and is ready to sign five more. That makes 53% accounted for so far. Parcels that will have to be condemned by court action may not amount to 5% of the total, Brubaker estimated.

A contract for demolishing about 12 buildings will be awarded by the agency next month. Others will follow in rapid order. Attractive buildings and those whose picturesque rests on a certain intangible raffish quality — all will be leveled alike. The agency expects to pay about $5.1 million for the land and buildings. It has the money, the proceeds from a $9.48-million bond issue.

AND WITHIN a few years, if all goes well, the old neighborhood, with its peeling paint and its memories of an earlier Long Beach, will become a site for towering apartment buildings and possibly a high-rise hotel-motel, all built to modern standards.

The $50-million project will be the first of its kind in Long Beach. And the vanishing West Beach free-and-easy community, with its contrasting folkiness and crime, is the last of its kind along the shoreline.

Ask USW Revamp Its Voting

CINCINNATI (UPI) — A top United Steelworkers official, implying President David J. McDonald may have been cheated out of office, Saturday called for a revamping of the million-member union's election machinery.

Howard R. Hague, outgoing USW vice president, said there was "grave doubt" and "suspicion" about the union tellers' official election report and the voting in Chicago, Canada and Puerto Rico.

The USW's three international tellers declared April 30 that Secretary-Treasurer I. W. Abel had defeated McDonald by 10,142 votes.

HAGUE, in a speech at the union's District 25 conference here Saturday, said the tellers' report "does not give the totals district by district and the lack of information on the protests leaves many unanswered questions."

"The tellers' report lists only 35 local unions that were not tabulated for various reasons. There were some 150 protests, yet the report failed completely to explain what happened to the rest of the protests."

Copter Falls; 4 Southland Men Unhurt

ARCADIA (CNS)—A Naval Reserve helicopter crashed and burned in Angeles National Forest Saturday about five miles north of Arcadia, causing a small brush fire.

The chopper was carrying its pilot and three crewmen. They were identified as Lt. Harry M. Badger the pilot, and crewmen R. A. Smalley, of San Diego; N. G. Gallanes, of Seal Beach, and William Rise of Whittier. They were not injured in the crash which demolished the aircraft.

MORE THAN 30 men and five pieces of fire-fighting equipment were rushed to the scene by the U.S. Forest Service and the Los Angeles County Fire Department. Firemen quickly controlled the blaze and restricted it to one acre.

Reports on Deaths by CAB

The Civil Aeronautics Board in Washington Saturday issued reports of two light-plane crashes involving Long Beach-area people.

The CAB said a crash Aug. 23, 1964, near Torrance, resulted in the death of two men as a result of pilot error.

Roger A. Sterling, 48, of Los Angeles, and Lawrence Michael Walsh, 48, of Inglewood, were killed, the board said, in a crash at Palo Verde Boulevard and Calle Major after Sterling failed to maintain flying speed during a steep turn and the plane went into a spin at an altitude too low for recovery. Sterling was demonstrating the plane to Walsh.

A CRASH Nov. 14, 1964, near Warner Springs killed five persons, including two parachutists. The plane, on a flight from Oceanside to Brawley, disappeared and was found two days later in deep mud in Lake Henshaw near Mount Palomar.

Killed were the pilot, Eugene Edward McMahon, 35, of 5442 Rayborn St., Compton; passengers William Gregory Smith, 21, of 5427 Rayborn St., Compton; Marvin Norenberg, 30, of South Gate; Marvin Brock, of Los Angeles, and Max James Gendreau, 30, of Whittier.

The CAB noted the plane was 342 pounds overweight but said the crash was caused by the pilot's attempt to continue flying in adverse weather.

Sailor Drowns in Folsom Lake While on Leave

A 19-year-old sailor from the Long Beach Naval Station drowned Saturday in a lake near his home in Sacramento.

The Sacramento County Coroner's Office said George H. Wilson was swimming with friends in Folsom Lake. Two friends, who were nearby, said Wilson slipped under the water and did not surface. His body was found in 30 feet of water by divers.

Wilson was home on leave visiting his parents.

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Ted Hebert told his wife the reason he was late getting home from work: a four-foot-long iguana.

The iguana — a native of all right and warmly urged the Mexican tropics — wandered in front of Hebert's car Friday on Glendale Boulevard, in a strictly non-tropical section of Los Angeles. It wouldn't move. Hebert caught it in a cardboard box he had in his car.

His wife believed his story, and he quickly got rid of the huge lizard. Griffith Park Zoo agreed to take it. No one knows where the reptile came from.

A newsman asked Hebert, a plumber, if the iguana seemed happy about going to the zoo. Hebert said he had never seen a happy iguana, so he couldn't tell. And he added: "I hope I never see another one."

Newspapermen Specialists in Fast-Expanding Medium

By MARK CLUTTER

Newspapers are better than they used to be — and they are going to be even better in the future, four successful members of the profession told the Long Beach Writers Conference Saturday at the Lafayette Hotel.

"Newspapers are not what they used to be. We can be thankful for that," said Chaffin Wallace, assistant director of the department of education of the Copley Newspapers.

The other three concurred. They were Don Ohl, editorial assistant of The Independent Press-Telegram; Mary Ann Callan, staff writer, Los Angeles Times; and Don Roberge, public relations, Northrop Corp.

"NEWSPAPERS are developing a new style," Wallace said. "What used to be big police stories are now small police stories. Radio and TV have just about eliminated the news bulletins from papers.

"Newspapermen must now learn to write the background. They have more latitude. They can express opinion—and they are men qualified to express opinion."

"Newspapermen must, as the Quakers say, have a concern. They must be deeply concerned about freedom of speech, freedom of the press and the other freedoms."

"Often the men in the newsroom—the editors and reporters—are ahead of their publishers and top editors in realizing what the newspaper of the future must be like."

ALL FOUR speakers agreed that specialization is becoming more and more important. The modern newspaperman needs a good general education — and a great deal of knowledge about some field of news, they said.

Roberge, a former newspaperman, told how competent public relations personnel help newsmen by finding the information, arranging interviews and advising reporters what to look for.

"We don't try to conceal news," he said. "Rather, we try to give the most favorable image of our employer. When a disaster or unfavorable story occurs, the smart public relations man helps the reporter to get the facts. There are two reasons for this. A good reporter will get the facts eventually—and he will keep the story alive while he is getting the facts."

PUBLIC relations men do keep two kinds of news secret: They are favorable stories that are considered premature, and stories about certain properties, such as new inventions, which might aid the competition, Roberge said. Ohl said, "Much of the public thinks it owns a newspaper—and in a way it does. We have the duty of being understood, using language the reader can understand and being logical."

He pointed out that a newspaper has a duty beyond interesting and amusing readers. "A good newspaper has a duty beyond interesting and amusing readers. A good newspaper should also be a daily historical record of the community, and this record need not be always dramatic," Ohl said.

MISS Callan said that the rising level of general education has forced newspapers to improve. "Enlightenment has been forced upon by the demand for more knowledge," she said. "People want to know. Newspapers are becoming more even tempered and are writing more in depth. But with the increasing specialization of news we must always remember that we are human and must talk the language of the human beings who read our papers."

There were three other meetings on the closing day of the annual conference: writing for young people, a luncheon with the theme of humorous writing, and a panel on television and motion picture.

Canadians Expel 2 Russ Envoys as Spies

OTTAWA (AP)—Two Soviet Embassy officials have been expelled in the fifth major case of alleged Russian espionage in Canada in 20 years.

A government statement charged Saturday that A. E. Bytchkov, a commercial attaché at the embassy, and V. N. Poluchkin, a chancery clerk, tried to buy Canadian defense and industrial secrets with thousands of dollars in bribes.

The Russians left Friday after the External Affairs Department had declared them unwelcome in a note to Soviet Ambassador Ivan Shpekedko three days ago.

A DEPARTMENT statement indicated the espionage plot was reported to the Royal Canadian Mounted Police by two "conscientious" Canadians from whom the Russians tried to buy the secrets. They were identified only as a government employee and a naturalized Canadian.

The government statement hinted the United States also may have been a target of the espionage attempt by saying the two Russians hoped to extend their spying to "other countries."

The External Affairs said police pounced on the Russians "before any damage was done to Canadian interests."

ALEXEI Popov, No. 2 man at the embassy, confirmed that Bytchkov and Poluchkin had left Canada but denied the accusations of espionage. The embassy declined to give any information on the two men, even their ages or marital status.

The external affairs statement said: "In one instance a Canadian civil servant was paid thousands of dollars to gather information and documentation in Canada, the purpose of which was to assist in the establishment of espionage activities in Canada and other countries, including the provision of detailed information on the trans-mountain pipeline system in Western Canada."

"IN ANOTHER instance a naturalized Canadian citizen was paid thousands of dollars to provide technical information in the electronics field related to defense industry and to compromise other Canadians, including female employees of the government, with the object of securing their assistance in obtaining access to classified information."

"He (the Canadian) was given specialized photographic training to assist him in these tasks."

LBJ Parley on Farming Is Sought

SALINAS (AP)—Sen. George Murphy, R-Calif., said Saturday he will seek a conference with President Johnson to resolve what he called a farm labor crisis in California.

"If we can get this on the President's desk, we can get this thing straightened out," Murphy told a news conference.

He spoke after viewing 480 acres of strawberries abandoned by Salinas Strawberries, Inc.

Tom McNamara, a partner in the firm, said a total of 1,000 acres in strawberries would rot because field workers were not available for picking the crop. McNamara estimated the loss would total about $5 million.

Newspapermen Specialists in Fast-Expanding Medium

By MARK CLUTTER

Newspapers are better than they used to be — and they are going to be even better in the future, four successful members of the profession told the Long Beach Writers Conference Saturday at the Lafayette Hotel.

"Newspapers are not what they used to be. We can be thankful for that," said Chaffin Wallace, assistant director of the department of education of the Copley Newspapers.

The other three concurred. They were Don Ohi, editorial assistant of The Independent Press-Telegram; Mary Ann Callan, staff writer, Los Angeles Times; and Don Roberge, public relations, Northrop Corp.

"NEWSPAPERS are developing a new style," Wallace said. "What used to be big police stories are now small police stories. Radio and TV have just about eliminated the news bulletins from papers. "Newspapermen must now learn to write the background. They have more latitude. They can express opinion—and they are men qualified to express opinion."

"Newspapermen must, as the Quakers say, have a concern. They must be deeply concerned about freedom of speech, freedom of the press and the other freedoms."

"Often the men in the newsroom—the editors and reporters—are ahead of their publishers and top editors in realizing what the newspaper of the future must be like."

ALL FOUR speakers agreed that specialization is becoming more and more important. The modern newspaperman needs a good general education — and a great deal of knowledge about some field of news, they said.

Roberge, a former newspaperman, told how competent public relations personnel help newsmen by finding the information, arranging interviews and advising reporters what to look for.

"We don't try to conceal news," he said. "Rather, we try to give the most favorable image of our employer. When a disaster or unfavorable story occurs, the smart public relations man helps the reporter to get the facts. There are two reasons for this. A good reporter will get the facts eventually—and he will keep the story alive while he is getting the facts."

PUBLIC relations men do keep two kinds of news secret: They are favorable stories that are considered premature, and stories about certain properties, such as new inventions, which might aid the competition, Roberge said.

Ohi said, "Much of the public thinks it owns a newspaper—and in a way it does. We have the duty of being understood, using language the reader can understand and being logical."

He pointed out that a newspaper has a duty beyond interesting and amusing readers. "A good newspaper has a duty beyond interesting and amusing readers. A good newspaper should also be a daily historical record of the community, and this record need not be always dramatic," Ohi said.

MISS Callan said that the rising level of general education has forced newspapers to improve. "Enlightenment has been forced upon by the demand for more knowledge," she said. "People want to know. Newspapers are becoming more even tempered and are writing more in depth. But with the increasing specialization of news we must always remember that we are human and must talk the language of the human beings who read our papers."

Fate of Costa Mesa Seaman in Viet Remains a Mystery

No word was received Saturday from South Viet Nam regarding the fate of a Costa Mesa merchant mariner who was reported captured by the Viet Cong while he was searching for the fate of his brother.

American sources in Saigon said "nothing can be done without jeopardizing the life" of Donald Dawson, 25, whose wife and mother, Mrs. Marguerite Dawson, live together at 176 Cecil Place, Costa Mesa.

Donald disappeared into the dense Communist jungle about two weeks ago, accompanied by a Vietnamese girl interpreter after receiving word that the body of his brother, Lt. Daniel L. Dawson, 27, had been found.

Daniel had been shot down in a spotter plane Nov. 6 on a reconnaissance mission and has never been heard from. Donald went to Viet Nam in November to search for his missing brother.

Daniel's wife, Arlene, and four children, live in Northern California.

HE VOWED to continue the search until he found his brother—dead or alive.

Three weeks ago, according to dispatches from Viet Nam, Donald received word that the remains of his brother had been found deep in Viet Cong territory. A Roman Catholic priest, identified only as Father Doan, arranged for Donald to meet with the Viet Cong to discuss the return of Daniel's body.

Before he left for the rendezvous, Donald said: "It sounds pretty dangerous and I don't know what to think. But I'm here to get Dan back and I'm not going to leave until I succeed."

THE VIET CONG told Dawson to bring along a Vietnamese interpreter, but otherwise to come alone and unarmed. The priest, who is a friend of Dawson, accompanied Dawson and the interpreter, a 21-year-old Eurasian Vietnamese college student, Collette Embarger, part of the way.

"If we're not back in three or four days," Dawson told friends, "you'll know we're in trouble."

Friday a sister of Miss Embarger sent a message to the Associated Press in Saigon saying:

"Collette and Mr. Dawson sent word back with the priest that they have been arrested by the Viet Cong but are all right so far. What can we do to get them back?"

IN SAIGON, a U.S. Army general said there was nothing the military could do.

"It's a pretty tough business," he said. "Anything the military could do would undoubtedly jeopardize their lives. They're really in the hands of God out there now."

In Costa Mesa, Donald's wife, Jeanne, 27, said Saturday that she "knew something terrible had happened" when she hadn't heard from her husband during the past several weeks.

"The last letter I got he had written a day before Easter," she related. "He wrote that he knew where the plane had crashed and that he knew where Danny was."

"He told me there was a possibility that he could be killed and I've just been waiting, hoping and praying I'd hear from him. He just has to be OK."

Like, Monty Bury Feud for TV Show

LONDON (AP) — Former President Dwight D. Eisenhower and Field Marshal Lord Montgomery, two old soldiers who have not always seen eye to eye, greeted each other warmly Saturday in a live transatlantic television program marking the 20th Anniversary of the end of fighting in Europe.

The exchange, between Eisenhower in New York and Montgomery in London, was effected via the U.S. Early Bird fixed-communications satellite.

MONTGOMERY has more than once criticized Eisenhower's conduct of the closing phases of World War II. But he greeted the former Supreme Allied Commander in Europe with a smile and said: "You are looking well, Ike."

Eisenhower replied, saying he remembered Montgomery "with a great deal of pleasure." He added that he hoped they would not reminisce too much as two old generals.

The hour-long program began with a shot of Royal Air Force Lightning fighters flying over London. This was followed by live shots of the rebuilt monastery at Monte Cassino in Italy.

Montgomery at one point asked Eisenhower: "You were not only a great military leader but a great political leader. Can you tell me where we are going? Can you give me any hope where we will finish up?"

EISENHOWER replied: "Thank you for the compliment, but I'm no seer. We are in a turbulent world. We do not have peace. In a few spots the guns are still going off. We have not yet been able to redeem those promises we made. We are still striving."

Televised here by the British Broadcasting Corp. and in America by Columbia Broadcasting System, the program included Eisenhower's warning that a nuclear war "would be just Armageddon."

"I must say this," he continued, "if man's intelligence has not yet gotten to the point where he can control and keep from their ultimate use these great weapons that his great capabilities have

HELD IN HARBOR HERE

Indonesian Vessel Seized, Lawyer Lashes State Dept.

Controversial attorney Melvin Belli said Saturday an Indonesian freighter was seized in Long Beach harbor because the U.S. State Department was "impotent" to assist his client.

In response to a $1.5-million lawsuit, filed by Belli for a Hawaiian firm in U.S. District Court in Los Angeles, federal marshals seized the craft and its cargo Friday.

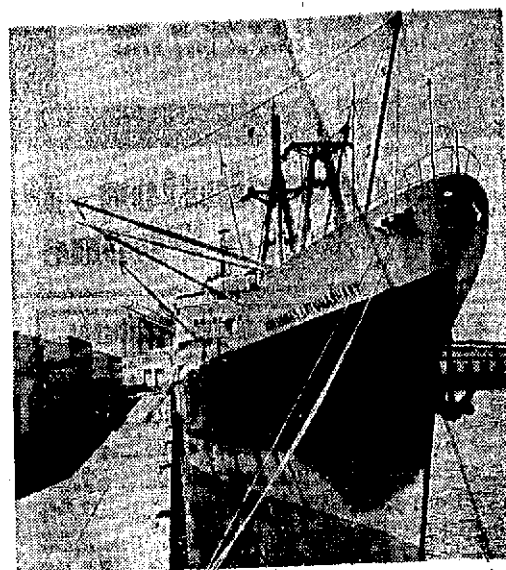

THE Johannes Latuharhary, registered to Djakarta Lloyd Lines, an Indonesian firm, is being held in the international suit brought by American Hawaiian Ventures, Inc., a subsidiary of the Wong Investment Co. of Honolulu.

The 505-foot, 8,666-ton vessel carries a cargo of rubber, coffee and art objects.

Belli said the Hawaiian firm has been seeking reparation since 1959 when the Indonesian government took over its rubber plantations there. He said Djakarta Lloyd Lines was named as a defendant.

NOTICES posted on the Johannes Latuharhary indicated parties to the suit may file objections in court June 1. Belli said the vessel could be auctioned to settle the claim unless a bond covering the suit is posted.

for the Indonesian firm, refused to discuss details of the seizure Saturday. The ship is docked at Pier A, Berth 5.

"The U.S. State Department proved utterly impotent," Belli said, in earlier attempts of his client to get assistance from the government.

CUSTOMS officials said Saturday they had boarded the craft routinely when it entered Long Beach Harbor Thursday.

Belli was the defense attorney for Jack Ruby, convicted slayer of Lee Oswald, accused assassin of President Kennedy. He also is the lawyer who won acquittal last week for the San Francisco North Beach night spots targeted in the recent "bare-bosom" prosecutions.

Three Wanted for California Banditry Jailed

TEMPE, Ariz. (AP) — Three federal fugitives, wanted for questioning in 15 to 20 California robberies which netted $125,000, were arrested Saturday in Tempe.

Arizona FBI Chief William B. Soyars, identified the three as Billy Ross Rhodes, 34, Billy Roland Edwards, 28, and Shirley Ann Hembree, 21, of Chandler, Ariz. The hometowns of Rhodes and Edwards were not available.

Soyars said they are wanted in connection with robberies in several California cities since Jan. 1.

produced, then the human race is really getting to be a very sorry thing."

Police Pinch, Book Brassy Old-Timer

Officers were caught in a "squeeze play" as they prepared for National Police Week which starts today.

The problem developed while they were attempting to haul an old-timer into headquarters.

The oldster proved too stubborn and refused to enter. Finally, a little ingenuity payed off and the recalcitrant subject was lodged safely inside.

CAUSE OF the trouble was a 1914 Model T paddy wagon which will be one of the main attractions of a historic display in the lobby of the Public Safety Building, 400 W. Broadway. The old wagon wouldn't fit through the door.

Helping book the old-timer in for the celebration was Patrol Capt. Elmer R. Anderson who joined the Long Beach Police Department in 1923, just nine years after the paddy wagon went into service.

Capt. Anderson and his crew finally solved their "squeeze play" by removing the front wheels and backing the auto through the door.

The old-time paddy wagon is one of many exhibits on public display in the police building lobby.

A COLLECTION of photographs showing the development of the department from 1904 to the present. Among the historic pictures are photos of the first Long Beach marshal, the old Mounted Patrol, the Shotgun Squad and one of the first patrol cars, used in 1913. A prize collection of firearms also is on display along with the police department's famous collection of badges from throughout the United States and many foreign countries.

Girl, 14, Helps Catch L.B. Bandit Suspect

A 14-year-old Long Beach girl helped police catch a robbery suspect Saturday.

Jailed in connection with the holdup at Scotty's Market, 3386 Magnolia Ave., was Robert E. Decker, 24, of 1473 Chestnut Ave.

Decker's two companions, Grover M. Zachary, 26, of 1493 Dawson Ave., and Anthony L. Escareno, 23, of 1437 Steeple Ave., were arrested on suspicion of robbery.

POLICE said a bandit entered the market about 1:45 p.m. and told manager Robert A. Latham, "Open the register and give me the money." He emphasized his demand by acting as though he had a gun in his pocket, then added, "I mean business." The manager said he gave the bandit $181.

Martin L. Boyd, 17, a box boy, followed the man out of the market and around the corner.

Boyd said he retreated when the bandit turned on him and threatened to shoot. Seconds later Christine Cardwell, 14, saw the suspected bandit dash to a parked auto in which two other men were sitting. She got the license number and a description of the car.

OFFICER J. V. Holbert, patrolling near the market, received a radio broadcast about the robbery. He noted the getaway car license number on a pad, then looked up and saw the car in front of him. Holbert stopped the auto at Linden Avenue and 23rd Street and held the three occupants at shotgun-point until Officer R. G. Smith arrived.

Detectives said Decker admitted the holdup and said his two friends were not involved.

Dominican Delegate to OAS Stays

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Organization of American States Saturday night defeated a move by five countries to have the Dominican Republic seat in the organization declared vacant.

By its action, the OAS allowed the present ambassador, Jose Antonio Bonilla Atilas, to continue as the Dominican delegate. Chile, Ecuador, Mexico, Peru, Venezuela, and Uruguay were the only countries which voted in favor of having the credentials of Bonilla Atilas reconsidered.

THE OTHER 14 countries in the OAS abstained. A total of 11 votes were needed to adopt the move for reconsideration.

The credentials committee had recommended that the Dominican seat be declared vacant in view of the "civil war" going on in that country and that delegates from both sides be accredited as observers in the OAS meetings.

The ambassadors of El Salvador, Chile and Ecuador made up the committee.

WHEN A heated discussion resulted over the jurisdiction of the committee in such a question, the chairman of the meeting, Guillermo Sevilla-Sacasa of Nicaragua, forced a procedure vote which killed the committee's plan.

Domingo Rebels Reject New Junta

newsmen in Washington it would be premature for the United States to recognize a Dominican regime when the OAS already has begun work on the political problem.

OBSERVERS in Santo Domingo believe, however, that the five-man junta was organized largely through the efforts of John Bartlow Martin, former U.S. Ambassador to the Dominican Republic. Martin maintains he came here as a private citizen to help in the peace-making.

He has been in frequent conference with the rebel regime of Col. Francisco Caamano Deno and with Gen. Antonio (Tony) Imbert Barrera, named as president of the new junta created Friday night.

In New York, Latin American diplomats disclosed that Caamano's regime had sent an envoy to claim the post of the Dominican Republic's permanent representative to the United Nations.

The diplomats said Ruben Brache arrived Thursday and that same day Secretary-General U Thant received a cable from Caamano naming Brache to the position.

Ambassador Guaroa Valquez, who was sent to New York by the now deposed government of Donald Reid Cabral, remained listed as the Dominican Ambassador in London.

A Foreign Office spokesman said Britain has received a cable from the Caamano group requesting diplomatic recognition. The spokesman said the request automatically would be taken "under consideration."

INFORMED London sources said that any prompt British recognition of one of the Dominican factions is unlikely.

The Secretary-General of the OAS, Jose A. Mora, met with Caamano in Santo Domingo Saturday afternoon and then told newsmen the cease-fire "will be imposed" on both sides if necessary. But he did not say how.

The OAS so far has not received assurance from the rebels that the cease-fire will be honored with the new junta, Mora added.

Hector Aristy, minister to the president in the rebel regime, was asked by reporters if he considered the cease-fire, signed Wednesday by the insurgents and a military junta, was broken as a result of establishment of the military-civilian junta.

"We consider this so," Aristy replied, "but before we come to a decision and actually say that it is broken, we are going to meet with the Organization of American States."

Goldwater Applauds LBJ Action

NEW YORK (AP) — President Johnson's prompt action in sending U.S. Marines into the Dominican Republic was "just as right as the day is long," Barry Goldwater said Saturday.

"We cannot risk another Communist takeover in this hemisphere," the man Johnson beat for the presidency said in an interview. Goldwater stopped in New York en route to his home in Phoenix, Ariz., after a European vacation with his wife, Peggy.

"THE President is doing the right thing in Viet Nam, too," Goldwater added. "But if I had advocated all this during the campaign, I would have been hanged by the thumbs. I was a 'trigger-happy warmonger' for speaking out for a lot of what we're doing today."

"Now let's do something about Cuba."

As for politics, the former Arizona senator had some criticism for the Republican Party.

"The function of a minority party is opposition," he said. "We need this in this country."

"Nobody wants the civil rights of anyone denied. We passed two laws on this while I was in the Senate. They were good laws; they just weren't used."

Fate of Costa Mesa Seaman in Viet Remains a Mystery

No word was received Saturday from South Viet Nam regarding the fate of a Costa Mesa merchant mariner who was reported captured by the Viet Cong while he was searching for the fate of his brother.

American sources in Saigon said "nothing can be done without jeopardizing the life" of Donald Dawson, 25, whose wife and mother, Mrs. Marguerite Dawson, live together at 176 Cecil Place, Costa Mesa.

Donald disappeared into the dense Communist jungle about two weeks ago, accompanied by a Vietnamese girl interpreter after receiving word that the body of his brother, Lt. Daniel L. Dawson, 27, had been found.

Daniel had been shot down in a spotter plane Nov. 6 on a reconnaissance mission and has never been heard from. Donald went to Viet Nam in November to search for his missing brother.

Daniel's wife, Arlene, and four children, live in North California.

HE VOWED to continue the search until he found his brother—dead or alive.

Three weeks ago, according to dispatches from Viet Nam, Donald received word that the remains of his brother had been found deep in Viet Cong territory. A Roman Catholic priest, identified only as Father Doan, arranged for Donald to meet with the Viet Cong to discuss the return of Daniel's body.

Before he left for the rendezvous, Donald said: "It sounds pretty dangerous and I don't know what to think. But I'm here to get Dan back and I'm not going to leave until I succeed."

THE VIET CONG told Dawson to bring along a Vietnamese interpreter, but otherwise to come alone and unarmed. The priest, who is a friend of Dawson's, accompanied Dawson and the interpreter, a 21-year-old Eurasian Vietnamese college student, Collette Embarger, part of the way.

"If we're not back in three or four days," Dawson told friends, "you'll know we're in trouble."

Friday a sister of Miss Embarger sent a message to the Associated Press in Saigon saying:

"Collette and Mr. Dawson sent word back with the priest that they have been arrested by the Viet Cong but are all right so far. What can we do to get them back?"

IN SAIGON, a U.S. Army general said there was nothing the military could do.

"It's a pretty tough business," he said. "Anything the military could do would undoubtedly jeopardize their lives. They're really in the hands of God out there now."

In Costa Mesa, Donald's wife, Jeanne, 27, said Saturday that she "knew something terrible had happened," when she hadn't heard from her husband during the past several weeks.

"The last letter I got he had written a day before Easter," she related. "He wrote that he knew where the plane had crashed and that he knew where Danny was."

"He told me there was a possibility that he could be killed and I've just been waiting, hoping and praying I'd hear from him. He just has to be OK."

Like, Monty Bury Feud for TV Show

LONDON (AP) — Former President Dwight D. Eisenhower and Field Marshal Lord Montgomery, two old soldiers who have not always seen eye to eye, greeted each other warmly Saturday in a live transatlantic television program marking the 20th Anniversary of the end of fighting in Europe.

The exchange, between Eisenhower in New York and Montgomery in London, was effected via the U.S. Early Bird fixed-communications satellite.

MONTGOMERY has more than once criticized Eisenhower's conduct of the closing phases of World War II. But he greeted the former Supreme Allied Commander in Europe with a smile and said: "You are looking well, Ike."

Eisenhower replied, saying he remembered Montgomery "with a great deal of pleasure." He added that he hoped they would not reminisce too much as two old generals.

The hour-long program began with a shot of Royal Air Force Lightning fighters flying over London. This was followed by live shots of the rebuilt monastery at Monte Cassino in Italy.

Montgomery at one point asked Eisenhower: "You were not only a great military leader but a great political leader. Can you tell me where we are going? Can you give me any hope where we will finish up?"

EISENHOWER replied: "Thank you for the compliment, but I'm no seer. We are in a turbulent world. We do not have peace. In a few spots the guns are still going off. We have not yet been able to redeem those promises we made. We are still striving."

Televised here by the British Broadcasting Corp. and in America by Columbia Broadcasting System, the program included Eisenhower's warning that a nuclear war "would be just Armageddon."

"I must say this," he continued, "if man's intelligence has not yet gotten to the point where he can control and keep from their ultimate use these great weapons that his great capabilities have very sorry thing."

HELD IN HARBOR HERE

Indonesian Vessel Seized, Lawyer Lashes State Dept.

Controversial attorney Melvin Belli said Saturday an Indonesian freighter was seized in Long Beach harbor because the U.S. State Department was "impotent" to assist his client.

In response to a $1.5-million lawsuit filed by Belli for a Hawaiian firm in U.S. District Court in Los Angeles, federal marshals seized the craft and its cargo Friday.

THE Johannes Latuharhary, registered to Djakarta Lloyd Lines, an Indonesian firm, is being held in the international suit brought by American Hawaiian Ventures, Inc., a subsidiary of the Wong Investment Co. of Honolulu.

The 503-foot, 6,866-ton vessel carries a cargo of rubber, coffee and art objects.

Belli said the Hawaiian firm has been seeking reparation since 1959 when the Indonesian government took over its rubber plantations there. He said Djakarta Lloyd Lines was named as a defendant.

NOTICES posted on the Johannes Latuharhary indicated parties to the suit may file objections in court June 1, Belli said the vessel can be auctioned to settle the claim unless a bond covering the suit is posted.

Soyars said they are wanted in connection with robberies in several California cities since Jan. 1.

Officers were caught in a "squeeze play" as they prepared for National Police Week which starts today. The problem developed while they were attempting to haul an old-timer into headquarters. The older proved too stubborn and refused to enter. Finally, a little ingenuity payed off and the recalcitrant subject was lodged safely inside.

CAUSE OF the trouble was a 1914 Model T paddy wagon which will be one of the main attractions of a historic display in the lobby of the Public Safety Building, 400 W. Broadway. The old wagon wouldn't fit through the door.

Helping book the old-timer in for the celebration was Patrol Capt. Elmer R. Anderson who joined the Long Beach Police Department in 1923, just nine years after the paddy wagon went into service.

Capt. Anderson and his crew finally solved their "squeeze play" by removing the front wheels and backing the auto through the door.

The old-time paddy wagon is one of many exhibits on public display in the police building lobby.

WORLD NEWS BRIEFS

Heaviest Raids
Hit N. Viet Nam

SAIGON (UPI)—U.S. warplanes flew 278 sorties against Communist North Viet Nam Saturday, heavily damaging a vital air base, radar station and military barracks in the heaviest bombing of the war.

The aircraft dropped about 160 tons of bombs and Bullpup missiles on the Vinh airfield, 157 miles south of Hanoi, and returning pilots said the airbase was "70% destroyed."

Two U.S. Navy F8 Crusader jets were shot down in the morning and afternoon strikes at the Red air base. One of the pilots was listed officially as missing in North Viet Nam. The second parachuted into the South China Sea and was picked up shortly afterward by an amphibious rescue plane. He was reported in excellent condition.

A military spokesman said 200 American planes hit military targets in North Viet Nam in the morning. In the afternoon, 70 planes from the carriers Coral Sea and Midway returned to Vinh to drop 60 more tons of bombs on the air base—already hit by 100 tons in the morning.

Body Identified as Delgado

MADRID (AP)—The Spanish Ministry of Justice Saturday identified one of the bodies found buried in rude graves on Spanish soil two weeks ago as that of Humberto Delgado.

A communique from the Justice Ministry said the identity of the former Portuguese opposition leader had been established by an investigating judge in Badajoz.

The body of Delgado was found in Villafraña del Fresno, two miles from the Portuguese frontier, on April 24. The announcement put an official end to the colorful career of the 59-year-old former Portuguese general who had been missing since mid-February.

His body was found in a rocky grave by two villagers. Though everyone thought the body was that of Delgado, the Spanish government kept silent, awaiting an investigation conducted by Judge Jose Maria Crespo of Badajoz.

The body was decomposed and mutilated. The skull appeared fractured.

Allies Protest East Berlin Parade

BERLIN (AP)—East German and Soviet troops staged a mammoth parade Saturday in East Berlin commemorating the 20th anniversary of Hitler's defeat, bringing a protest from the Western Allies.

In identical letters, the U.S., French and British ambassadors to West Germany told the Soviet envoy in East Berlin the Soviet Union violated the status of Berlin by letting the East Germans parade.

The parade of 5,000 troops included Russian missiles. The letters said, "The Soviet missile displays themselves contributed to the creation of unnatural tension in the city."

MOSCOW (UPI)—Communist Chief Leonid Brezhnev said Saturday Russia will increase its military help to North Viet Nam "if necessary" to defend it against American attack.

Brezhnev, addressing a VE-Day rally in the Kremlin, also paid tribute to Stalin's wartime record. It was the first time in many years that a Soviet leader had mentioned Stalin's name in a favorable context in public.

Another prominent wartime leader who later was disgraced, Marshal Georgi Zhukov, was in the audience, and was singled out for praise.

PARIS (UPI)—Three thousand French troops, many of whom had not been born when World War II ended, marched down the Champs Elysees to celebrate the 20th anniversary of victory in Europe. A throng of 100,000 Parisians and tourists watched the parade.

The big Paris parade touched off a day of celebration featured by dancing in the streets and a mammoth display of fireworks.

Anti-Indian Kashmir Mobs Riot

NEW DELHI (UPI)—Anti-Indian mobs rioted in Kashmir Saturday against the arrest of the territory's former premier, Sheikh Abdullah, the "lion of Kashmir." Four persons were killed and 55 arrested.

Indian officials here said the sheikh, a leader of Kashmir's predominantly Moslem population, was taken into custody because he had been "hobnobbing with Pakistan and China against India" during his just-completed trip abroad.

The sheikh was released from prison several months ago and immediately resumed the opposition to Indian rule in Kashmir for which he had been jailed. His meeting with ABDULLAH Communist Chinese Premier Chou En-lai was called "extremely objectionable" last month by Foreign Minister Swaran Singh.

Gradual Cuts in Excise Taxes Seen

HOT SPRINGS, Va. (AP)—Administration officials disclosed Saturday that Congress may be asked to eliminate some $5 billion of excise taxes in a series of repeals and reductions over the next several years.

Plans under study would include the 10% tax on new automobiles and telephone service in the mid-year legislation, but provide for only small annual cuts—perhaps one or two percentage points annually for the next five or 10 years.

COL. RUDOLPH ABEL

Russian Spy Retired,
Is Now Quiet Painter

MOSCOW (AP)—Col. Rudolph Abel, the Soviet spy who came in from the cold, is living quietly in a Moscow apartment where he paints as a hobby, the weekly newspaper Nedyelya (Week) reported Saturday.

A biographical sketch, written by Security Forces General Major V. Drozdov said the 62-year-old Abel began his spy career in 1927 "without any enthusiasm at all."

"He was more attracted by radio technology and dreamed of scientific activity," he said.

ABEL was arrested in New York in 1957 and released from prison in 1962 in exchange for captured U2 pilot Francis Gary Powers.

The Soviets did not admit he worked for them until last Tuesday when Drozdov discussed his work in a television interview.

Drozdov said Abel was born in 1903 in a city in the Volga River region. His father was described as a "worker-revolutionary."

Abel's family moved to Moscow where Abel worked in his youth as a radio engineer in various Moscow plants. He became fluent in French, English and German by associating in school with children of foreign political exiles living in Moscow.

His linguistic talents led to his assignment by the Young Communist League to the Security Service, Drozdov continued.

THE GENERAL indicated that Abel worked in Germany before the war gathering industrial and military intelligence.

During the war, the account continued, Abel was one of the Soviet agents who infiltrated the Nazi Intelligence Service. Afterwards Drozdov said Abel proposed that he be sent West to keep watch on Nazi war criminals who might be plotting against the Soviet Union.

Abel worked several years in the United States and was described at his trial in New York as a key figure in the Soviet espionage network in America.

Heaviest Raids Hit N. Viet Nam

SAIGON (UPI)—U.S. warplanes flew 278 sorties against Communist North Viet Nam Saturday, heavily damaging a vital air base, radar station and military barracks in the heaviest bombing of the war.

The aircraft dropped about 160 tons of bombs and Bullpup missiles on the Vinh airfield, 157 miles south of Hanoi, and returning pilots said the airbase was "70% destroyed."

Two U.S. Navy F8 Crusader jets were shot down in the morning and afternoon strikes at the Red air base. One of the pilots was listed officially as missing in North Viet Nam. The second parachuted into the South China Sea and was picked up shortly afterward by an amphibious rescue plane. He was reported in excellent condition.

A military spokesman said 200 American planes hit military targets in North Viet Nam in the morning. In the afternoon, 70 planes from the carriers Coral Sea and Midway returned to Vinh to drop 60 more tons of bombs on the air base—already hit by 100 tons in the morning.

Body Identified as Delgado

MADRID (AP)—The Spanish Ministry of Justice Saturday identified one of the bodies found buried in rude graves on Spanish soil two weeks ago as that of Humberto Delgado.

A communique from the Justice Ministry said the identity of the former Portuguese opposition leader had been established by an investigating judge in Badajoz.

The body of Delgado was found in Villafraanca del Fresno, two miles from the Portuguese frontier, on April 24. The announcement put an official end to the colorful career of the 59-year-old former Portuguese general who had been missing since mid-February.

His body was found in a rocky grave by two villagers. Though everyone thought the body was that of Delgado, the Spanish government kept silent, awaiting an investigation conducted by Judge Jose Maria Crespo of Badajoz.

The body was decomposed and mutilated. The skull appeared fractured.

Allies Protest East Berlin Parade

BERLIN (AP)—East German and Soviet troops staged a mammoth parade Saturday in East Berlin commemorating the 20th anniversary of Hitler's defeat, bringing a protest from the Western Allies.

In identical letters, the U.S., French and British ambassadors to West Germany told the Soviet envoy in East Berlin the Soviet Union violated the status of Berlin by letting the East Germans parade.

The parade of 5,000 troops included Russian missiles. The letters said, "The Soviet missile displays themselves contributed to the creation of unnatural tension in the city."

MOSCOW (UPI)—Communist Chief Leonid Brezhnev said Saturday Russia will increase its military help to North Viet Nam "if necessary" to defend it against American attack.

Brezhnev, addressing a VE-Day rally in the Kremlin, also paid tribute to Stalin's wartime record. It was the first time in many years that a Soviet leader had mentioned Stalin's name in a favorable context in public.

Another prominent wartime leader who later was disgraced, Marshal Georgi Zhukov, was in the audience, and was singled out for praise.

PARIS (UPI)—Three thousand French troops, many of whom had not been born when World War II ended, marched down the Champs Elysees to celebrate the 20th anniversary of victory in Europe. A throng of 100,000 Parisians and tourists watched the parade.

The big Paris parade touched off a day of celebration featured by dancing in the streets and a mammoth display of fireworks.

Anti-Indian Kashmir Mobs Riot

NEW DELHI (UPI)—Anti-Indian mobs rioted in Kashmir Saturday against the arrest of the territory's former premier, Sheikh Abdullah, the "lion of Kashmir." Four persons were killed and 55 arrested.

Indian officials here said the sheikh, a leader of Kashmir's predominantly Moslem population, was taken into custody because he had been "harrassing with Pakistan and China against India" during his just-completed trip abroad.

The sheikh was released from prison several months ago and immediately resumed the opposition to Indian rule in Kashmir for which he had been jailed. His meeting with

ABDULLAH Communist Chinese Premier Chou En-lai was called "extremely objectionable" last month by Foreign Minister Swaran Singh.

Gradual Cuts in Excise Taxes Seen

HOT SPRINGS, Va. (AP)—Administration officials disclosed Saturday that Congress may be asked to eliminate some $5 billion of excise taxes in a series of repeals and reductions over the next several years.

Plans under study would include the 10% tax on new automobiles and telephone service in the mid-year legislation, but provide for only small annual cuts—perhaps one or two percentage points annually for the next five or 10 years.

AQUANAUTS CALL IT HOME

Forerunner of Sea-Lab II, the Navy's Sea-Lab I (above) was an undersea house for four Navy divers who lived and worked for 11 days at 193 feet off Bermuda last summer. Sea-Lab II, 10 feet longer than Sea-Lab I, will go to 250 feet off La Jolla next August.

Sea-Lab Teams to Live at 100-Pound Pressure

for periods of 15 to 30 days.

The aquanauts will breathe a mixture of gases which will include helium, oxygen and nitrogen, with helium as the major component.

Pressure inside the open-bottom chamber will be 100 pounds per square inch. That is more than six times atmospheric pressure.

Relative humidity will be 60% and mean temperature 80 degrees F.

The entire project will be monitored constantly by surface television and some periods of the test may be fed into a national TV network.

Naval scientists plan to install a helium-speech converter which will make intelligible the "Donald Duck" speech caused by breathing helium.

Sea-Lab, more sophisticated descendant of Sea-Lab I, an undersea house in which four Navy divers lived and worked for 11 days at 193 feet off Bermuda last summer, will be provisioned to provide the divers with food, water and breathing gas for at least six weeks.

Hot freshwater showers will be available inside Sea-Lab to enable divers returning from the 50-degree sub-surface waters to regain normal body temperatures.

The aquanauts will use SCUBA (self-contained underwater breathing apparatus), and Hookah, a closed-circuit pumping system which will extend from the habitat.

Team members began four months of intensive training in Florida for the experiment in March.

The surface support craft will carry a double-lock decompression chamber.

In case of an accident or emergency evacuation of the undersea house, the team members will be brought to the surface in pressurized chambers.

A diving bell and sub-surface decompression chambers also will be used.

Using SCUBA, the divers will make regular forays out of the undersea house and will descend as much as 165 feet on the sides of the 1,000-foot-deep canyon.

Exploration of the canyon is one of the "work-ability" tests of the project.

Besides determining man's capabilities in deep submergence, the Navy also hopes to extend the frontiers of diving-physiology knowledge, especially in regard to use of breathing gas mixtures.

Larger than Sea-Lab I, the interior of the undersea house will be partitioned into living and working areas.

Sea-Lab II will stand off the bottom tubular steel legs six feet long.

Ingress and egress from the structure will be through open manholes in the bottom. These entrance holes will have no covers or locks because pressure inside the interior of the chamber will be equal to the seawater outside.

The men will be given regular medical examinations.

In previous submergence tests it was noted the divers became drowsy, tired easily and displayed "some lack of willingness to do physical work."

Among the earlier experiments was a series of tests to determine the effects of certain sounds and lights on shark behavior.

LBJ Wins Unity in Viet-Dominican 'War-Fund' Vote

By SAM FOGG

By United Press International

President Johnson won important backing last week for his tough task in the Viet Nam and Dominican crises. He asked and got a swift $700 million vote of confidence from Congress on Viet Nam.

And in the turbulent Dominican situation, the Organization of American States (OAS) voted to create a hemispheric police force to share with American troops the tense job of restoring order to the rebellion-torn Caribbean country.

Johnson deliberately requested the House and Senate endorsement of the emergency $700 million appropriation bill to underwrite expanding U.S. military operations in Viet Nam. He openly acknowledged that he could have obtained the money from funds already voted by Congress.

But Tuesday, he invited key legislators to the White House to announce the request which he said would demonstrate without question U.S. unity on the forceful measures he has ordered in the fighting against the Reds.

Johnson asked for an "overwhelming vote" and he got it. The House approved the money request by a vote of 408 to 7 one day later. Thursday, the Senate passed the measure 88-3 and sped it to the White House.

In signing the bill Friday morning, Johnson declared the rapid-fire congressional response clearly meant: "Until the aggressors have indicated their willingness to talk, we intend to press on."

He firmly cautioned the Communist world not to confuse the administration's readiness to talk peace with cowardice.

AND EVEN BEFORE he signed the legislation, an American task force of 6,000 Marines and Seabees landed on a South Viet Nam beach to build a new air base for attacks against the Communists in North Viet Nam.

Throughout the week, Johnson had his hands full in dealing with the rebellion-born terror in the Dominican Republic and the threat of a Communist coup in the chaos there.

The President and his top advisers found evidence that the Reds were in position to take command of the revolt and to take over the long-troubled island country.

On this belief, Johnson responded vigorously, sending in additional U.S. Marines and paratroopers to the capital city of Santo Domingo. By week's end, there was a military force of 19,000 Americans on the scene.

And there were American deaths as well. By Friday, the fatalities among the U.S. troops numbered 13 as even a cease-fire signed by the rebels failed to halt sniper gunfire in Santo Domingo.

NONETHELESS, the cease-fire had been signed and even more important, the OAS voted 14-5 Thursday for a U.S. resolution that the other Latin American member nations should contribute forces to deal with the Dominican strife.

U.S. officials were gratified by the diplomatic victory, even through admitting that the American forces might be in for a long stay in the Dominican Republic. Further, they noted, that the recruitment of a police force from the OAS countries might provide the organization with a precedent that would help snuff out incipient Communist uprisings in the hemisphere in the future.

But there was a jarring, intrusive note from Paris when French President Charles de Gaulle condemned what he called U.S. intervention in the Dominican Republic and announced that France was considering diplomatic recognition of the rebel government.

It was a further sign of rift between the two strong free world leaders—De Gaulle and Johnson.

THE LATTER INDIRECTLY took issue with De Gaulle Friday when he made a live television speech to the United States and Europe via the Early Bird communications satellite to mark the 20th anniversary of V-E Day that ended World War II in Europe.

He did not mention De Gaulle directly but in predicting a close-knit Atlantic community of the future, Johnson said: "How much grander is that dream than any hope to which a single nation can reach. How much more filled with the prospect of peace and the increasing welfare of man."

In the rustic county seat of Hayneville, Ala., the Ku Klux Klan had its day in court.

Collie Leroy Wilkins Jr., became the first of three accused KKK members to go on trial for murder in the death of Mrs. Viola Liuzzo, a Detroit housewife, in an aftermath of last month's Selma voting rights march.

WILKINS WAS ACCUSED by an FBI informant, Gary Thomas Rowe Jr., of having fired shots at Mrs. Liuzzo on a country highway while she was driving a Negro participant of the march to his home.

Matt H. Murphy Jr., self-proclaimed counsel of the Klan, was Wilkins' defense attorney. Without placing his client on the witness stand, Murphy closed his defense with a fiery appeal to the jury, denouncing Rowe as a perjurer and "worse than a white nigger."

An all-white jury of 12 men spent two days deliberating and could not agree on a verdict. Circuit Court Judge T. Werth Thagard declared a mistrial.

Meanwhile the Senate spent another week in debate on the far-reaching voting rights bills prompted by the Selma racial violence.

The bipartisan leadership backing the bill won an initial victory when an amendment by Sen. Sam Ervin, D-N. C., which would have hamstrung the triggering device of the proposed federal registration machinery, was defeated 64-25.

HOWEVER, THE PACE of the debate was leisurely. The next significant vote was slated for next Tuesday when a liberal-backed amendment to ban state and local poll taxes comes up for decision.

Another administration—that of British Prime Minister Harold Wilson—won a narrow victory in Parliament last week.

The House of Commons approved by a razor-thin margin of 310-306 a Labor-backed white paper suggesting that 90% of Britain's steel industry be placed under public ownership.

And in Ohio, Dr. Sam Sheppard, convicted for the murder of his wife in a sensational 1955 trial, was ordered to return to the state penitentiary to resume serving a life sentence.

FOREIGN PRESS VIEWS

U.S. Action Gets Small Support

By United Press International

The Dominican civil war replaced Viet Nam last week as the focus of European editorial writers.

There was meagre support for the U.S. action in sending Marines into the rebellion-torn republic.

One favorable view came from the GAZET VAN SANTWERPEN in Belgium:

"We do not believe that the Americans intervened only on basis of considerable rumors, and the universal Communist reaction is too violent to come only from motives of principle... the facts that Washington is willing to let the O.A.S. (Organization of American States) take over the task which it has assumed voluntarily, and supports the plan to form an O.A.S. army to maintain order, shows that the Americans do not aim at 'imperialistic aggression.'"

"Equally clearly, the Communist indignation about the O.A.S.-plan is an indication of what is happening in the Dominican Republic. We feel it is better for that country, for the western hemisphere and for the whole free world, that an American intervention is added to the list, than that the list of Communist dictatorships be made no longer."

Another was the VOLKS-BLATT in Vienna: "By his quick action, Johnson naturally provoked charges of intervention, but these weigh less heavily for Washington than the danger of a second Communist base in Central America... the... American soldiers in Santo Domingo demonstrate to the world—and especially to Moscow and Peking—that the United States is not willing to yield to pressure, but that it can make tough decisions in case of emergency. Curiosity about the U.S. reaction may have been one of the reasons for Moscow to kindle the fire in Santo Domingo."

The GUARDIAN in London commented on what it called "The Johnson doctrine."

"It was possible to argue, until President Johnson made his speech late on Sunday night, that the United States intervention in the Dominican Republic was merely foolish. By interfering with the long-established Latin-American tradition of non-intervention—even for a humanitarian purpose—the United States government seemed to be laying up trouble for itself in the future. But the presence of close-on 20,000 troops in the republic, and the president's speech in which he revealed that their purpose was to crush an incipient Communist revolt, invites comparison with the intervention by the Russians in Budapest in 1956."

The independent DIARIO DE NOTICIAS in Lisbon, Portugal, said the American action was hypocritical in that the United States would tolerate no more Cubans in the western hemisphere but encouraged them in African Portuguese territories.

Stockholm AFTONBLADET said: "Thus the U.S. President has made a classical Latin American intervention. The U.S. is back in her usual role as a defender of the status quo in a revolutionary surroundings."

LBJ Wins Unity in Viet-Dominican 'War-Fund' Vote

By SAM FOGG
By United Press International

President Johnson won important backing last week for his tough task in the Viet Nam and Dominican crises. He asked and got a swift $700 million vote of confidence from Congress on Viet Nam.

And in the turbulent Dominican situation, the Organization of American States (OAS) voted to create a hemispheric police force to share with American troops the tense job of restoring order to the rebellion-torn Caribbean country.

Johnson deliberately requested the House and Senate endorsement of the emergency $700 million appropriation bill to underwrite expanding U.S. military operations in Viet Nam. He openly acknowledged that he could have obtained the money from funds already voted by Congress.

But Tuesday, he invited key legislators to the White House to announce the request which he said would demonstrate without question U.S. unity on the forceful measures he has ordered in the fighting against the Reds.

Johnson asked for an "overwhelming vote" and he got it. The House approved the money request by a vote of 408 to 7 one day later. Thursday, the Senate passed the measure 88-3 and sped it to the White House.

In signing the bill Friday morning, Johnson declared the rapid-fire congressional response clearly meant: "Until the aggressors have indicated their willingness to talk, we intend to press on."

He firmly cautioned the Communist world not to confuse the administration's readiness to talk peace with cowardice.

AND EVEN BEFORE he signed the legislation, an American task force of 6,000 Marines and Seabees landed on a South Viet Nam beach to build a new air base for attacks against the Communists in North Viet Nam.

Throughout the week, Johnson had his hands full in dealing with the rebellion-born terror in the Dominican Republic and the threat of a Communist coup in the chaos there.

The President and his top advisers found evidence that the Reds were in position to take command of the revolt and to take over the long-troubled island country.

On this belief, Johnson responded vigorously, sending in additional U.S. Marines and paratroopers to the capital city of Santo Domingo. By week's end, there was a military force of 19,000 Americans on the scene.

And there were American deaths as well. By Friday, the fatalities among the U.S. troops numbered 13 as even a cease-fire signed by the rebels failed to halt sniper gunfire in Santo Domingo.

NONETHELESS, the cease-fire had been signed and even more important, the OAS voted 14-5 Thursday for a U.S. resolution that the other Latin American member nations should contribute forces to deal with the Dominican strife.

U.S. officials were gratified by the diplomatic victory, even through admitting that the American forces might be in for a long stay in the Dominican Republic. Further, they noted, that the recruitment of a police force from the OAS countries might provide the organization with a precedent that would help snuff out incipient Communist uprisings in the hemisphere in the future.

But there was a jarring, intrusive note from Paris when French President Charles de Gaulle condemned what he called U.S. intervention in the Dominican Republic and announced that France was considering diplomatic recognition of the rebel government.

It was a further sign of rift between the two strong free world leaders—De Gaulle and Johnson.

THE LATTER INDIRECTLY took issue with De Gaulle Friday when he made a live television speech to the United States and Europe via the Early Bird communications satellite to mark the 20th anniversary of V-E Day that ended World War II in Europe.

He did not mention De Gaulle directly but in predicting a close-knit Atlantic community of the future, Johnson said: "How much grander is that dream than any hope to which a single nation can reach. How much more filled with the prospect of peace and the increasing welfare of man."

In the rustic county seat of Hayneville, Ala., the Ku Klux Klan had its day in court.

Collie Leroy Wilkins Jr., became the first of three accused KKK members to go on trial for murder in the death of Mrs. Viola Liuzzo, a Detroit housewife, in an aftermath of last month's Selma voting rights march.

WILKINS WAS ACCUSED by an FBI informant, Gary Thomas Rowe Jr., of having fired shots at Mrs. Liuzzo on a country highway while she was driving a Negro participant of the march to his home.

Matt H. Murphy Jr., self-proclaimed counsel of the Klan, was Wilkins' defense attorney. Without placing his client on the witness stand, Murphy closed his defense with a fiery appeal to the jury, denouncing Rowe as a perjurer and "worse than a white nigger."

An all-white jury of 12 men spent two days deliberating and could not agree on a verdict. Circuit Court Judge T. Werth Thagard declared a mistrial.

Meanwhile the Senate spent another week in debate on the far-reaching voting rights bills prompted by the Selma racial violence.

HOOCH—BIG BIZ

Moonshiners Still 'Revenoor' Target

By ROBERT BUCKHORN

WASHINGTON (UPI)—There is no business like the moonshine business.

It's illegal. It's dangerous. It's colorful. And it's profitable.

Last year, the "revenoors"—the government's Alcohol and Tobacco Tax Division agents—smashed 6,867 stills, and made 8,198 arrests.

But to the moonshiner, the raid-and-arrest procedure is an occupational hazard. Once he is out of jail, he usually goes back into business.

THE REASON? Money. A gallon of moonshine is now selling for $8 to $12.

The government hounds the moonshiner for the same reason—money. That same gallon of moonshine if made and sold through legitimate channels as 100 proof whiskey would carry a $10.50 government tax.

Last year, the government collected $2.5 million in alcohol taxes. But a private organization—the Tax Council for Alcohol Beverage Industries—estimated the tax loss to both the state and federal governments at $600 million annually.

THE WAR between the moonshiner and the government is nothing new—it has been going on officially since 1791 when the first tax was put on distilled spirits.

The tax collector then was no more popular than he is today, especially among those who made alcohol. A band of farmers in western Pennsylvania staged a "whiskey rebellion" and the army was called out to enforce the law. Ever since then, the government has been trying to collect its full share of the alcohol tax.

MOONSHINERS themselves come in all sizes and are found in most places.

A tell-tale puff of smoke in the piney woods may lead the government agent to a "hillbilly still." But more often the moonshiner is a custom-tailored hoodlum operating out of a city warehouse and using a truck delivery system.

As a breed of lawbreakers, they are as tough as any. They've killed, and they have been killed.

A SPOKESMAN for the Alcohol and Tobacco Tax Division says 13 government agents have been murdered since 1934. Another 35 have lost their lives in accidents while tracking moonshiners.

Story and song over the years have tended to glamorize the moonshiner. The government looks at it differently, and says the public also should. At the very best, the moonshiner is the nation's number one tax dodger. At worst, he is turning out a product that has been so bad on occasion that it has killed or permanently crippled its customers.

In between, the government says moonshiners use their profits to promote other criminal rackets.

A: It was not an action which broke "a precedent dating back about a half century." Our decision to send troops to the Dominican Republic was aimed at saving lives. The situation in the Dominican Republic was one of anarchy; there was no authority able to accept responsibility for law and order and the protection of foreign nationals. Police and military authorities normally exercising such functions told us that they were unable to carry them out. They asked for our assistance. Under similar circumstances governments from time immemorial have been recognized to have not merely the right but the obligation to take whatever action is necessary to save the lives of their nationals. It had nothing to do with 19th century types of intervention.

Q: What elements of the situation in the Dominican Republic could justify such a departure from long-established policy?

A: I have already indicated that the action taken in the Dominican Republic was not "a departure from established policy." The situation in the Dominican Republic contains unique elements which in a time of revolution contributed to chaos. Decades of dictatorship had stunted the development of a general civic order. It had been impossible to develop solidly based institutions for the expression of the national will and to build the basis for an effective national political life. Thus at a time of sudden crisis there were no elements in the country that could take effective responsibility for law and order. The result was total chaos. Q: Is it correct to say there were two phases in the intervention covering (1) a rescue operation and (2) a move to prevent a Communist takeover? If so, when did the U.S. purpose change; and did the change affect the number of troops required?

A: The first action taken by the United States was indeed a rescue operation, and there is voluminous evidence to indicate that the Marines arrived just in time to avoid a major calamity. The mission of the U.S. forces did expand in keeping with the necessities of the changing situation and to support the decisions of the OAS. For example, the rescue of American and foreign nationals proved to be a larger problem than was at first anticipated; the OAS requested that an international neutral zone of safety be promptly established; a major effort was required to provide food and medicines to sustain the elementary public health of the country; and the OAS committee arrived and needed support. In short, after the initial emergency, U.S. forces were necessary to preserve the situation in the Dominican Republic until the OAS could take charge. Meanwhile the evidence was mounting that the Communists had captured the revolution according to plan and the danger of a Communist takeover was established beyond question.

Moonshiners Still 'Revenoor' Target

By ROBERT BUCKHORN

WASHINGTON (UPI)—There is no business like the moonshine business. It's illegal. It's dangerous. It's colorful. And it's profitable.

Last year, the "revenoors"—the government's Alcohol and Tobacco Tax Division agents—smashed 6,867 stills, and made 8,198 arrests.

But to the moonshiner, the raid-and-arrest procedure is an occupational hazard. Once he is out of jail, he usually goes back into business.

THE REASON? Money. A gallon of moonshine is now selling for $8 to $12.

The government hounds the moonshiner for the same reason—money. That same gallon of moonshine if made and sold through legitimate channels as 100 proof whiskey would carry a $10.50 government tax.

Last year, the government collected $2.5 million in alcohol taxes. But a private organization—the Tax Council for Alcohol Beverages Industries—estimated the tax loss to both the state and federal governments at $800 million annually.

THE WAR between the moonshiner and the government is nothing new—it has been going on officially since 1791 when the first tax was put on distilled spirits.

The tax collector then was no more popular than he is today, especially among those who made alcohol. A band of farmers in western Pennsylvania staged a "whiskey rebellion" and the army was called out to enforce the law. Ever since then, the government has been trying to collect its full share of the alcohol tax.

MOONSHINERS themselves come in all sizes and are found in most places.

A tell-tale puff of smoke in the piney woods may lead the government agent to a "hillbilly still." But more often the moonshiner is a custom-tailored hoodlum operating out of a city warehouse and using a truck delivery system.

As a breed of lawbreakers, they are as tough as any. They've killed, and they have been killed.

A SPOKESMAN for the Alcohol and Tobacco Tax Division says 13 government agents have been murdered since 1934. Another 35 have lost their lives in accidents while tracking moonshiners.

Story and song over the years have tended to glamorize the moonshiner. The government looks at it differently, and says the public also should. At the very best, the moonshiner is the nation's number one tax dodger. At worst, he is turning out a product that has been so bad on occasion that it has killed or permanently crippled its customers.

In between, the government says moonshiners use their profits to promote other criminal rackets.

precedent dating back about half a century?

A: It was not an action which broke "a precedent dating back about a half century." Our decision to send troops to the Dominican Republic was aimed at saving lives. The situation in the Dominican Republic was one of anarchy; there was no authority able to accept responsibility for law and order and the protection of foreign nationals. Police and military authorities normally exercising such functions told us that they were unable to carry them out. They asked for our assistance. Under similar circumstances governments from time immemorial have been recognized to have not merely the right but the obligation to take whatever action is necessary to save the lives of their nationals. It had nothing to do with 19th century types of intervention.

Q: What elements of the situation in the Dominican Republic could justify such a departure from long-established policy?

A: I have already indicated that the action taken in the Dominican Republic was not a departure from established policy. The situation in the Dominican Republic contains unique elements which in a time of revolution contributed to chaos. Decades of dictatorship had stunted the development of a general civic order. It had been impossible to develop solidly based institutions for the expression of the national will and to build the basis for an effective national political life. Thus at a time of sudden crisis there were no elements in the country that could take effective responsibility for law and order. The result was total chaos.

Q: Is it correct to say there were two phases in the intervention covering (1) a rescue operation and (2) a move to prevent a Communist takeover? If so, when did the U.S. purpose change, and did the change affect the number of troops required?

A: The first action taken by the United States was indeed a rescue operation, and there is voluminous evidence to indicate that the Marines arrived just in time to avoid a major calamity. The mission of the U.S. forces did expand in keeping with the necessities of the changing situation and to support the decisions of the OAS. For example, the rescue of American and foreign nationals proved to be a larger problem than was at first anticipated; the OAS requested that an international neutral zone of safety be promptly established; a major effort was required to provide food and medicines to sustain the elementary public health of the country; and the OAS committee arrived and needed support. In short, after the initial emergency, U.S. forces were necessary to preserve the situation in the Dominican Republic until the OAS could take charge. Meanwhile the evidence was mounting that the Communists had captured the revolution according to plan and the danger of a Communist takeover was established beyond question.

Jody Miller Mother

HOLLYWOOD (CNS)—Songstress Jody Miller, 20, whose current record, "Queen of the House," is about the revolution according to plan and the danger of a Communist takeover was established beyond question.

Sneak Peek at L.B. 'Peek-A-Boo' Laws

PEEK'S WAY, VICTORIA'S WAY, AND THE 'PROPER' WAY
Staff Photos

Today's modern female beach attire is illegal if Long Beach's municipal code were even barely enforced.

Laws on the city's books—listed in succinctly precise language—declare rules of attire for women beach goers that would fill Long Beach's jails with violators.

How much concern is there over these statutes?

Apparently very little. On one sunny weekend an I, P-T photographer took these candid photos of the fairer sex as she appears most often at local beaches.

Men don't seem to object to this flagrant civil disobedience—but what would Victoria Regina think?

What have jokingly become known as the "Peek-A-Boo" laws after a Long Beach councilman named Peek, who, in his own Victorian way, had some exceedingly chaste ideas of what feminine beach attire should consist are still in force but hardly vogue.

He, at one time, introduced a law, which was later passed, that would not allow any woman on the beach if her suit began higher than 3 inches above the knee and stopped short of the collarbone. Later these more severe laws were modified to the presently described beach laws in the municipal code, to wit:

Sec. 7300.12 (subject: Bathing Suits—Female.)

"It shall be illegal to expose any or all parts of the buttocks or bosoms." Regarding the lower portion of the bathing suit, "it must extend to a line above the navel."

The law also states in a sub section that "no bathing suit shall be worn in a rolled down or loosened condition."

In the next section of the code (Sec. 7300.13), it goes on to state "that no person shall wrestle with any person of the opposite sex in or upon any beach or in any place open to view of public while attired in bathing suits."

NO WRESTLING IN BATHING SUITS, KIDS!

CALL THE GENDARMES—LAWS ARE BREAKING

Independent-Press-Telegram

SUNDAY, MAY 9, 1965

A LINE of interesting meditation on oath-taking and oath-keeping is suggested by the after-trial statement of the two hold-out jurors in the Alabama trial of a Ku Klux Klansman in the celebrated civil rights slaying case.

These men indicated that they couldn't vote for conviction because the key state's witness Rowe had at one time "sworn before God" that he would never divulge any matters concerning the Klan and then had broken that oath. Rowe, as you know, took the Klan oath when he entered the hooded order as an FBI plant, and in the trial testified as an eye-witness of the alleged shooting by another Klansman.

Accepted at face value, his testimony certainly would have convicted. But two jurors wouldn't accept it because, they said, he was a demonstrated oath-violator.

NOW it is proper that a person's reputation for honor and veracity, and his record along that line, should be considered in the evaluation of his testimony in a trial—or, for that matter, anything else he might say in normal life.

But the fact a man has been known to lie, or deceive, or break an oath, doesn't mean that everything he says or does thereafter must be regarded as a lie or deception.

It does reasonably mean that before accepting his word, we would need strong corroborating evidence, or recognition of a set of circumstances that clearly indicates that, this time, he is telling the truth.

But the blanket rejection, indicated in the often-heard assertion "that I would never take that fellow's word on anything" is ridiculous. Should one carry a lantern around all day because a known liar was heard to remark that the sun came up this morning?

NOW come to think of it, there is an awful lot of violation of oaths and vows (much of it accepted in honorable society).

If that is the inflexible criterion of veracity, we can never accept the word of a voluntarily divorced person.

We can never take the word, on anything, of a person who has committed adultery.

Now I'm not suggesting that oaths and vows are or should be meaningless; I merely point out that a great many people who have violated some oath or vow are still generally reliable, and accepted as such.

If they weren't, all of us would have a pretty hard time getting any trustworthy information at all from our fellow men.

ANOTHER interesting line of thought is provoked by the Alabama trial result. It is suggested by an indignant comment I heard to the effect that if the defendant did kill, he shouldn't escape punishment because of a misdeed or irregularity committed one time by another man—in this case the key witness. Of course, that's right.

But the jurors who reasoned as they did acted not without a certain parallel in what goes on regularly in the appeal courts in criminal cases.

Persons whose guilt has been clearly established in many ways are allowed to go free because of some irregularity on the part of arresting police or the judge or prosecutor at the trial, etc.

A lot of people have "gotten off" for reasons hardly more relevant to their crime than the oath-breaking by another man that led two Alabama jurors to vote no on conviction of the Klansman. It gets pretty sticky, doesn't it?

Viet Nam Air War Vet Says 'Now We Can Win'

By MARY NEISWENDER

"We felt we were in a fight—but were in the losing corner."

"Now it's turned into a 'good' war—one we can win."

So says veteran Air Force Major Oliver James Cook who holds eight new Air Medals—awarded for more than 200 flights over enemy territory in Viet Nam.

Cook, currently attached to the 247th Air Force Reserve Sector and stationed at Long Beach Airport, says morale of the Americans now fighting in Viet Nam "must be fantastic."

"WHEN I WAS in Indochina—before President Johnson's decision to bomb supply lines—we felt tied down. The only time we could fire on an enemy was when they fired on us first.

"And we could see the supplies coming through Cambodia and Laos."

Those fighting in Viet Nam, Cook points out, are farmers during the day and guerrillas—members of the Viet Cong—at night.

"They work in their rice paddies during the daylight hours," Cook relates, "then pick up their guns at night. It's impossible to know who is what. It's a funny type war."

Bombing of the supply lines, Cook says, is the only way to stop the farmer-fighter.

"Keep his supplies from him," the flier says, "and he'll stop fighting."

Cook, who served as reconnaissance operations officer at the Saigon air base for more than a year, claims the Viet Nam conflict is "another Korea all over again, except that President Johnson put his foot down" as far as the Chinese Communist participation is concerned.

"He made it clear that we'll retaliate if they come over the border—and that makes us feel we are fighting a winning war."

THE 35-YEAR-OLD flier is operations officer for the Reserve sector, controlling Reserve activities in Arizona, Clark County, Nev., and Southern California. However, his Long Beach stay is a short one, he leaves for Forbes Air Force Base in Kansas in August. His job in Long Beach, because of the cut-down in Reserve activities, has been eliminated.

A 14-year Air Force veteran, Cook lives with his wife, Gloria, and three sons in Garden Grove.

As far as returning to the fighting in Viet Nam is concerned, he says, "I don't mind."

"But don't tell my wife."

District President Assures Council

The president of the Southern California Rapid Transit District has confirmed in writing a promise that engineering and construction of the Long Beach-Los Angeles line will be given high priority if pending tax legislation is adopted.

In a letter Friday to the motor vehicles. A 1% tax on City Council, Henry A. Faull vehicles would be made effective as soon as the tax on a continuing basis (Rees revenue bill is enacted thereafter if ratified by a majority of the voters.

Faull appealed to the council for support of the bill, and Van Nuys legs and arms scheduled for an airing Tuesday forward to the present day before the Senate Transportation Committee in Sacramento.

He also noted that the planning and construction schedule "contemplates full cooperation of the city of Long Beach and other authorities involved in handling details of the many rights-of-way and on the 1% in-lieu vehicle fee station locations, engineering proposal, detailed engineering and public support problems would be completed and construction commenced on the four legs of the system."

His letter added: "As soon as construction of the city of Long Beach become available following a majority vote of the people of Los Angeles County, the proposed rapid transit system."

There MAY BE a variety of completion dates, planning indicated secondary priority for the Long Beach line. For this reason city officials have withheld an endorsement.

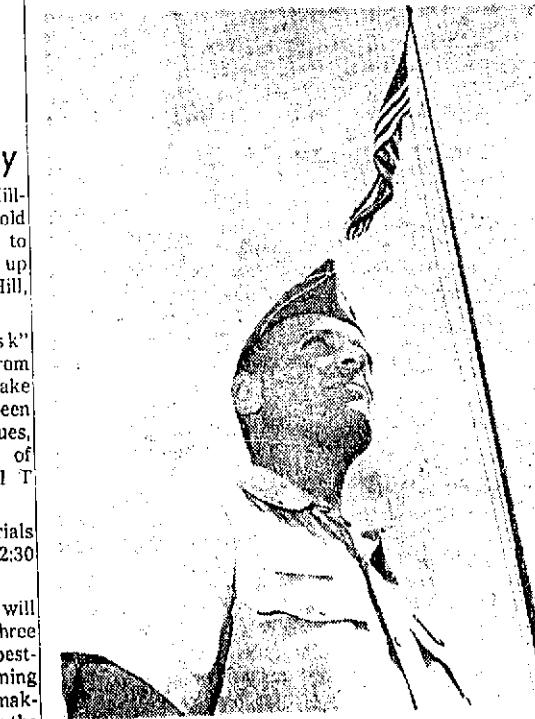

The Rees Bill, SB 997, provides for a one-year tax of one-half of 1% of the value of

We Are Sick at the Stomach

WE'RE SLIGHTLY sick at the stomach.

This week Marine Corporal Russell Rowe, age 21, who was shot on the beach at Santo Domingo, lay in Walter Reed Army Hospital with both legs amputated and a wound in his stomach.

Meanwhile, in Berkeley, Calif., a group of college students burned their draft cards in protest of American efforts to keep the Dominican Republic from going down the Communist drain.

And in front of the White House a bunch of sloppy beatniks, legs intact, protested the fight to hold back the Communist tide in Viet Nam.

THE YOUNG MEN at Berkeley and on Pennsylvania Ave. would have us believe they are demonstrating in the cause of freedom. In truth, they are merely exercising the freedom for which Corporal Rowe risked life and limb.

Shortly before he went into Santo Domingo, young Rowe wrote his sweetheart a letter saying he was not afraid to do his duty and stating, "I feel proud to be a Marine." With him there was no hiding behind phony virtue and sick rationalizations. The thought that you could burn a draft card or carry a picket sign and make the world safe for freedom-loving men never entered his head. The defense of freedom was a little more complicated and dangerous than that. He did his duty, and paid dearly. Someone always must.

YES, THE USE OF FREEDOM is the easiest part. The hard part is the getting hurt and the dying. And there's something profane and sickening about the dirty-necked beatnik and the fatuous collegian who seek to disparage the cause in which the hurting and the dying are done.

Attack on Your Right to Know

SINCE CALIFORNIA judges already possess the authority to decide whether news cameras shall be allowed in the court room, a proposal by the Judicial Council of California merely heaps insult upon injury.

The Council, which administers the court of this state, proposes to prohibit the taking of photographs in the courtroom during the progress of judicial proceedings or during any recess.

Barry's Policies

By HARRY KARNS

THE U.S. BOMBS North Viet Nam and carries the big stick in Latin America. Doesn't this make Barry Goldwater our President without portfolio?

REPUBLICANS ACCUSE their House Leader, Gerald Ford, of softening his attack on Democrats. If we know Gerald Ford, his "soft" attack on Democrats would consist of slapping them with a velvet glove full of napalm.

THE PRESIDENT, says an aide, likes to consolidate responsibility "under one big tent." The result is the greatest one-man show on earth.

REPUBLICAN CONGRESSMEN are very economical. They hate to see all that money being spent—by Democrats.

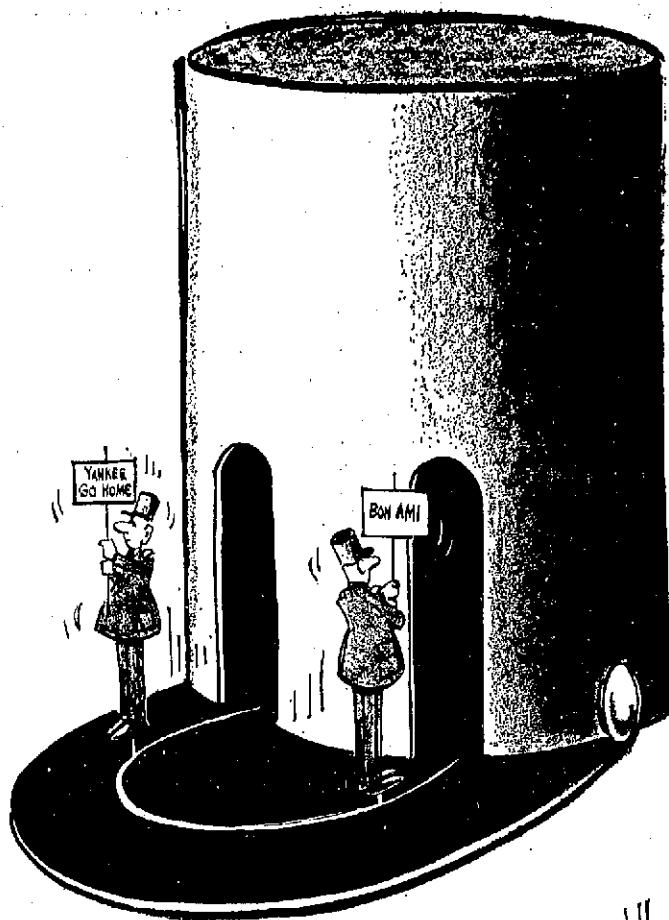

BECAUSE OF AN EXCESS of applicants and a shortage of space, college admission standards are getting tougher. The student who can prove that he rioted in high school will have priority.

DEAN RUSK, who previously had six other men trying to tell him how to do his job, now runs it without interference except from LBJ. But it's still not the ideal job, since LBJ can interfere more than any other six men.

IN THE LIFE of every gentle, honest man comes that critical moment when the director of the amateur theater group asks, "Well, how did you like the production?"

Assembly Almost Certain to Kill Rees Plan for Senate

Independent, Press-Telegram State Bureau

SACRAMENTO — Republican legislators are chuckling contentedly over the plan of Sen. Thomas Rees, D-Los Angeles, to divide Los Angeles County into 12 Senate districts.

Rees, who says he primarily was concerned about community identity, didn't plan it that way. But he couldn't have rankled Democrats more if he had turned over the map-making job to the Republican Central Committee.

Reason for the goof-up: The Rees staff apparently got confused on the home addresses of legislators.

Rees first passed the word that he had placed Assemblymen George Deukmejian, R-Long Beach, Joe Gonsalves, D-Artesia, and Joseph Kennick, D-Long Beach, in the same Senate district — one that would include most of Long Beach, Artesia, Signal Hill, Dairy Valley, Hawaiian Gardens, Lakewood, Norwalk and Santa Fe Springs.

But that didn't turn out to be right.

The fact is that Democrat Rees handed to GOP Assembly Whip Deukmejian the only Senate district in Los Angeles County in which only one incumbent legislator is the occupant—a sure ticket to a Senate seat. All other districts have two or three incumbent rivals.

What about Kennick and Gonsalves? Sen. Rees doesn't know where they live.

Kennick misses being in the Deukmejian district by one block. Instead he is in an adjoining district that also includes Assemblymen Vincent Thomas, D-San Pedro, and Charles Chapel, R-Palos Verdes. Kennick's home is in a small western tip of Long Beach that is tucked on a Senate district that includes Wilmington-San Pedro, Torrance and the Palos Verdes Peninsula.

Gonsalves only would have been in the Deukmejian district if he had remained in Dairy Valley, where he was mayor. Gonsalves, who has his district office in Artesia, actually lives in La Mirada — a fact that apparently escaped the Rees reapportionment researchers.

Gonsalves—as a La Mirada resident—thus in a far-flung Senate district that also includes Assemblymen Phil Soto, D-La Puente and Houston Flournoy, R-Claremont.

Though Republican Deukmejian inadvertently got favored treatment from Democratic partisan Rees, Democrats didn't fare so well.

Any Democratic blood-letting in a three-cornered race pitting two Democrats and one Republican could work to the advantage of the GOP contender. Both the Kennick-Thomas-Chapel and the Gonsalves-Soto-Flournoy races could shape up that way.

Sen. Rees has also taken a position at odds with that of Southern California assemblymen by leading a campaign to overturn by a federal constitutional amendment the federal court's order for one-man-one-vote reapportionment.

All these factors mean that the lines drawn in the Rees plan for Los Angeles County are rather academic. The Assembly — the only house of the legislature already apportioned by population — will probably scrap the Rees plan. The Assembly will insist on drawing its own lines.

And just to be sure, Sen. Rees clinched the demise of his bill by snubbing Chairman Don Allen of the Assembly Elections and Reapportionment Committee. The Rees plan puts Assemblyman Allen, D-Los Angeles,

Yale Profits From 'Peyton Place'

Distributed by Newsday Specials

ONE OF THE LEAST credible characters in John Steinbeck's novel, "East of Eden," was a Groton trustee who secretly owned a chain of houses of ill repute. I have known many Grotties and, by marriage, am related to a few. Their general average for probity is fairly high and would be higher but for the fact that one of the most arrogant crooks in modern Wall Street history was a Groton boy. He was a crook, but he did not own a chain of bordellos. Steinbeck's insistence on a Groton trusteeship for his character was capricious and unconvincing.

HOWEVER, LIFE CAN ALWAYS be depended upon to mirror art. An author can invent a character or a situation that is not acceptable in realistic fiction, then real life comes along and imitates it or tops it. Although I do not believe that there are any prostitution tycoons on the Groton board, I cannot deny that Yale University is a beneficiary of the television program "Peyton Place." This news does not top Steinbeck's fiction, but in that Yale Blue Heaven Up Above, where William Lyon Phelps and Henry Seidel Canby may meet every afternoon for tea, there must be some embarrassment. Assuming that Harvard men also go to heaven (Princeton men go back to Old Nassau), I fancy that they are having a little fun with Dr. Phelps and Dr. Canby on the subject of "Peyton Place."

Apparently Yale bought 70,000 shares of stock in the American Broadcasting-Paramount Theaters corporation, and in a year's time Yale has become $2 million richer on a capital gain. Since it is ABC that presents "Peyton Place," Yale has shared in the prosperous TV production of the Grace Metalious novel.

Now I am glad to see Yale or any other private university make a lot of money through private enterprise. I am fearful of the trend toward federalization of our educational system, and if Yale can be made safe by the profits of "Peyton Place," so be it. One of the television outfits approached me last fall (after "Peyton Place" caught on)

Texas Poll Shows Close Vote on Newspaper Endorsements

I, P-T Political Editor

JUDGING FROM TWO POLLS in Texas, separated by six years, voters are pretty evenly divided on the question of whether newspapers should endorse candidates.

The American Newspaper Publishers Association cited the studies in a recent bulletin. A 1958 study in a community where there was an "intelligently - edited Republican newspaper" which "exerted strong leadership," showed that voters answered the question of whether that newspaper should give advice on whom and what to vote for: Yes 48%, No 47%, No answer 5%.

A poll taken of 1,000 voters during the week of Nov. 12, 1964, nine days after the Johnson - Goldwater presidential election asked whether the Texans thought newspapers should support one candidate over others. Results: Should support 31%; should not 36%; doesn't make much difference 27%; don't know, or no answer 6%.

IN TEXAS, Johnson got 63.3% of the vote, Goldwater 36.7%. Johnson voters, in the poll, went 36 to 31 in favor of newspaper endorsement. Goldwater voters registered 54 to 32% against endorsements. In that sample, 28% of Johnson voters said endorsements didn't make much difference, but only 12% of Goldwater voters agreed.

The same 1964 survey asked if newspapers had been fair in campaign coverage in its news columns—not editorials. Response: Very fair 42%; more or less fair 27%; very unfair 15%; don't know or not answered 18%.

Fairness was seen in completely different lights by Johnson and Goldwater voters. Johnson people said: Very fair 52%; more or less fair 26%; very unfair 10%; don't know 12%. Goldwater people responded: Very fair 29%; more or less fair 26%; very unfair 37%; don't know 8%. Among people who didn't vote, the survey showed 38% considered papers very fair; 26% more or less fair; 9% very unfair; 27% don't know.

ASKED IF NEWSPAPERS were more fair or less fair than television in candidate coverage, those polled answered: More fair 26%; less fair 16%; about the same 44%; don't know or not answered 14%.

LBJ voters rated newspapers: More fair 27%; less 15%; about the same 49%. Barry supporters rated newspapers (compared to TV): More fair 31%; less 20%; about same 42%.

The 1958 poll, showing sentiment about evenly divided on whether newspapers should endorse, asked some other questions. How many pay attention to the newspaper's advice? Very few people 20.2%; a few 34.4%; a lot of people 33.7%; don't know 7.1%; not answered 1.4%.

If you weren't sure about a bond issue, would you take the paper's advice? Yes, certainly 5%; yes, probably 40.1; No, probably not 36.1; No, certainly not 14.9.

When the newspaper prints an editorial, do you usually feel it has made a complete study of the subject being discussed? Yes, very complete 8.2%; yes, fairly complete 69.2; no, not very complete 17; no, not complete at all 2.8.

THESE FOUR QUESTIONS indicating the level of confidence in the subject newspaper's political leadership, were related to responses on whether newspapers should offer election advice. The results came out rather predictably: Those who had high confidence in the paper's political leadership voted 58.1 to 20.4% in favor of newspaper advice. Those with low confidence voted 43.2 to 10.3% against advice and endorsements.

Budget and Taxes Up, Morale Down

EDITOR:

The two favorites of the tax-biters are in the news again, the personal property and automobile owner. Los Angeles County's budget has soared again and that only means one thing, an increase in the property tax. A person operating on a budget cuts everything to the bone, but when tax dollars are being spent, it is a completely different story. Let us blow up the budget. Taxpayers are footing the bill.

Another tax for automobiles is proposed to pay for rapid transit that we are supposed to welcome with open arms, supposedly temporary. Just what will we pay for? Incidentally, what is being done to prevent a repetition of the damage in northern California that we have been taxed for (1c a gallon on gasoline)?

Says 'Doctrine' Is Strongarming

EDITOR:

With power goes responsibility. You, as editor of a great newspaper have great responsibility.

An unreasoning fear of communism has inspired in many an almost religious fever. It is tragic that the crusade to stop communism, like the first crusade, is causing far more suffering and harm to the world than any good it will do. Your editorial, "The Johnson Doctrine," in essence advocates the policy of might make right, and the end justifies the means. Do you really mean this?

For if this is the approved method of conducting international affairs, it must also be right for public and personal affairs. Our new moral code: What pleases me is right; what displeases me is wrong. What chaos!

Car Insurance Is Matter of Morals

EDITOR:

I regret having missed your article "No Insurance—No Driver's License" pertaining to a bill proposed by the State Bar Association. However, may I reply to Thomas Browne who wrote you May 3 that pensioners can't "afford insurance." Let me tell another side to the story.

Seven months ago, my 15-year-old nephew, while riding a bike, was struck by a car and killed instantly. Less than a month ago, his father (my brother), while crossing the street in a crosswalk was struck by a car, taken to a hospital, and died three hours later. The hospital bill alone for the three hours my brother lived is over $1,000.

Who will pay the large medical and funeral expenses? The drivers of the cars that struck them down and killed them? No, they have no insurance. Sue them? No. They have no money and one driver is in jail. So, a grief-stricken family, a widow with four small children to raise alone will carry one more burden — worry over finances. Money will not bring them back but it will pay the bills.

I, too, like Mr. Browne, live on a close budget while raising three small children, but I would rather give up my car than drive without insurance. Incidentally, I pay much less for good insurance coverage than the $140 Mr. Browne stated is necessary. Careful drivers can get reduced rates.

The driver of an automobile has a big responsibility and if his conscience doesn't tell him to carry insurance, then the law should.

Says Editorials Fair, Objective

EDITOR:

Your editorials are outstanding. You seem to be guided by sound principles, rather than allegiance to any particular group. Although I've heard you are a Democratic paper, you give Republican views a fair hearing. While praising President Johnson for his firm action in Viet Nam, you criticize his shortcomings. You support Gov. Brown's good proposals and criticize his bad points.

In supporting sound principles, you make proper distinctions. For example, you strongly favor civil rights, but censure irresponsible acts done in the name of civil rights. You don't seek support by condoning whatever has emotional appeal. You carefully research for facts, then objectively inform us. And you draw sound conclusions. This is helpful to us as citizens.

We Are Sick at the Stomach

WE'RE SLIGHTLY sick at the stomach.

This week Marine Corporal Russell Rowe, age 21, who was shot on the beach at Santo Domingo, lay in Walter Reed Army Hospital with both legs amputated and a wound in his stomach.

Meanwhile, in Berkeley, Calif., a group of college students burned their draft cards in protest of American efforts to keep the Dominican Republic from going down the Communist drain.

And in front of the White House a bunch of sloppy beatniks, legs intact, protested the fight to hold back the Communist tide in Viet Nam.

THE YOUNG MEN at Berkeley and on Pennsylvania Ave. would have us believe they are demonstrating in the cause of freedom. In truth, they are merely exercising the freedom for which Corporal Rowe risked life and limb.

Shortly before he went into Santo Domingo, young Rowe wrote his sweetheart a letter saying he was not afraid to do his duty and stating, "I feel proud to be a Marine." With him there was no hiding behind phony virtue and sick rationalizations. The thought that you could burn a draft card or carry a picket sign and make the world safe for freedom-loving men never entered his head. The defense of freedom was a little more complicated and dangerous than that. He did his duty, and paid dearly. Someone always must.

YES, THE USE OF FREEDOM is the easiest part. The hard part is the getting hurt and the dying. And there's something profane and sickening about the dirty-necked beatnik and the fatuous collegian who seek to disparage the cause in which the hurting and the dying are done.

SACRAMENTO — Republican legislators are chuckling contentedly over the plan of Sen. Thomas Rees, D-Los Angeles, to divide Los Angeles County into 12 Senate districts.

Rees, who says he primarily was concerned about community identity, didn't plan it that way. But he couldn't have rankled Democrats more if he had turned over the map-making job to the Republican County Central Committee.

Reason for the goof-up: The Rees staff apparently got confused on the home addresses of legislators.

Rees first passed the word that he had placed Assemblymen George Deukmejian, R-Long Beach, Joe Gonsalves, D-Artesia, and Joseph Kennick, D-Long Beach, in the same Senate district — one that would include most of Long Beach, Artesia, Signal Hill, Dairy Valley, Hawaiian Gardens, Lakewood, Norwalk and Santa Fe Springs.

But that didn't turn out to be right. The fact is that Democrat Rees handed to GOP Assembly Whip Deukmejian the only Senate district in Los Angeles County in which only one incumbent legislator is the occupant — a sure ticket to a Senate seat. All other districts have two or three incumbents.

And just to be sure, Sen. Rees clinched the demise of his bill by snubbing Chairman Don Allen of the Assembly Elections and Reapportionment Committee. The Rees plan puts Assemblyman Allen, D-Los Angeles, in the corner of a heavily Negro District that is certain to elect as its senator one of two able Negro assemblymen in the area — either Assemblyman Mervyn Dymally or Douglas Ferrell.

Democrat Rees is almost down to his last friend in the Assembly — GOP Assembly Whip Deukmejian.

THE WAY to advance in California political affairs is to change parties. Gov. Brown, a one-time Republican, now is occupying the state's top office — as a Democrat. Ronald Reagan, who switched from Democrat to Republican registration in 1962, is one of the front-running GOP candidates for governor.

A FUTURE between-sessions study rather than 1965 approval is the most likely prospect for the tidelands bill that would apply the 85-15 "Long Beach" formula to shoreline cities up and down the California coast. Los Angeles, San Francisco, Newport Beach and other cities are expected to resist any fund-grab comparable to the united effort against Long Beach in recent years.

FEW legislators if any are making summer vacation plans, even though the current session is scheduled to end June 18. Lawmakers still are snarled over reapportionment and fiscal issues, and a special-session is considered a sure thing.

In supporting sound principles, you make proper distinctions. For example, you strongly favor civil rights, but censure irresponsible acts done in the name of civil rights. You don't seek support by condoning whatever has emotional appeal. You carefully research for facts, then objectively inform us. And you draw sound conclusions. This is helpful to us as citizens.

Excerpting Drew Pearson, your columnists usually write well: John O'Hara, Walter Ridder, Bob Houser, David Lawrence, etc. I especially like the LAC Says column. I'd like to see a booklet of the LAC columns.

Critic Fires Wild Shots at Firearms Control Measure

I, P-T National Bureau

WASHINGTON—There's going to be heavy firing on Capitol Hill next week when the Senate subcommittee on juvenile delinquency holds hearing on a firearms control bill proposed by the subcommittee's chairman, Sen. Thomas J. Dodd, D-Conn.

Congress already has been subjected to a barrage of anti-Dodd bill mail, virtually all of it inspired by a news-letter issued last month by Franklin L. Orth, an official of the National Rifle Association.

However, Orth's sights were off on at least three of the shots in his fusillade—

1. Orth claims the bill would hinder transportation of personal rifles or shotguns between states. However, the bill specifically allows personal interstate transportation of such arms.

2. Manufacturers of ammunition would have to pay a $1,000 fee and this would apply to ammunition re-loading by clubs for its members, says Orth's letter. The ammo-makers fee would only be $500 yearly and would not apply to club reloading.

3. A dealer could not sell to persons outside his state, reports Orth, who on this point apparently didn't read a Dodd bill analysis prepared by NRA's legislative service—"residence in state of seller is not required in the case of sale of a shotgun or rifle."

Most of the battling is expected to center around the principal aim of the bill, curtailment of mail order sales of guns, at which the NRA is expected to center its heaviest fire.

Global Woes Stay Same

WASHINGTON — Do international problems really change very much in a half-century? Are the basic issues that inflame the passions of peoples around the globe any different now than they were five decades ago? Just 50 years ago—on Friday, May 7, 1915—

—a submarine of the navy of the imperialist government of Germany torpedoed without warning the "Lusitania," an unarmed merchant vessel of a British steamship company, and caused the death of 1,198 persons, of whom 124 were Americans.

The whole world stood aghast at this act of brutality. The European war had begun the year before, and the United States was carefully preserving its neutrality. Yet innocent citizens of this and other countries were wiped out in a few minutes. The theory behind such sinkings was that they would discourage the shipment of supplies to Great Britain and France.

The action was in total disregard of international law and in defiance of warnings which the United States had issued to the belligerent powers not to endanger American lives and property on the high seas. To torpedo unarmed vessels without warning was contrary also to the accepted rules of civilized warfare.

MOST PERPLEXING of all was the problem which faced President Wilson. From Friday to Monday, no word came from the White House except that a protest note was being prepared. On Monday, May 10, however, Mr. Wilson made a speech in Philadelphia in which he conveyed an impression of restraint. Although he made no explicit mention of the "Lusitania" tragedy, many of his listeners believed that he was referring to the sinking of the ship when he said: "The example of America must be a special example. The example of America must be the example not merely of peace because it will not fight, but of peace because peace is the healing and elevating influence of the world and strife is not. There is such a thing as a man being too proud to fight. There is such a thing as a nation being so right that it does not need to convince others by force that it is right."

These remarks caused a wave of protest inside the United States, although those who were on the Pacific side applauded enthusiastically. But in the next few weeks, public opinion developed heavily in favor of the idea that the United States should take a firm and resolute position because the phrase "too proud to fight" had been misconstrued abroad.

CONSEQUENTLY, THE second American note, which was sent on June 9, was so strong that the Secretary of State, William Jennings Bryan, considered it too belligerent and resigned. The not effect of the American stand, however, was to prevent a recurrence of such episodes as the sinking of the "Lusitania." President Wilson was reelected in 1916 as many of his political supporters publicized the slogan: "He kept us out of war."

But on Feb. 1, 1917, the Berlin Government announced that it was resuming unrestricted submarine warfare against all neutral and belligerent shipping. The belief evidently prevailed in the German high command that the European War could be won by the Kaiser's forces before the United States could mobilize its troops and get them overseas to rescue the Western allies.

President Wilson promptly broke diplomatic relations and asked Congress to give him authority to arm merchant ships in order to resist attacks. But Congress got involved in a filibuster and debate, led mostly by the "liberals" of those times, and the session adjourned on its fixed date—March 4—without granting the requested authority. Mr. Wilson went ahead, anyhow, believing that he had the constitutional power without action by Congress. When American vessels were sunk, the President immediately asked Congress to declare war, and it did so on April 6, 1917—not even six months after the 1916 election.

The difficulty then, as now, concerns the inability of peoples to make their voices heard and to keep autocratic governments from threatening the peace of the world and from launching a war.

U.S. Supports Dictators in Latin America

WASHINGTON—One reason the landing of U.S. Marines in the Dominican Republic has so riled some of our staunch friends in Latin America is because it comes on top of a long and consistent U.S. policy of supporting military dictators.

PEARSON

The policy is completely bi-partisan. It is practiced by Republicans as well as by Democrats. The American public has forgotten about it, but Latin leaders haven't. They recall how John Foster Dulles' son-in-law, a Republican, got a long, free vacation from dictator Trujillo; how Vice President Barkley's son-in-law, a Democrat, was retained by Trujillo; also Eisenhower's brother-in-law.

Another supporter of Trujillo was Speaker John McCormack of Boston, a Democrat, who received a medal from him and defended him on the House floor.

Assistant Secretary of State Henry Holland, a Republican, became Trujillo's sugar lobbyist. Sen. George Smathers of Florida represented, through his law firm, the Dominican Steamship Lines. Ex-Ambassador Bill Pawley of Miami was associated with Trujillo in various business ventures.

All played footsie with the bloody dictator of the Dominican Republic, and what has flabbergasted Latin Americans is that two Democratic administrations in Washington, while preaching democracy, twice used pressure to sidetrack and depose the only democratically-elected president in 32 years, Juan Bosch.

This is what prompted Sen. Ernest Gruening, grizzled Democrat from Alaska and former member of Roosevelt's Caribbean Commission, to ask State Department officials at a closed door session of the Foreign Relations Committee why the United States had not intervened on the side of democracy for a change. His query took place at the time duly-elected President Bosch was being ousted by a Dominican military junta.

"WE SENT the entire Sixth Fleet to Lebanon and landed 6,000 Marines when the President of Lebanon asked for help in a much less serious situation," Sen. Gruening recalled. "But when the Dominican Ambassador officially asked for help to keep a constitutionally elected president in office, where were we?"

"This was the first honest election ever held in the Dominican Republic," the senator from Alaska continued. "If the United States isn't going to lose its prestige in Latin America, it should now cut off the Dominican sugar quota, cut off all U.S. aid and withhold our ambassador until President Bosch is taken back."

Sen. Wayne Morse, D-Ore., also chided State Department officials that the military seizures could have been prevented in both the Dominican Republic and Honduras by the timely arrival of a U.S. airplane carrier and a contingent of Marines. However, Sen. Morse observed, the United States never intervenes on the side of democracy, only on the side of military dictators in Latin America.

The State Department did follow Sen. Gruening's advice for about six weeks. Aid was cut off from the new military junta in 1963 and the United States did withhold recognition.

Then after President Kennedy's death and President Johnson took over, LBJ's old Texas friend Tom Mann was elevated to the job of Assistant Secretary of State in charge of Latin American affairs. One day the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, plus Democratic and Republican leaders, got a call to come to the White House. In the Cabinet Room they found the President, with Undersecretary of State George Ball and other State Department officials with a report on the Dominican Republic.

Ball said that the military junta which overthrew Bosch was about to fall because it couldn't get recognition. The State Department therefore recommended recognition of this military regime even though it had seized power by force and kicked out the first duly-elected president in 32 years.

PEPPERMINT PLAYHOUSE

'Little Nell' Wins Joyful Applause

By RALPH HINMAN JR.

It's a notable journey into a dimly remembered American past where virtue always triumphed, Sigmund Freud was an unknown Viennese doctor and the 20th century's terrible wars were unthinkable.

It's also an evening of genuine fun for all but 'way out hipsters.

This is "He Ain't Done Right by Little Nell," Peppermint Playhouse's latest production, which opened Friday night at Seal Beach's community theater on Main Street.

Adding immeasurably to audience pleasure is a traditional, after-the-play "olio"—"polite vaudeville," in the words of impresario Kay Carroll.

"WE'RE trying to create a 'fun thing,'" Mrs. Carroll told this reviewer, "a place where people can come just to enjoy themselves."

And, in one man's opinion, they have succeeded.

One may loudly boo the villain, that infamous "city feller," Hilton Hayes, who's not about to do right by Little Nell. Or we loudly applaud when Nell declares her heart belongs, not to Hayes, but to honest Jack Logan.

"No, no!" we all but yell when simple, lovable old Granny almost gives away

Nell's birthright, a vaguely improbable invention of Grandpa Perkins' "That's sure make our fortune."

WE KNOW that in a time when "Nell" was considered "serious drama," black symbolized evil while white typified a purity that always emerged unscathed. So there's never a need to seek out hidden innuendoes in the dialog or devious sub-plots. We know how this one will end! Black cape twirling evilly below black top hat immediately brands Robert Chaffee as the villain—whose delightfully broad leers and sneers completes the picture.

Heroine Nell (Susan Taylor) wears a virtuous white dress which never musses or wrinkles as deftly she eludes Hilton Hayes' unwanted caresses—or when Jack (Kenneth Bond) Logan shyly offers his manly shoulder.

Virtue triumphant—and no Freudian overtones!

GRANNY (Sue Ofstedahl) and "typical old-maid" Lollie (Lucille Kiester) recreate for us stereotyped turn-of-the-century cookie-baking grandmother and prim, gossipy maiden lady. Mrs. Kiester also doubles as director.

Completing the cast are Birgit Bond as the bad big-city girl who develops a heart of gold, and Thomas Stewart playing her father, Mr. Carleton. All just as we expected.

There's even a social message of a type dear to our late-Victorian forebears, buried not-too-deeply in the play: an occasional capitalist is evil but capitalism itself is good.

Talented local persons delightfully perform in the olio, singing, reciting sad verse and hoofing in the old way. They were Mrs. Marie Davidson, Bob Mitchell, Mrs. Pat Plechner, Miss Mary Ann King-land, Karen Hutchison and Stella McIntosh, Mrs. Sophie

Waldman, Seth Tracey, George Uitz and Manual Romero—all Seal Beachers. "Nell" and olio will be staged Friday and Saturday nights through May.

JUDGE RULES

Piranha Fish to Stay in Pet Store

The judge has ruled that some fish can hold school at least until May 18.

Frank Adams, who owns a tropical fish store at 2420 E. Pacific Coast Highway, owns a school of piranhas, 120 of them. Since they have a retail value of up to $100 each, he thinks highly of them.

THE California Fish and Game Commission does not share his view. The game wardens promised him they would confiscate the fish on Saturday. The fish are against the law, they say.

Superior Court Judge George Francis issued a temporary restraining order Friday and set a hearing for May 18.

The piranhas are little fish with ferocious teeth. They come from tropical South America. The fish-and-game people fear they might get into California fresh waters and be a menace to fish and swimmers. Adams says they could not possibly survive in California.

Lakewood, Hoover Win at Typing

Typing teams from Lakewood High School and Hoover Junior High earned top honors Saturday in a citywide contest.

A Lakewood High girl, Ann Werner, received top individual prize in the open contest, and a Poly High girl, Barbara Eusebi, won in the first-year contest.

SPONSORED by the Administrative Management Society's Long Beach chapter in conjunction with Long Beach City College and Long Beach State College, four-member teams from five high schools and 14 junior highs met to compete in two divisions, open and "first year," the latter limited to students who have received only two semesters or less of typing instruction.

The four members of the winning Lakewood team received $50 savings bonds. They are: Miss Werner, Cindy Comarr, Tom Miller, Marlene Sly. Miss Werner also won a portable typewriter for highest individual score, 73 words a minute.

Greg Sandie, Cathy Good-

Wade Appoints Plant Manager to City Post

Mayor Edwin W. Wade has nominated L. D. Sommerville, of 4119 E. 14th St., as a member of the city Economic Development Committee to succeed Atty. James Munholland.

Sommerville, a Long Beach resident since 1928, is manager of the Peoples Frozen Foods plant at 629 W. Anaheim St. A past president of the Kiwanis Club, he has been active in the work of Boy Scouts, Boys Clubs, Red Cross and Heart Association.

Munholland, who had served on the advisory group since 1962, resigned because of the press of his law practice.

Bill, Jim Rice, Joe Kral, team members on the Hoover squad in the first-year division, also won $50 bonds. Top individual honors, and a portable typewriter, in that division, went to Miss Eusebi, with a score of 59.6.

THE California Fish and Game Commission does not share his view. The game wardens promised him they would confiscate the fish on Saturday. The fish are against the law, they say.

Superior Court Judge George Francis issued a temporary restraining order Friday and set a hearing for May 18.

The piranhas are little fish with ferocious teeth. They come from tropical South America. The fish-and-game people fear they might get into California fresh waters and be a menace to fish and swimmers. Adams says they could not possibly survive in California.

Lakewood, Hoover Win at Typing

Typing teams from Lakewood High School and Hoover Junior High earned top honors Saturday in a citywide contest.

A Lakewood High girl, Ann Werner, received top individual prize in the open contest, and a Poly High girl, Barbara Eusebi, won in the first-year contest.

SPONSORED by the Administrative Management Society's Long Beach chapter in conjunction with Long Beach City College and Long Beach State College, four-member teams from five high schools and 14 junior highs met to compete in two divisions, open and "first year," the latter limited to students who have received only two semesters or less of typing instruction.

The four members of the winning Lakewood team received $50 savings bonds. They are: Miss Werner, Cindy Comari, Tom Miller, Marlena Sly. Miss Werner also won a portable typewriter for highest individual score, 73 words a minute.

'Little Nell' Wins Joyful Applause

By RALPH HINMAN JR.

It's a notable journey into a dimly remembered American past where virtue always triumphed, Sigmund Freud was an unknown Viennese doctor and the 20th century's terrible wars were unthinkable.

It's also an evening of genuine fun for all but 'way out hipsters.

This is "He Ain't Done Right by Little Nell," Peppermint Playhouse's latest production, which opened Friday night at Seal Beach's community theater on Main Street.

Adding immeasurably to audience pleasure is a traditional, after-the-play "olio"—"polite vaudeville," in the words of impresario Kay Carroll.

"WE'RE trying to create a 'fun thing,'" Mrs. Carroll told this reviewer, "a place where people can come just to enjoy themselves."

And, in one man's opinion, they have succeeded.

One may loudly boo the villain, that infamous "city feller," Hilton Hayes, who's not about to do right by Little Nell. Or we loudly applaud when Nell declares her heart belongs, not to Hayes, but to honest Jack Logan.

"No, no!" we all but yell when simple, lovable old Granny almost gives away

Nell's birthright, a vaguely improbable invention of Grandpa Perkins. "That's sure make our fortune."

WE KNOW that in a time when "Nell" was considered "serious drama," black symbolized evil while white typified a purity that always emerged unscathed. So there's never a need to seek out hidden innuendoes in the dialog or devious sub-plots. We know how this one will end!

Black cape twirling evilly below black top hat immediately brands Robert Chaffee as the villain—whose delightfully broad leers and sneers completes the picture.

Heroine Nell (Susan Taylor) wears a virtuous white dress which never muddies or wrinkles as deftly she eludes Hilton Hayes' unwanted caresses—or when Jack (Kenneth Bond) Logan shyly offers his manly shoulder.

Virtue triumphant—and no Freudian overtones!

GRANNY (Sue Ofstedahl) and "typical old-maid" Lollie (Lucille Kiester) recreate for us stereotyped turn-of-the-century cookie-baking grandmother and prim, gossiping maiden lady. Mrs. Kiester also doubles as director.

Completing the cast are Birgit Bond as the bad big-city girl who develops a heart of gold, and Thomas Stewart playing her father, Mr. Carleton. All just as we expected...

There's even a social message of a type dear to our late-Victorian forebears,

Wade Appoints Plant Manager to City Post

Mayor Edwin W. Wade has nominated L. D. Sommerville, of 4119 E. 14th St., as a member of the city Economic Development Committee to succeed Atty. James Munholland.

Sommerville, a Long Beach resident since 1928, is manager of the Peoples Frozen Foods plant at 629 W. Anaheim St. A past president of the Kiwanis Club, he has been active in the work of Boy Scouts, Boys Clubs, Red Cross and Heart Association.

Munholland, who had served on the advisory group since 1962, resigned because of the press of his law practice.

Bill, Jim Rice, Joe Kral, team members on the Hoover squad in the first-year division, also won $50 bonds. Top individual honors, and a portable typewriter, in that division, went to Miss Eusebi, with a score of 59.6.

MUSIC IN EUROPE

Pageantry, Music Rule in Seville

By JULIEN MOSAFIA
SEVILLA, Spain—Hundreds of thousands of fervent believers and mere tourists from all over Europe congregated in this ancient city for "La Semanan Santa," the Holy Week, to observe the "Passion" according to the Sevillans, a most colorful tradition of pageantry and music.

In a joyful but subdued atmosphere (later, after Easter Sunday, to explode into a week of sporting events, bullfights and dancing in the streets) enormous crowds, with men in their best suits and women in black-lace dresses and hats squeezed through the narrow streets in sweltering heat to watch the long processions that begin every day at 4:30 p.m. and continued until 3:30 a.m.

SEVERAL columns of cross-carrying penitents, hooded monks, priests and soldiers departed simultaneously from the three medieval churches, crossed the Guadalquivir and met in the Cathedral, one of the largest in the world, magnificent in its flamboyant mixture of Arabic detailed-elegance and Gothic grandeur, and then returned through darkness dispelled by huge candles carried by the marchers. Each column had as its center piece a "paso," a wooden throne sculptured in the 17th century, laden with artistic silver objects and a life size religious statue, transported on the backs of as many as 100 men, to the accompaniment of drums, bal-rogue horns, musettes and trumpets. Each minute the "paso" was layed down to give the men a rest, such as its great weight, and the undoubtedly insufferable heat below the completely encased floor of the throne.

THE MOST stirring moments occurred when, unexpectedly, from a balcony along the rout, a stentorian voice stopped the procession with a "saeta," a "cante jondo" full of emotion, drama and subtlety. The hushed crowd burst into applause not only when a long mellisma revealed the incredible pulmonary power

Play Suggested by Fitzgerald's Life Lacks Revealing Quality

By SAMUEL A. BOYEA
"Every time a man betrays his total gift, the universe fails," runs the underlying theme of "The Disenchanted," the play about a novelist cut from F. Scott Fitzgerald which joined Actor's Theater arena-style repertory at 1089 North Oxford, Los Angeles, Friday night.

However, although in this adaptation Budd Schulberg and Harvey Breit treat their jazz age hero with affection, there is nothing even faintly cosmic or of tragic proportions in the entire play or its routine production.

Probably the cause of disenchantment from this corner is that while feeling compassion for the frittered-away talents of a genuinely fine writer—Wendell Corey starring as the Fitzgerald-type novelist, Manley Halliday—it is difficult to get too excited about the test of creative redemption authors Schulberg and Breit set their spiritual fading here.

IN REALITY, Fitzgerald was not betraying his total gift, but only trying to make a bank deposit. Par for the creative course. Besieged by fast-mounting debts for a misspent, glamorous career and a demanding, soul-eating wife—Sally Kellerman—novelist Halliday tries to dip into his dwindling creative talents for the will to co-author an assembly line screenplay, "Love on Ice."

Corey, a conscientious performer, is uneven as the novelist who tries to fight off booze, diabetes and the fripperies of his flapper age. But Corey is fine when, late in the play, he reaches for that magic "blue skyrack" and does a satirical takeoff at a movie conference on "Love on Ice" still without an outline after several weeks of dawdling. Sally Kellerman makes the wife's part of Jere a fresh portrayal, but her coltish prancing was an awkward way of evoking the sputtering enthusiasm of the libertine wife.

MOST TERRIFIC performer was Ed Barth as the philistine movie producer, Victor Milgrim, living the part in every scene, Barton Heyman as the younger co-author, del-day's events, in the late hours of the night, had its moment of horror, when the "pasos" had to be passed through a narrow door into the church, with only one inch on each side to spare, and the men, in bull-fight-danger defiance entered the object backwards, in full knowledge that to touch the walls would mean irreparable damage to the delicate art work along the perimeter of the throne. As soon as half of the throne was passed safely, the crowds shouted with joy and then began the long process of dispersing as dawn could be sensed in the air.

Go Josie Go Hailed as Quarter Queen

By DON HARDIN

Go Josie Go, the fleet filly owned by A. O. Phillips and trained by C. L. Taliaferro, left little doubt in the minds of 11,838 fans at Los Alamitos Saturday that she is the champion of the meeting as she won the $35,000 Spring Championship.

The 3-year-old daughter of Go Man Go—Josie's Bar, winner of the Derby Trials in the fastest time and an easy winner of the $40,000 Derby, thus tacked up her fourth consecutive win at this meeting and her eighth in nine starts for the year. Anna Dial, last year's winner of this event and one of the pre-race favorites, surprisingly got away at 7-1 odds as the public fancied Go Josie Go and Duplicate Copy as soon as the betting began. It appeared for a while the 5-year-old mare would be the only repeater as she led nearly all the way. Anna Dial, streaking down the middle of the track with Jack Robinson booting her on, had the first call until the last as Go Josie Go, running smoothly on the outside under the guidance of James Dreyer, caught the mare some 20 yards from the finish and was a neck in front as she crossed the finish line. Bar Request was another three quarters of a length back to take third, and Nugita Texas was fourth.

Time for the standard quarter distance of 440 yards was 22.1.

Go Josie Go, going off at 7-5 odds, returned $4.80, $2.80 and $2.40. Anna Dial paid $4.60 and $2.80 and Bar Request, a frequent chaser of the winner, including the Derby Trials and Derby, paid $3.40 to show.

Western Stable's Duplicate Copy, bet down to second choice at 9-5 following his galloping 17.8 win in his last start, got off to one of his poor starts again and finished sixth.

BY winning, Go Josie Go followed in the footsteps of her illustrious mother, Josie's Bar, who in 1954 also won the Derby and the Championship.

Owner Phillips picked up the winning share of $19,250 and thus is assured of the money winning title for the meeting, having won a total of $42,550 with the one horse.

And what a horse! Taliaferro said the filly would be shipped directly to Ruidoso Downs where racing will be conducted most of the summer and late fall. The horse has been made a supplemental entry for the $150,000-plus Rainbow Derby which will be contested there in late July.

ASKED IF Go Josie Go was the best horse he had ever trained, Taliaferro said "no, I don't think so. I may have had some better ones with the Vessels (he was a trainer for the Frank Vessels Western Stables) but I'm certainly delighted with her and she's the best I've had with this stable."

There were 11,838 sun worshippers on the grounds when the bugle sounded the call for the feature event of the meet, the $35,000 Los Alamitos Quarter Horse Championship. "Come on baby, get your nose up there" the crowd shouts, while a few bookworms still try to compute the winner. ## Giants Li'l Lambs for Drysdale, 9-0

SAN FRANCISCO — Don Drysdale doesn't know why he pitches better against the Giants than against anyone else, but he knows why the Dodgers suddenly are acting like young men on a flying trapeze.

Drysdale and the Dodgers handled the Giants with the greatest of ease, 9-0, Saturday and continued as the league's top aerial act. They're 2½ games higher than the Astros, and that's way out.

Drysdale believes the Dodgers are fooling most of the people most of the time these days because "we have a lot

Lopez Hurls, Bats Surging Angels to Win Over K.C.

By ROSS NEWHAN

The 21-year-old Cuban scattered eight hits and, in turn, sparked an eight-hit Angel attack with two singles, a run scored and a sacrifice fly as he single-handedly KO'd Kansas City, 3-2.

The Angels ascended to within one and one-half games of the league lead by virtue of their 11th victory in 13 games and sixth out of the last seven.

The club also reached the 25-man, May 12 player limit by placing Ken McBride on the disabled list and tendering 34-year-old outfielder Gino Cimoli his outright release. "We just couldn't afford to carry a sixth outfielder," explained manager Bill Rigney of the decision to release the popular Cimoli. In the case of McBride, the 29-year-old righthander is suffering from shoulder adhesions and an ERA of 108.00.

By contrast, Lopez' earned run average is a sparkling 2.06 and his third consecutive victory placed him alongside Robin Roberts and Ralph Terry as the league's only four-game winners. He now owns half of the Angels' six complete games and leads his fellow pitchers in every department.

He almost leads in every batting department as well.

Compiled from Wire Reports

COLLEGE STATION, Tex. "I was going for 70 on that one," said Randy Matson Saturday afternoon as he watched officials confirm his 70 foot, seven inch shotput, the first ever over 70 feet.

The massive Texas A & M sophomore had just completed not only the longest put in history, but the greatest series. He then came back to hurl the discus 199-7½ feet, a national collegiate record. Matson had previously thrown the plate 201-5½, but the effort was not allowed—he was throwing uphill.

Matson's shotputs Saturday were, in order, 68-8¾, 70-7, 67-9, 69-3¾ and 68-4¾.

He scratched on his last try. In the five throws, he broke the existing world standard (67-10) four times, his own pending mark (69-¾) twice and the conference record (58-5¾) every time he threw.

Hampered in recent weeks by a sore knee, Matson had no idea a 70-foot throw was on its way when the day started. "I was hoping for around 67. I thought I would fall off after being near 69," he said.

His coach, Emile Mamaliga, was asked how far Randy could go. "Maybe 75—I hope so. Who knows?" Mamaliga added, "I can always tell his possibilities on his warmups. When he popped a warmup toss on the 69 foot line without grunting, I knew he would do alright."

Winner? Loser? Can't Tell 'em Apart

Even though the title dreams of San Pedro longshoreman Paul Rojas went up in a smoke of an opponent's hooks and jabs Friday night in the Coliseum, the inquiring reporter found it difficult to distinguish between the winner and the loser.

Both looked like basket cases from Viet Nam.

Even though the neighboring dock worker was thrashed soundly by the world's featherweight champ from Mexico City, Vicente Saldivar, he earned a draw in the patchwork department.

Raul had as nasty a gash on his left eyelid as this reporter's eyes have viewed. Carmen Basilio, who streaked blood so often that he resembled a slaughterhouse production, looked like a matinee idol compared to Rojas.

On the other hand, the champion gave the appearance of the featured actor in a Boris Karloff monstrosity. Saldivar's right eye was shut completely. He had a deep cut under his right eye and an even deeper slash over his left eye.

Pitting the pair side-by-side, odds would have been even that an observer would not have been able to distinguish the winner from the loser.

There's a definite moral to this tale: Don't tangle with anybody in a bar or at the office picnic, even if the other guy weighs only 125 pounds. As Rojas and Saldivar proved, looks are deceiving. Both kids threw bombs like

REFEREE TOMMY HART, who has handled enough title bouts around this area to be classified in the expert category, took some criticism because he stopped this titular affair with only 10 seconds remaining.

"It's not my job to worry about the time," snapped Hart when asked why he didn't permit the 15-round event to go the limit. "My only concern is for the fighters."

"Rojas was taking a terrific beating in that last round, and a few before that. When I was convinced that he might really get hurt if I let it continue any longer, I stopped the fight. I'd have done the same thing if there was only one second left."

"Rojas was hurt and tired. This Saldivar was tattating him like he was batting a punching bag.

"Raul could have quit earlier and no one would have blamed him. He has plenty of guts. This Saldivar has tremendous agility and with both left and right jabs that confuse the other guy, he could be the champ for a long time."

Hart had a remark about the battered condition of BOTH fighters, too: "All those cuts and gashes were the result of butts. These kids were going toe-to-toe so much they probably didn't even realize when they lifted their heads that they were skulking the other guy."

The referee's summary: "Saldivar not only was too fast for Rojas, but he had that rare ability to hit well with both hands. Raul could have knocked him out, but he was too slow to follow up any advantage."

SALDIVAR is something else. Gashes, patches and all, he said (through an interpreter) "I am ready to train tomorrow at 11 a.m. I am ready for anybody. I like to get back into training the day after a fight."

This heresy may expel Vicente from the Pugilists' Union.

Saldivar had this comment about Rojas: "He is a mature fighter. Honestly, he worried me. But I knew I fooled him with my left hand. A lefthander fools almost all righthanders. They just don't know what to do."

Rojas worked 100 rounds against southpaws in training.

ing. What he didn't realize was that Saldivar has dynamite sticks in his right paw, too.

RAUL'S YOUNG MANAGER, Jackie McCoy of Wilmington, wasn't overly upset at the defeat.

"After all, we were fighting the champion and to be champion you have to be good," said Jackie. "Raul didn't fight his fight. I don't know why. The other guy was a cutie and this may have thrown Raul off balance. I just don't know."

Lying on his rubbing table, the San Pedro youngster had some other thoughts.

"Saldivar wasn't terrific, but he was a sharp puncher. It stung when he hit," declared Raul.

"I think the whole answer was that since he was a lefthanded puncher he made me hesitate a fraction of a second. I didn't know exactly what to do. That hesitation was the difference."

"He had something else going for him. He meets righthanders every day. I don't meet lefthanders every day."

"I'm a little bruised, but he didn't hurt me none. Except for my feelings. They hurt a lot now."

Raul's feelings must be in better shape today. The kid from San Pedro picked up $15,000 for 44 minutes and 50 seconds that wouldn't hurt his feelings!

Lopez Beats Athletics for 4th Win

Lopez' sacrifice fly scored the deciding run in the eighth and his single and daring advance from first to third on an ensuing single to short left led to the first two runs in the sixth.

"I play outfield before I become pitcher and almost every club I play for use me as pinch-hitter and pinch-runner," said the muscular southpaw. "I once run 100 yards in 9.6 seconds and in 1961 in the Eastern League I hit seven home runs, steal 15 bases and drive in 24 besides pitching full-time."

Trailing 2-0 and with Lopez and Jose Cardenal in possession of the only Angel hits off Diego Segui through five innings, the Free Cuba delegation went to work in the sixth.

Lopez singled to center and Cardenal ripped a single to left. Lopez never hesitated as he rounded second and despite the close proximity of left-fielder Campaneris, wheeled towards third. The stunned Campaneris fired wildly to the hot corner, allowing Lopez to score and advancing Cardenal to third. Jim Fregosi's wicked ground-er, forcing a backhanded stop by Wayne Causey, scored Cardenal with the tying tally.

One out into the seventh, Bob Rodgers singled and Segui was replaced by Wes Stock, a pitcher linked to persistent trade rumors involving the A's and Angels. Bobby Knop lowered Wes' stock by advancing Rodgers to third on a single and Lopez brought him home with his fly to deep right.

DON'T FENCE ME IN—PLEASE!
Willie Mays runs, hits, throws and fields with the best, but when it comes to climbing fences—well, he's an amateur. Willie gave long chase to Don Drysdale's fourth inning triple, missed, somersaulted, and left game in seventh inning with bruises.

only 30. And he accounted for He has stolen 17 bases and is as many total bases as the Giants.

Drysdale tripled over Willie Mays' head, singled and scored both times. The Giants' four-base total came on a double by Mays and singles by Jesus Alou and Hal Lanier.

This was Drysdale's fourth win of the year and his second against the Giants. It was No. 16 for the Dodgers, their fifth in a row and eighth in the last nine games. They also have an 8-1 road record for the year.

Amazing statistics, but Drysdale can top them.

Bob Miller has a new nickname for Drysdale. "Big Thunder." Lightning has accompanied the thunder the last seven times, in fact, has struck almost identical blows.

Drysdale has pitched seven successive complete games against the Giants, winning six and allowing five earned runs for an ERA of 0.73. He has beaten the Giants 29 times, a record topped among active pitchers, only by Warren Spahn (55 wins) and Lew Burdette (31). Spahn and Burdette have been around a lot longer.

DRYSDALE gained sweet revenge Saturday for one defeat in his string of seven complete efforts against the Bay Bombers. That was a 1-0 loss to Ron Herbel last June, when the Dodgers failed after filling the bases with none out in the ninth.

Herbel wasn't up for the rematch. He was down before the Dodgers finished batting in the first inning. Bunts by Maury Wills and Wes Parker, the first of three hits for each; a wild pitch and singles by Jim Lefebvre and Derrell Griffith produced three runs and chased Herbel off of an inning.

Wills had one of his finest days. He also stole three bases for the second time this year, faked Ed Bailey out of his boots on a slide into first base and scored three times.

Knudson Shakes Off Bogey Boogies, Leads by Stroke

FORT WORTH, Tex. (UPI)—Bespoke George Knudson shook off the bogey boogies after a 10-minute rain interruption Saturday to come from behind and wrest the third-round Colonial National Invitation lead with a 70 and a total of 209.

The 27-year-old Canadian, who started the round sharing the lead with Australian Bruce Crampton, bogied three of the first five holes and dropped three strokes off the pace before he rallied for a 37-33 and streaked home one stroke in front of Crampton and Champagne Tony Lema.

Crampton looked as if he would move well out in front on the early holes but lady luck forsook him on a scrambling round and he wound up with a 35-36—71 that dropped him into a runnerup tie with the steady shooting Lema.

DIS AND DATA—Willie McCovey was unable to play because of a spike wound on his left foot. Willis slept on his foot at first base Friday night. Mays' leopards and somersaults, trying for Drysdale's drive near the center field fence in the fourth inning and Drysdale's triple, were the only hits in the fourth. Mays left after three innings. Drysdale had retired 11 in a row when he was hit by a line drive. Drysdale had retired 11 in a row when he was hit by a line drive. Drysdale had retired 11 in a row when he was hit by a line drive.

GEORGE KNUSDON (48-71-70-209) and Gerry Lindgren's fantastic two-mile.

After Dennis Breckow (1:49.5), Bob Frey (47.8) and Arnd Kruger (2:58.2) played possum with the rest of the field for three legs, Bob Day rambled with a 3:58.4 mile and the Bruins could claim the fastest medley of all time—9:33.9.

Lindgren, the fuzzy-cheeked youngster who ran the Russians into the ground and became a symbol of American youth last summer, didn't give his competitors a second look in his race.

He led Arizona State sophomore Lou Scott all the way—by 10 yards on the first lap and nearly 100 at the finish. The pride of Spokane, Wash., sprinted the last 440 and breasted the tap in 8:40.1, a record for collegiate freshmen.

Junior collegians Fred Kuller of Santa Ana and Mt. San Antonio's Don Shy were the equal of their four-year brothers in the record department.

Kuller, who ran a windy 9.5 in the trials, fought off Compton's Pablo McNeil with a 9.3 in the 100 finals. A check of the wind gauge, which was eyed as much as some of the athletes during the evening, revealed

Rams Beef Up Defense, Land Pitt Linebacker

By AL LARSON

RAM-BLING ALONG THE RAM FRONT:

Veteran center Art Hunter has been traded to the Pittsburgh Steelers for linebacker Ed Holler.

Hunter, who has campaigned in the NFL for the past 10 seasons, joined the Rams in 1960 after spending five years with Green Bay and Cleveland. Hunter, 32, weighs 247 and stands 6-4.

Holler, 6-2, 230, is 25 years old. He graduated from South Carolina, was drafted by Green Bay and after one season was traded to the Steelers last year. This will mark his third year in the league.

HOLLER IS the second-linebacker the Rams have dealt for this year. Earlier, they landed all-pro Dan Currie from Green Bay for end Carroll Dale.

Cheering note for Ram fans: Dick Bass is ram'ing to go again. Doctor Danny Levinthal, who operated on Bass' knee, says Dick will be in the best shape since his 1,000-yard season in 1962. Bass is a bail bondsman in the off season.

Willie Brown, who bought a home a couple of months ago in Del Amo Highlands near Compton, is busy getting in shape after leaving the management training program with Van Camp Sea Food Co. last week.

"I'D LIKE TO win that end job. Trying to stay healthy will be my biggest job," Willie said.

"I weigh about 190 now which is at least five pounds under what I weighed last year. I've played quite a bit of basketball lately and haven't had any trouble with the abdominal muscle pull which hampered me all last season."

The former USC star said he was surprised when he first learned of the trade which sent Dale to the Packers, but "I understand why they Jacinto, the tough luck colt of 1965, was declared out of Saturday's Preakness Stakes at Pimlico by trainer Jim Maloney after the 3-year-old turned up with a "tender ankle."

"Jacinto apparently nipped himself in the stall and the colt shows tenderness in the ankle he injured prior to the Gotham last month," the trainer said.

The balding Nevada driver averaged 82.14 mph around the twisty 1.9-mile course with nine turns.

Frank Search, driving a Corvette, was second. John Coyle, also in a Corvette, was third.

CAL'S varsity crew came from behind and passed Washington 150 yards from the finish line and went on to win the 2 1/4-mile race in 14:10.2 to complete a sweep of the three-race regatta on Lake Washington.

Washington, which had led all the way to that point, lost all chances of winning when the No. 3 man in the Husky shell, Dave Covey, collapsed. The Huskies limped across the finish line and were clocked at 14:16.0. Cal's freshman and JV also won.

"BOXING IS dead, not just in Boston, but everywhere."

Former heavyweight champion Rocky Marciano gave that opinion in a phone interview from his home in Ft. Lauderdale to Boston.

Marciano termed the switch of the Clay-Liston title bout from Boston to Lewistown "fantastic... imagine, a heavyweight title fight in front of 4,000. I don't care who sees what on TV. I think TV has killed the game."

Bruinization of Lew

By RICH ROBERTS

Depending upon one's point of view, John Wooden finds himself either credited with or accused of being the slickest recruiter of male talent since Liz Taylor.

C'mon, John, the wise guys wink at the UCLA basketball coach, how'd ya really get Lew Alcindor? But anybody who suspects shady dealings for the nation's most coveted schoolboy athlete simply does not know his man, Wooden . . . or his boy, Alcindor.

Wooden can only meet the cynics with cold logic and an honest face.

"Certainly any school who would have gone beyond the limits on a boy like this is asking for it, because he's certainly going to be checked. Rules might be broken by well-meaning alumni with kids who might be real 'sleepers'—but this kid's no 'sleeper'."

WOODEN WAS TOLD by Alcindor and his parents that not one school among the hundreds who bid for his talent "got out of line."

In fact, the Bruins were incredibly blasé about the whole matter. Wooden himself never has seen Lew play.

"We had no personal contact with the boy until his season was over. We had talked only with the coach."

For that matter, Wooden says, Alcindor's coach, Jack Donohue, approached him during a coaching clinic in Philadelphia last fall to tell Wooden that UCLA was among the schools of Lew's final choice. Wooden met Alcindor's parents for the first time only a couple of weeks ago on a special trip to New York with assistant Jerry Norman.

"They had met all the other coaches who were interested," John says offhandedly.

ALCINDOR'S FATHER is a policeman for the New York Transit Authority. His mother concentrates on making a modest but close family relationship with their only child, Lew.

"That's one of the reasons they kind of hoped he might stay closer to home," Wooden says. "But they wanted him to make the decision. They're sensible people, not ones to make something of this. They didn't want to be entertained themselves or anything like that."

Alcindor visited UCLA earlier, impressing Wooden as "a refreshingly modest young man."

"He wanted to do just two things, really—talk with our basketball players and just get around the campus . . . see the music department, the journalism department."

"They went to a movie at night, then for hamburgers or something. That seemed to be what he enjoyed doing."

EVEN DR. Ralph Bunche, UCLA's famous alumnus in the UN, played less of a role than had been believed in recruiting Alcindor, according to Wooden.

"I don't think Dr. Bunche ever met the boy," Wooden says. "He only wrote and told him something about UCLA and how it was a fine university. He spoke in terms of the university—not basketball."

In the end, then, Wooden feels his windfall was due to a "combination of things."

"The success we had recently (two consecutive NCAA titles could be called 'success') I'm sure played some part in it. Then the fact that we offered what he wanted . . . I think that would—I know it did . . . he was impressed. He'd heard about UCLA."

FERDINAND Lewis Alcindor will be 18 by the time he enrolls at Westwood, an impressive bit of anatomical architecture ducking under any doorways lower than 7-foot-1.

"He's been about what he is for the last couple of years," Wooden says. Apparently, Alcindor's growth is stunted, although he still may be required to wear a flashing red beacon light to avoid low-flying aircraft.

"I never had a player exactly like this," Wooden concludes. "We'll try to utilize his abilities in the best interest of the team."

Swoboda Powers Mets Past Braves

NEW YORK (AP)—Rookie slugger Ron Swoboda drove in all the New York runs with a pair of home runs Saturday in powering the Mets to a 4-2 victory over the Milwaukee Braves.

The Mets got only four hits against three Milwaukee pitchers, but two of them were Swoboda's sixth and seventh homers of the season. The 20-year-old outfielder hit a 400-foot-plus shot off loser Denny Lemaster with two out in the first inning after two walks, and connected again in the sixth against Phil Niekro.

Lemaster held a 6-0 record against the Mets prior to the loss.

Winner Jack Fisher was threatened often but blanked the Braves until the eighth, when Eddie Mathews homered with one on. After Joe Torre followed with a single for Milwaukee's ninth hit, Tom Parsons relieved Fisher.

Singles by Mike de la Hoz and Mack Jones with none out in the ninth chased Parsons, but Dennis Ribant stranded both runners with clutch relief pitching.

Yanks Bomb Richert in 1st

WASHINGTON (AP)—Joe Pepitone's first home run of the season highlighted a five-run first inning as the New York Yankees routed the Washington Senators 7-3 Saturday.

The Yankees routed Pete Richert in the first inning on four hits and a walk and completed their scoring on Cleo Boyer's two-run homer in the seventh.

Jim Bouton, 3-2, had a two-hitter until the ninth inning when pinch hitter Jim King led off with a single.

King scored eventually on a bases-loaded walk to Don Lock before Willie Kirkland unloaded a two-run double.

Phil Linz walked in the first and was forced by Bobby Richardson. Tony Kubek singled before Pepitone lined a homer to left center. Hector Lopez singled and scored on Boyer's double, and Boyer scored on Doc Edwards' single off Buster Narum.

The victory enabled the Yanks to end a three-game skid. The Senators had dealt New York a double beating Friday while Cleveland's Ralph Terry turned on his old mates 4-0 on Wednesday.

Coupled with Chicago's 4-1 loss, the Yankees now rest in eighth place, 5 1/2 games off the pace.

The injury-riddled New Yorkers again were without Mickey Mantle and Roger Maris. Manager Johnny Keane said he didn't know when either outfielder would be back in the lineup.

Houston Explodes for 18 Hits

CHICAGO (AP)—The second-place Houston Astros packed three homers into the 18-hit explosion in defeating the Chicago Cubs 11-6 Saturday as 18-year-old Larry Dierker posted his first major league victory.

Dierker took over for starter Don Nottbart in the fifth inning.

He pitched 4 1/3 innings, allowing three runs, two earned, and five hits.

Adair's Streak Halted

BALTIMORE, Md. (UPI)—Al Kaline's lead-off home run in the 15th inning Saturday gave the Detroit Tigers a 4-3 victory over the Baltimore Orioles in the American League's longest game this season.

Kaline's homer, a 360-foot blast to the front row of the left-field bleachers, came after the teams had played nine scoreless innings with the game tied at 3-3.

Detroit reliever Ed Rakow, Larry Sherry, Fred Gladding and winner Terry Fox, blanked Baltimore after the Orioles had tied the score on starter Hank Aguirre on Bub Johnson's homer in the fifth.

THE LOSER was Dick Hall, last of three Baltimore pitchers.

Thirty-two players were used in the four-hour marathon.

The Orioles' Jerry Adair saw his major league fielding record for second baseman end at 89 consecutive games when he fumbled a ground ball for an error in the eighth inning.

IT WAS Adair's first error since July 21, 1964. Before he booted Freehan's grounder he had safely handled 454 consecutive chances, another major league record.

Inside Straight

Bruinization of Lew

By RICH ROBERTS

Depending upon one's point of view, John Wooden finds himself either credited with or accused of being the slickest recruiter of male talent since Liz Taylor.

C'mon, John, the wise guys wink at the UCLA basketball coach, how'd ya really get Lew Alcindor?

But anybody who suspects shady dealings for the nation's most coveted schoolboy athlete simply does not know his man, Wooden . . . or his boy, Alcindor.

Wooden can only meet the cynics with cold logic and an honest face.

"Certainly any school who would have gone beyond the limits on a boy like this is asking for it, because he's certainly going to be checked. Rules might be broken by well-meaning alumni with kids who might be real 'sleepers'—but this kid's no 'sleeper.'"

WOODEN WAS TOLD by Alcindor and his parents that not one school among the hundreds who bid for his talent "got out of line."

In fact, the Bruins were incredibly biased about the whole matter. Wooden himself never has seen Lew play.

"We had no personal contact with the boy until this season was over. We had talked only with the coach."

For that matter, Wooden says, Alcindor's coach, Jack Donohue, approached him during a coaching clinic in Philadelphia last fall to tell Wooden that UCLA was among the schools of Lew's final choice. Wooden met Alcindor's parents for the first time only a couple of weeks ago on a special trip to New York with assistant Jerry Norman.

"They had met all the other coaches who were interested," John says offhandedly.

ALCINDOR'S FATHER is a policeman for the New York Transit Authority. His mother concentrates on making a modest but close family relationship with their only child, Lew.

"That's one of the reasons they kind of hoped he might stay closer to home," Wooden says. "But they wanted him to make the decision. They're sensible people, not ones to make something of this. They didn't want to be entertained themselves or anything like that."

Alcindor visited UCLA earlier, impressing Wooden as "a refreshingly modest young man."

"He wanted to do just two things, really—talk with our basketball players and just get around the campus . . . see the music department, the journalism department."

"They went to a movie at night, then for hamburgers or something. That seemed to be what he enjoyed doing."

EVEN DR. Ralph Bunche, UCLA's famous alumnus in the UN, played less of a role than had been believed in recruiting Alcindor, according to Wooden.

"I don't think Dr. Bunche ever met the boy," Wooden says. "He only wrote and told him something about UCLA and how it was a fine university. He spoke in terms of the university—not basketball."

In the end, then, Wooden feels his windfall was due to a "combination of things."

"The success we had recently (two consecutive NCAA titles could be called 'success') I'm sure played some part in it. Then the fact that we offered what he wanted . . . I think that would—I know it did . . . he was impressed. He'd heard about UCLA."

FERDINAND Lewis Alcindor will be 18 by the time he enrolls at Westwood, an impressive bit of anatomical architecture ducking under any doorways lower than 7-feet-1.

"He's been about what he is for the last couple of years," Wooden says. Apparently, Alcindor's growth is stunted, although he still may be required to wear a flashing red beacon light to avoid low-flying aircraft.

"I never had a player exactly like this," Wooden concludes. "We'll try to utilize his abilities in the best interest of the team."

Schaal May Be Small, But His Strength Is Deceiving

By ROSS NEWHAN

Paul Schaal does not easily fall and he did not stall in accepting Bob Lee's invitation to Indian wrestling. Las Vegas would wipe such a match off the boards, for Lee stands 6-3 and weighs 237 pounds compared to Schaal's 5-11 and 180 pounds.

This was in a corner of the Angel clubhouse recently and the good-natured joust illustrates the source of Schaal's home run power. Against Schaal's broad shoulders and muscular arms, Lee's own strength and size were nullified.

It was declared a draw and Lee declared he would not be interested in a rematch.

Clearly, Schaal knew his capabilities when he predicted this spring "20 home runs." This was after a strenuous weight and strength building program, but from a man whose size calls for singles instead of four-base bingles, it merely drew chuckles.

Schaal, apparently, will have the last laugh, for he is already over one-quarter of the way towards his goal. He also leads the Angels in RBI and his work at third base has solved a problem which had caused more problems than the Viet Cong.

While strength is the generator, Schaal is brains as well as brawn. He is, in fact, writing a "book" which must be considered essential reading for all rookies.

"It's not really a book," corrected the 22-year-old former Compton High star. "I simply write down little notes about various pitchers, especially the tough ones," revealed Schaal. "Right now it's hard for me to remember all the pitchers I'm seeing and particularly how they pitch to me in certain situations."

"That's the important thing. I want to remember what each one throws me with men on base or with two strikes, or say, with a 3 and I count."

"Jimmy Piersall told me he did the same thing when he broke in and it was a big help."

The "tough ones" so far have been Cleveland's Sam McDowell and Kansas City's Wes Stock. In his first appearance against Dick Radatz earlier this week, Schaal did the Monster Mash by doubling and scoring the decisive run.

"Of course I had heard quite a bit about him and while I was eager to face him I was also slightly nervous . . . maybe scared would be the correct word," admitted Schaal.

The purpose of the book is to remove that trepidation. Knowing what to expect, Schaal figures to stand tall.

"Right now I'm not a guess hitter because I don't know the pitchers and I'll get burned by guessing," said Schaal. "Once I know the pitchers I'll probably become a guess hitter. It's not so much guessing as knowing what to expect. Joe Adcock is a great guess hitter because he is such a great student of the game."

"Now, if I don't know the pitcher, I'll look for a fast ball and, in that way, I'm ready for the curve. I'll get most of my homers off the curve while I'll hit line drives off the fast ball."

Remarkably, Schaal has driven in 16 runs on 19 hits. "I much prefer hitting with men on base," he revealed, "and I'm sure every hitter feels that way. You can dig in. You know you're not going to be brushed back because the pitcher must put the ball over the plate."

It will be recalled that Schaal was signed for a $4,000 bonus in 1962. In three minor league seasons at three different cities he hit .278, .328 and .271 while striking a total of 23 home runs. During the twilight of the 1964 season, Schaal played 17 games for the Angels, batting .125.

"I was a defensive hitter here last year," he admits. "I was nervous and I had only one goal . . . not to strike out. I feel as if I'm attacking now, but it will take two or three times around the league before I qualify as a major league hitter. The pitchers are studying me now just as I'm studying them."

For Paul Schaal final exams are conducted every night. So far, he's done his homework well.

Streaking White Sox Muzzled

MINNEAPOLIS—ST. PAUL

(UPI)—Jim Grant scattered seven hits to lead the Minnesota Twins to a 4-1 victory over the Chicago White Sox and pick up his third win of the season.

Grant struck out six and walked only one while pitching his third consecutive complete game. The loss broke a five-game winning streak for Chicago.

Warning to Clay: This Time Liston Is Training

Sonny Liston sat in a tiny dressing room with a towel over his head like a monk's cowl, two drenched sweat-soaked jerseys swaddling his thick torso, his blue jersey boxing trunks clinging to glistening thighs.

Willie Reddick, the old Philadelphia heavyweight who trains him, occupied another chair, and when a visitor entered, the fighter reached out to clear a stack of towels from the only seat remaining.

For upward of an hour the former heavyweight champion of the world had stolidly punished himself in the big, airy room of a new office building which he uses as a training gym. Now the interview took perhaps one-twentieth as long.

"Just a couple of questions, Sonny. Looking back now, how do you feel about your condition for the first Clay fight? Do you think you were in shape?"

"I don't think I was, no."

"You took it too easy in training?"

"Yes."

"Did you take Clay too lightly?"

"I'd have to say yes."

"So you really weren't fit, physically or mentally?"

"I think that's right."

The big man was frowning thoughtfully. It can give him no special pleasure to recall the night in Miami Beach when he surrendered his title to Cassius Clay, but he showed no resentment at the questions. There was a pause before each answer, and the replies had a ring of sincerity.

"Do you think about it a lot?"

"No," he said slowly. "Well, some. Mostly the onliest time I think about it is like when I'm doing road work. I'll do maybe four miles and then I'll remember what happened the last time when I played it light, and I'll do two more miles."

"Same thing today skip-dip rope. I was only gonna do two rounds. Then I remembered, and did another round."

He was silent for a moment. Then, and this is unusual for him, he volunteered a statement.

"There is no doubt in my mind," he said with conviction, "that if I'm in shape I'll beat him. So—" He spread his big hands, palms up, leaving the obvious unsaid.

Big Amos Lincoln, is a stand-up boxer, at 6-4 noticeably taller than Liston. "Loosen up, loosen up," Reddick kept telling Sonny. "Work inside." In the second round Liston brought applause by catching Lincoln against the rope with a one-two combination, followed by a stick of bombs. From then on, through the third round—his fifth—he landed heavily to the head.

Watching Clay and Liston on successive days, it is difficult to make comparisons, because they are such dissimilar types. The champion 'floats like a butterfly, stings like a bee,' with brilliantly accurate punches that do not look heavy. The challenger, no such marksman, plods a head, throwing clobbering punches with a sidearm delivery.

Firearms Act Hearing to Start

Public hearings on S. 1592, a bill introduced by Sen. Thomas J. Dodd (Conn.) to amend the existing Federal Firearms Act, and recommended by President Johnson and his Administration, will begin Wednesday, May 19, and will last three days provided the suggested schedule is kept.

The hearing will be held by the Senate Subcommittee to Investigate Juvenile Delinquency, of which Sen. Dodd is chairman. In order that the public may know more about this bill and act accordingly, let's take a look at some of its provisions:

It would, if enacted, wipe out all mail-order sales of sporting firearms to individuals. Some congressmen already have pointed out that such a provision would hurt farmers, ranchers and all sportsmen who cannot get the kind of firearm from their local dealers or those who live a considerable distance from where they are sold.

Individuals under the age of 18 would be prohibited without exception from purchasing either a rifle, shotgun or handgun. Persons between the age of 18 and 21 could purchase only a rifle or a shotgun. No person could buy a handgun in any state in which he is not a resident.

The provisions in this bill are certainly a far hue and cry from the milder S. 14 which Dodd introduced at the start of this year's session.

KEEP ON READING, you haven't heard anything yet. In six places, S. 1592 would hand over to the Secretary of the Treasury, without any restraint, the authority to prescribe regulations concerning the sale, shipment, transport and purchase of firearms.

Who knows what will be required? Will the regulations include fingerprinting, serial numbers of firearms, or a police permit to own and use a firearm? Who can say in what way the shooter and hunter will be protected?

The anti-firearms factions make no effort to mask their intention to disarm the American sportsmen. They call S. 1592 the first step. Sen. Dodd, in his introductory statement, referred to it as "legislation calling for controls more comprehensive and stringent than I dared to hope for in the heedless and complacent years gone by."

The nation's foremost sportsmen are not so enthusiastic. They contend that the bill would needlessly restrict and harass the law-abiding shooter and hunter without any hope of material benefit in reducing the improper use of firearms.

They say this is the way to reduce misuse of firearms: Firm enforcement of many laws already on the books; better use of judges' authority to sentence criminals; restrict the purchase of firearms by juveniles (without parental consent), addicts, habitual drunkards, felons and emotionally unstable persons at all times.

BENNO L. HEUNE, our Bridgeport correspondent who operates Ken's Sporting Goods Store in Bridgeport and at Bridgeport Lake, writes this little gem: "Perhaps you noticed that I didn't send any predictions for fishing or weather this year. I was tired of giving out a report and encouraging fishermen to come to the Bridgeport area and have them disappointed about either the fishing or the weather. Now I have facts to write about."

"The weatherman had his usual grouch on because for two weeks before opening we had beautiful weather. Then right on schedule Friday afternoon it started. By 10 a.m. Saturday you could hardly stand up against it. It blew all day Saturday, then on Sunday the wind blew, it snowed and it was cold."

"Now as I write this at 7 a.m. Monday, there is hardly a cloud in the sky and the weather is as calm as a kitten. It seems to me that fishermen must do something to the Man Upstairs to incur His wrath each opening day."

Benno goes on in report that those hardy souls who did brave the elements got good strings of trout, with hardly anything under 14 inches at Bridgeport Lake and in the East Walker River.

As usual, he says, the largest trout caught on opening day in the Sierra Nevada went to Bridgeport Lake. Dick Barthle, Bridgeport resident, took an 8-5 brown on a Phoebe lure. There were many fish between two and six pounds.

NEW BOOKS—Dover Publications, Inc., has four new books on the market (two volumes in one set), that are especially interesting to outdoorsmen. One is "Wild Animals in Captivity," by H. Hediger, director of the Basile Zoological Gardens.

Dr. Hediger says that it is not cruel to keep animals in captivity. On the contrary, they are better fed, far healthier and are shown to lead a much longer life than they would in the wilds. For instance, he says a robin has been known to live 20 years inside an aviary, while those in the outside world have a life expectancy of less than two years.

The two-volume set is "The Wolves of North America," by Stanley P. Young and Edward A. Goldman ($4 for the set), is a tremendous study of the wolves of this country, as well as those of other nations. However, it is pointed out that the wolves still roam more freely in the U.S. than in any other country.

"The Puma: Mysterious American Cat," is an issue by the same American authors and represents a tremendous study of the various species in the U.S. It is issued at $2.25.

If you want to go camping this summer, by all means get "The Golden Guide to Camping," by Robert E. Smallman, and published by the Golden Press, Inc., New York, at $1.00. It's very readable.

Service, Civic Golf Tourney

Representatives of 30 cities will participate in the third Civic-Armed Forces Golf Tournament Monday at Mesa Verde Country Club.

The competition is an annual feature of Armed Forces Week.

Two "city fathers" will be joined by "military sons" and celebrities in the 18-hole medal play.

Long Beach won the team trophy in 1963, Hawthorne won in 1964, and both will contend for a second leg on the perpetual trophy.

Among celebrities in the competition are Fred Schaus, Preston Foster, Richard Arlen and Jim Davis. Frank Kirkland, director of special services for the U.S. Naval Station of Long Beach, is tournament chairman.

CHAMPIONS ALL

Friday was "sports awards night" at Procter and Gamble, and among those honored, and administering honors, were (from left) Vern Wolfe, track coach at USC; Merrill Smith, P & G recreation council commission, Clark Macnamer, chairman of recreation council commission, and Kenny Washington, UCLA's greatest football player.

Service, Civic Golf Tourney

Representatives of 30 cities will participate in the third Civic-Armed Forces Golf Tournament Monday at Mesa Verde Country Club.

The competition is an annual feature of Armed Forces Week.

Two "city fathers" will be joined by "military sons" and celebrities in the 18-hole medal play.

Long Beach won the team trophy in 1963, Hawthorne won in 1964, and both will contend for a second leg on the perpetual trophy.

Among celebrities in the competition are Fred Schaus, Preston Foster, Richard Arlen and Jim Davis. Frank Kirkland, director of special services for the U.S. Naval Station of Long Beach, is tournament chairman.

ROCKETS FACE MET ROOKIES AT BLAIR FIELD

There are only two games remaining for the Long Beach Rockets in the semi-pro baseball season.

Today at 1:30 p.m., the Rockets host the New York Met rookies in an exhibition game at Blair Field.

Matson Aims for Records in Coliseum

Although he's only a sophomore at Texas A&M, Randy Matson already is the greatest weightlifter in track and field history.

He's thrown the shot beyond 70 feet, the discus more than 200 feet.

The 260-pounder will aim his second 70-foot shotput, and the world record of 211-9, in the platter event Friday night at the Coliseum Relays.

Whether he gets the world records or not, he seems certain to break the Relays records — a 65-10 1/2 shotput in 1962, a 200-5 1/2 discus throw by Al Oerter in 1962.

Field events will begin at 7 p.m., races at 8 p.m. Tickets are $3.50, with children, high school and college students, and servicemen admitted for $1.

Independent Oilmen Alter Import Stand

By MAX B. SKELTON

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP)—Many independent oil operators apparently could not be too unhappy should import controls be removed from residual fuel oil consumed in the eastern seaboard industrial area.

This may seem surprising in that such residuals average, at nearly one million barrels a day or about 45% of all the foreign oil being brought into the United States.

But a new trend of thought was in evidence this week at the Denver, Colo., midyear meeting of the Independent Petroleum Association, a trade group that has been fighting oil imports at practically all levels since 1929.

The status of residuals on the East Coast prompted the only sharp debate at the meeting.

TECHNICALLY, the association still favors import quotas for the heavy residuals but results of the debate indicated clearly the independents were backing away from their traditional position.

A motion to reaffirm the policy was tabled by the imports policy committee, 26-22.

This left the association in the same position as in early 1961 when it last spelled out its support of residual quotas during a Washington hearing.

Since then, two distinct supply and demand trends have made it unnecessary for the independents to concentrate on residuals while seeking sharp oil import rollbacks.

The independents recognize the eastern industrial area must have a plentiful supply of the heavy fuel oils. At the same time they recognize domestic refiners have curtailed residual production sharply, while boosting output of more profitable products such as gasoline.

JACK L. HAMON, the imports chairman from Dallas, Tex., yielded the chair so he could speak in opposition to the subcommittee recommendation to reaffirm.

"We could bring in every barrel of residual needed in this country because we can't supply it," Hamon said.

"The refinery yield for residuals is down to 8% and within five to 10 years we won't make residuals at all on the East Coast."

Hamon said a belief by many New England residents that import quotas have prevented residual prices from dropping has lost the oil industry many friends.

"We used to have a top of New England friends for our depletion tax allowance but now we have very few," he said. "Why not stand neutral instead of bringing down the wrath of New England?"

Robert L. Wood, the subcommittee chairman and Fullerton, a 7-1 winner over La Brea association president Pluente in its last start, meets from Midland, Tex., a stronger opponent. The Fullerton Rangers, today at 12:30 p.m. at Mariners Park in Costa Mesa.

Mart Sidesteps Worries, Moves to Record Levels

By C. J. PARNOW

NEW YORK (UPI)—The stock market set aside its international worries last week and advanced to record levels on a modest expansion in volume.

News of increasing American involvement in the Dominican Republic put pressure on the list Monday and, although only a tiny loss was recorded in the market averages, losses held a wide margin over gains.

However, the Dominican situation held sway over investment decisions for only one session. Prices got off to a good start Tuesday and the advance picked up steam as the session progressed. Dow Jones industrials advanced 6.11 to a new peak of 928.22.

ANOTHER good start was made last Wednesday, but a last minute buying spree, prompted by reports of a settlement in the Caribbean island, boosted the indicator 4.00 to 933.52, another new peak.

The market closed the week with a day's loss of 1.00 in the senior average after a session of churning. The average advanced 10.21 on the week to finish at 932.52 just one point below the peak of 933.52 reached during a Washington hearing Thursday. Rails advanced 0.76 to 213.39 but utilities skidded 0.50 to 161.26. Standard & Poor's 500 stock index 0.71.

'Fantastics' in Sixth Year

NEW YORK (AP)—The Fantasticks, this month headed into the sixth year of a gold-mine run at a small Greenwich Village playhouse.

The longest running show in town by far, it has to date grossed over $1.1 million on an investment of $16,500 and reaped 1,500% profit, to the gleeful surprise of hesitant backers.

Playing its 2,088th performance on its May 3 birthday, the show ranks fourth in New York's all-time musical longevity records, behind "My Fair Lady" (2,717), "The Threepenny Opera" (2,611)—which also ran Off-Broadway—and "Oklahoma!" (2,212).

Other companies have put on the whimsical fantasy about young love in more than 300 American and foreign cities.

A reluctant landlord who didn't think it would run booked the show at the Sullivan Street playhouse, a 150-seat hall that was once a speakeasy. Through last Dec. 31 he had collected $94,645.01 rental.

1965... Mr. BUYER
By DEN H. BLAND
General Sales Manager

Q. When is the best time to buy a car?
A. The most important time to buy is just before you have to overhaul or do major repairs to your old car. Most repairs can be done by the dealer at a smaller cost than you. This allows you more dollars to trade with.

Throughout the year there are several sales that mean savings to you. For one, every May and June, Chevrolet has a National Sales Contest. All salesmen, managers, dealers & wholesale people participate in this once-a-year sale.

This you know! It's May and at Harbor Chevrolet we have the Hottest—Sizzling Sales Campaign that has ever hit Southern California!

Your Dodge Dealer does!

Look for this warranty seal. It marks the cars which are eligible for the remainder of the Chrysler Corporation 5-year, 50,000-mile engine and drive train warranty.
It shows the exact number of months and miles still coming to you under that Chrysler factory warranty. A warranty that covers 700% of the parts and labor. One hundred only cars that were engineered better could carry it to begin with.
Any car that wears this seal, you can buy with confidence. And the car is the best.

Built up practically "from scratch" in the last six years into the million-dollar-a-year bracket, Glas-Dock, Inc., is being spotlighted today as "Industry of the Month" by the Growth and Diversification Division of the Long Beach Chamber of Commerce.

Glas-Dock, at 1340 W. 7th St., is headed by Lloyd G. Clark, who organized the corporation and originally designed the dock system — featuring fiberglass floats, now the firm's principal product in addition to boats.

Clark, formerly in the general construction business at Los Angeles, started developing his fiberglass ideas in 1957. He set up business at the old Ford plant here six years ago and has been at the present location five years.

In that time, inquiries have come in from many nations and only last Wednesday, Capt. Colin McMullen, a London marine consultant, stopped over in Long Beach on his way home from Australia to see Clark and check up on the fiberglass floats.

McMullen said there was fast-growing boating interest in Great Britain, with a serious shortage of docks.

"We are very interested in Glas-Dock methods of providing facilities that are economical and extremely efficient," McMullen commented. "They should last," he said of the fiberglass docks. He said the type of docks in England were a serious maintenance problem and not as durable as the fiberglass type would be.

Some 17 major marinas are under consideration for development in Britain now.

McMullen lauded Clark, saying the Long Beach man is "doing a great future service for yachtsmen" by building dock material which would safely last indefinitely.

McMullen, a retired naval officer, travels extensively on harbor business. He has been in Australia two months for harbor study and was returning at once from Long Beach to New York and London.

He had high praise for the Long Beach Marina, and said local authorities in Britain were trying to encourage construction of modern marinas.

Clark recently was in Tahiti on business, regarding a dock project for a hotel there, and has received inquiries about his firm's fiberglass docks from many countries, including Japan, Germany, Australia, France, Spain and in South America.

This brings Glas-Dock into the field of international trade, which is a growing factor in the Long Beach economy.

As was the old-fashioned way, Clark's first docks were built of poles on oil drums, until he established his fiberglass method.

Docks are supported by fiberglass pontoons up to 4 by 8 feet in size. The fiberglass can be colored permanently, is non-corrosive, impervious to dry rot and not affected by marine borers or any sea life, according to Clark.

Glas-Dock also builds boats at its three-acre site, which has channel frontage in the harbor area and is near the Procter & Gamble plant; but 90% of its business now is in docks.

Pontoons have been built for many projects in this area, including the Alamitos Bay Yacht Club, Long Beach Marina, Marina del Rey, State Marina at Lake Elsinore, 62nd Place Marina, Long Beach, and others including private docks in the Naples area.

There have been many commercial dock projects and fueling docks for oil companies. Also docks in Lake Mead and the Salton Sea.

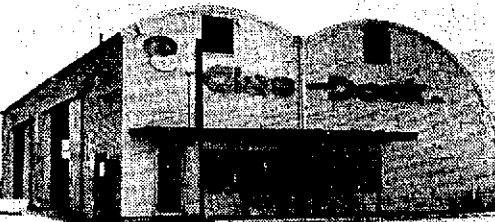

Fiberglass is made in the east and processed in Southland plants.

So Glas-Dock is receiving the accolade this month from the Long Beach Chamber. This is part of a program sparked by the C of C Growth and Diversification Subcommittee, headed by Richard Caldwell, General Telephone Co. executive.

One of the subcommittee's projects is putting the spotlight on various local industries in a 'Profiles of Success' series of articles through cooperation of the Independent, Press-Telegram Progress Section, whose editor is a member of the subcommittee.

Rheem Develops Steel Panels for Outside Walls of Houses

FULLERTON—A new modular wall panel system designed for quick, economic home construction that retains the styling of custom Drive, features exterior steel walls. The pre-engineered, factory-assembled wall system was developed to help reduce building construction Manufacturing Company's costs and to permit flexibility in design, according to H. T. Halvorsen, Rheemetal Division vice president.

Halvorsen said four men needed only four hours to erect exterior walls for the home, including doors and windows. No special tools or erection equipment were required.

New Light Plane Facility to Open

Morgan Air Corp., Long Beach Airport, will open its new $100,000 light aircraft maintenance facility at 3495 Lakewood Blvd. about June 15, it was announced last week.

The firm has been operating for the past 19 months as a sub-lessee of Medina Aircraft Co., 3425 Lakewood Boulevard, according to Earl Morgan, partner in the venture with Chuck Mason.

The new facility will be housed in a 120 by 120-foot rigid-frame, clear-span steel hangar constructed by Pascoe Steel Corp. of Pomona.

OFFICE SPACE, including a pilots' lounge, will occupy 980 square feet of the structure, now being built on approximately 1.75 acres west of Lakewood Boulevard under lease from the city.

The company will offer complete light aircraft maintenance service, including major engine overhauls, airframe rebuilding and radio installation.

Big Office Complex Will Include Conference Room

A University Plaza conference room for up to 100 persons is being readied for immediate opening at the new office complex across from the Orange County Airport in Newport Beach.

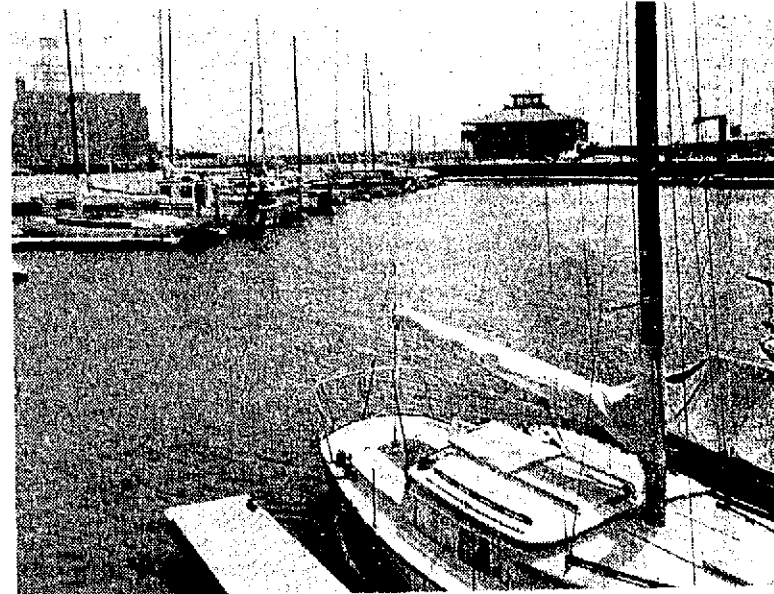

The 1,200 square foot facility will be available for public use as well as to tenants of the building, according to Cap Blackburn, one of the developers of the project.

THE DELUXE model home was displayed at a press preview last week by representatives of the Rheem company and of U.S. Steel Corp., which is cooperating in the new development.

Other executives present included:

G. W. Mallatratt, director and group vice president of Rheem; Kenneth P. Lasky, Rheemetal Building Division residential sales manager; and U.S. Steel executives

SUBCONTRACTORS AND SUPPLIERS

19 L.B. Area Firms Share in Memorial West Project

At least 19 Long Beach-area firms will be subcontractors and suppliers on the $2,500,000 Memorial West addition now being constructed at Memorial Hospital of Long Beach, 2801 Atlantic Ave.

The list was released last week by Gary Bertisch of Willens & Bertisch Co., Inc., Los Angeles, general contractors.

Local firms are: Basin Sanitation, Bixby Knolls Stationery, Inc., California Office Supply & Equipment Co., Clarke Plumbing & Heating, Contractors Equipment Co., Dooley's Hardware Mart, Kelley Printing & Stationery Co., Livingston-Graham, Long Beach Hardware Co., Long Beach Peoples Ice Co., M & M Stake Co., Mojave Sales, Inc., Pacific Curtainwall, Inc., Parks Crane & Welding, Rossman Lumber, Signal Hill Sheet Metal, Twining Laboratories, Unique Cabinet & Fixture Co., and Vic Case Engineering Co.

BERTISCH indicated that this list does not include all of the suppliers that may be doing business with major subcontractors, but the total is not yet available.

The Memorial West project also drew the plaudits of the Long Beach Building and Construction Trades Council, AFL-CIO.

W. P. Evans, president of the council, said in a statement: "We in the Long Beach Building Trades welcome the new addition to Memorial Hospital because of the added facilities that will be made available to people in Long Beach and surrounding areas and for the creation of employment for our people."

GROUND BREAKING for Memorial West was held March 19. At present, the bulk of the excavation is done and caissons are being sunk in the ground to support the new structure.

New construction will join the existing hospital building at ground level on the west side. Completion is anticipated early in 1966.

The Memorial West project actually consists of two parts.

First of these will be an attached, expanded 30,000-square-foot Rehabilitation Medicine facility combining physical therapy, occupational therapy, speech and hearing therapy.

SECOND PART of the expansion will be Memorial West itself, and 86-bed Advanced Care unit designed to speed the recovery of patients not acutely ill so that they may return to their normal daily activities with a shorter period of hospitalization and at less cost than regular hospitalization.

This is a new concept of patient care in this area, emphasizing gradual independence of the patient to speed his recovery, with the unique feature of reducing costs for patients who can benefit from this service.

Tulsa Firm Opens New L.B. Office

Martin J. Garrity, Long Beach, has been added to the staff of Lee Keeling & Associates, Tulsa, Okla., petroleum consulting firm, as a senior evaluation engineer, according to Lee A. Keeling, president of the firm.

Coincidentally, Keeling announced the moving of the firm's California offices from Los Angeles to Long Beach, where Garrity will be headquartered at 5855 Naples Plaza.

GARRITY comes to Keeling from his position of principal petroleum engineer for the city of Long Beach Department of Oil Properties. In this position he was actively engaged in the planning and supervision of numerous waterfront projects, as well as in the development of unitization plans for several fault blocks in the Wilmington Field.

He has been active in the engineering, planning and development of the Wilmington Field since 1955. It is now the world's largest waterfront project.

Garrity's previous experience included heat exchanger and gasoline plant design with Union Oil Company of California and drilling and production engineering for the Oil Development Department of Union Pacific Railroad.

WHILE WITH the latter firm he represented them in engineering committees establishing equity factors in the formative stages of unitizing the Wilmington Field. He was employed by the City of Long Beach in 1958, remaining until March 1 of this year.

He has authored two technical articles on waterfront performance in the Wilmington Field.

Capital expenditures this year will amount to approximately $40,000,000, compared with $32,000,000 in 1964.

The company has 10 branch stores under construction with six to open in 1965—two in Akron and one each in Washington, D.C., Pittsburgh, Cleveland and Southern California.

The company has acquired control of Meier & Frank Co., Inc., through an agreement with the holders of a majority of that company's common stock.

Meier & Frank operates the leading department store in Portland, Ore., with one major branch in Portland and another in Salem, Ore., and had sales of $71,100,000 in the year ended Jan. 31 1965.

Rather than attempting all-steel houses, Rheem has developed the steel panel components for outside walls only. The components are assembled into 4 by 8 foot modules which form load-bearing walls, making customary house framing unnecessary.

The three-and-one-half-inch thick panels consist of galvanized sheet steel with gypsum board lining and fiber glass insulation.

USE OF FOUR-FOOT modules gives home builders several important advantages, including freedom of design, minimized construction costs in the field and reduced initial costs because they can be mass-produced, according to Rheemmetal, which produces the panels at its Huntington Park plant.

Scout Post 284 Backed by Oilmen

Lynch is assisted by Ken L. Riedman and Al C. Nelson, of Richfield Oil Corp. Numerous prominent oilmen and supporters also help the group, which now includes 24 students from Poly, Wilson, Jordan and St. Anthony high schools.

WALLS OF STEEL

This house at 709 Arbolado Drive, Fullerton, was built by Rheem Manufacturing Co. to model its new steel wall panel system for home building. Exterior walls of house and garage are built of steel modules. It took four men only four hours to erect panels for entire house. No framing is necessary.

exciting ideas "reflect the changing character of requirements for home building, school and light commercial construction."

The model home in Fullerton was built by Rheem at a cost of $10.50 per square foot. Officials said volume building would pare this cost.

Rheem had used steel components for some houses in Palm Springs and for more than a thousand school classrooms. Recently started in San Diego was a 240-unit garden apartment complex to be built with steel module walls.

OFFICIALS explained that builders will use regular subcontractors in the field on the Rheem type houses and that such construction would be termite and dry rot free; quake resistant; incombustible and have high insulation qualities.

Rheem plans to market only to builders now.

The Fullerton model house contains three tons of steel, blended into other building materials. It sits among other homes in a fine residential area, and passersby looking at the house would have to be told it has steel walls, for the house blends in with adjacent homes.

May Co. Expects to Have 85 or 90 Stores by 1970

Al Hunter Wins Essay Contest

NORWALK—Al Hunter, a John H. Glenn High School senior, was named the overall winner of the Norwalk-La Mirada Board of Realtors essay contest.

Hunter, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Hunter of 12602 Longleaf Drive in La Mirada, was named the winner over students from Excelsior, Norwalk and La Mirada high schools.

Each student was required to write an essay on the topic "What We Expect From Our Legislators." The essay then was presented to the board and the winner from each school was named by the board.

Hunter was presented the award (a $50 U.S. Bond and a plaque) at a breakfast held at the Student Center at Cerritos College. He was accompanied by his Great Books teacher, Irving Marks.

May said the total store area, now 15,200,000 square feet, will be increased about 31% by branch store construction during the next five years in the 11 large metropolitan areas where the May company's department stores are located.

Capital expenditures this year will amount to approximately $40,000,000, compared with $32,000,000 in 1964. The company has 10 branch stores under construction with six to open in 1965—two in Akron and one each in Washington, D.C., Pittsburgh, Cleveland and Southern California.

The company has acquired control of Meier & Frank Co., Inc., through an agreement with the holders of a majority of that company's common stock. Meier & Frank operates the leading department store in Portland, Ore., with one major branch in Portland and another in Salem, Ore., and had sales of $71,100,000 in the year ended Jan. 31 1965.

Six Use 10%

NEW YORK (UPI)—New York city's six daily newspapers use about 10% or $1.5 million worth, of the 300 million pounds of newsprint ink produced in a year, according to Chemical Week.

Show Home With Steel Panel Walls

Bennett S. Chapple Jr. and Robert J. Ritchey, who came from Pittsburgh for the event.

Rather than attempting all-steel houses, Rheem has developed the steel panel components for outside walls only. The components are assembled into 4 by 8 foot modules which form load-bearing walls, making customary house framing unnecessary.

The three-and-one-half-inch thick panels consist of galvanized sheet steel with gypsum board lining and fiber glass insulation.

USE OF FOUR-FOOT modules gives home builders several important advantages, including freedom of design, minimized construction costs in the field and reduced initial costs because they can be mass-produced, according to Rheemetal, which produces the panels at its Huntington Park plant.

Chapple said Rheemetal's

Scout Post 284 Backed by Oilmen

Now in its third year, Long Beach Petroleum Explorer Scout Post 284 provides programs and projects beneficial to local high school seniors interested in engineering and science, according to Jack C. Lynch, post adviser.

Lynch is assisted by Ken L. Riedman and Al C. Nelson, of Richfield Oil Corp. Numerous prominent oilmen and sup-homes in a fine residential plies also help the group, which now includes 24 students from Poly, Wilson, Jordan and St. Anthony high schools.

WALLS OF STEEL

This house at 709 Arbolado Drive, Fullerton, was built by Rheem Manufacturing Co. to model its new steel wall panel system for home building. Exterior walls of house and garage are built of steel modules. It took four men only four hours to erect panels for entire house. No framing is necessary.

exciting ideas "reflect the changing character of requirements for home building, school and light commercial construction."

The model home in Fullerton was built by Rheem at a cost of $10.50 per square foot. Officials said volume building would pare this cost.

Rheem had used steel components for some houses in Palm Springs and for more than a thousand school classrooms. Recently started in San Diego was a 240-unit garden apartment complex to be built with steel module walls.

OFFICIALS explained that builders will use regular sub-contractors in the field on the Rheem type houses and that such construction would be termite and dry rot free; quake resistant; incombustible and have high insulation qualities.

Rheem plans to market only to builders now.

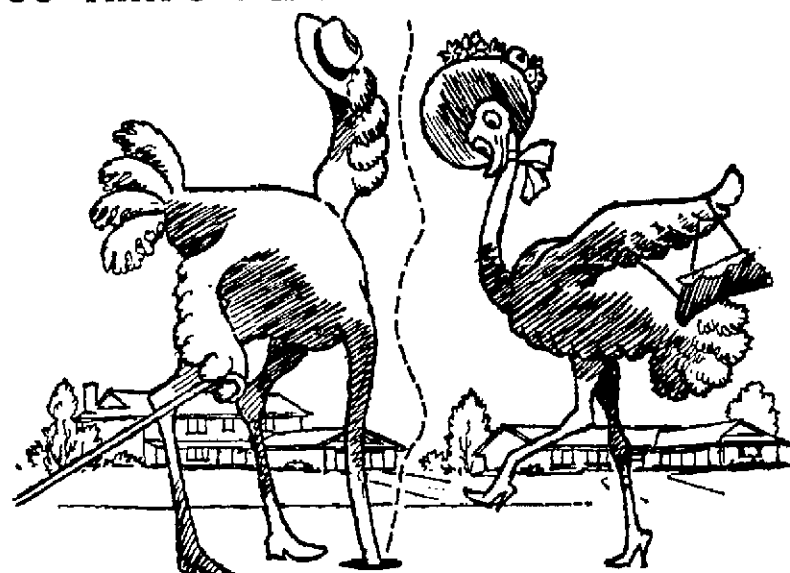

The Fullerton model house contains three tons of steel, blended into other building materials. It sits among other prominent oilmen and sup-homes in a fine residential area; and passersby looking at the house would have to guess from Poly, Wilson, Jordan and St. Anthony high schools.

It's Love at First Flight for New Piper Model

Editor's Note: Following is another in a series of stories by Lee Craig, P-T aviation editor, who discusses various aspects of new model light aircraft after having flown them for a test run from Long Beach Airport.

For most pilots, exposure to Piper's sleek new Twin Comanche results in love at first flight.

In fact, it usually happens before you climb in. For the Twin Comanche is, in our opinion, the most beautifully designed light aircraft ever built.

The one we flew—with Bob Cenicerros, general manager at Long Beach Aztec, along—had an electric trim switch on the left control wheel.

THIS ADDED the finishing touch, so far as we are concerned, to a tremendously impressive airplane. Of course, the switch was set to produce nose-down trim when it was flicked up, which seemed backwards to us. A minor point, however.

The Twin Comanche, with its two 160-horsepower Lycomings, leads the field in economy, with little ground given to its competitors in speed.

At 75% power, you move along at 194 miles an hour, yet those efficient little engines are sipping fuel at only 17.2 gallons per hour.

DON'T MISS the fine selection of home values offered to you in "Homes for Sale" in the Classified Section 139.

CENICERROS recently became a bridegroom, marrying Fran Bera, many times winner of the Powder Puff Derby. Which raised an interesting question.

When two 10,000-hours-plus pilots marry, who sits in the left seat when they fly?

On their Mexican honeymoon flight, both did, Bob says. Not at the same time, presumably, but on alternate hops.

ONCE, however, Cenicerros, riding in the right seat, proved who wore the marital pants.

Fran, at the Comanche's controls, demurred at going into a little Mexican field. Visibility, she said, was too poor.

Cenicerros gave her a look. "Down, girl," he said. They were on the ground a few minutes later.

Adult Family Housing Appeals at Fernhill

Fernhill in Huntington Beach offers the kind of housing that adult families need, according to Frank McFarland of McFarland and Matlocks Inc. sales agents for Fernhill.

McFarland pointed out that as children grow into adulthood, the role of the home in their lives significantly alters. "As a consequence, the role of the home also alters in the lives of the parents until they find themselves with a completely new set of housing needs," he said.

Fernhill is designed to meet the needs of adult families, McFarland said. Fernhill is strictly for adults and families with children 15 or Fernhill prices start at $22,400. Six and one-fourth percent financing and 30 year loans are available. Terms are from 5% down.

Fernhill is located one mile east of Huntington Harbour on Warner Avenue. Visitors may take Bolsa Chica Road south from San Diego Freeway to Warner and turn left on Warner to Fernhill.

TOTAL CONVENIENCE
Premier Homes North and South in Huntington Beach feature "Total Convenience" kitchens. In addition to double oven, range and dishwasher, kitchens include bench-mounted mixer-blender, and dispenser for foils and papers.

Many Factors Combined in Premier Subdivision

The all around desirability of Huntington Beach as a residential area and Premier Homes' four ways-better design formula have proved a successful combination reports Frank McFarland of McFarland and Matlocks Inc. sales agents. More than 70 homes in the Premier North and South subdivision have been sold since grand opening 60 days ago.

The sales executive explained that Premier builder William Rousey had carefully studied competitive offerings in the Huntington Beach area, and then designed and built Premier Homes on a four-ways-better formula. The four ways Premier Homes are held to be better are: "Total Convenience" kitchens; custom styling including Contemporary and Polynesian, VA financing is available at Premier with 5 1/4% loans, FHA minimum down financing, and conventional financing from 5% down is also offered.

Ideal Location Brings Park South Popularity

Over 30% of the single family residences at Park South, a private, walled community located at 190th and Main Streets, have been sold, according to sales director Red Clark.

Clark reports that 93 of the 265 homes in the development have been sold and cites the close-in location of Park South as the major reason for the brisk sales.

"The choice location of Park South has been the determining factor in many of our sales," reports Clark. "Park South is one of the few remaining developments where prospective buyers may purchase a single family home in a convenient, close-in location."

The centrally-located community of three and four-bedroom homes boasts freeway close accessibility to both business areas and beaches. Located just half-a-mile from the Harbor Freeway-San Diego Freeway interchange, Park South residents are but 15 minutes by freeway from the downtown Los Angeles business complex and are a short drive in the other direction from the beaches at Santa Monica, Playa del Rey and Redondo Beach. Also nearby are the popular Del Amo and South Bay shopping centers.

In the near future, a wealth of recreational facilities—including an 18-hole golf course—will be available for use by Park South residents at Los Angeles County's new 177-acre Victoria Park. Now under construction adjacent to Park South, the golf course is expected to be completed early next year.

Other facilities planned for the park include a large swimming pool, baseball and football fields and a sprawling picnic area.

Park South features all underground utilities with streets, sewers and sidewalks in and paid for.

Huntington Bay Holds Open House

A record of sorts—involving appetites—was set when some 600 persons promenaded through Huntington Bay on opening day at the Hunt- ington Beach development by Kaufman and Broad Homes, Inc.

Guests consumed more than 200 pounds of barbecued prime ribs, some 50 pounds of oven-baked beans and a like amount of macaroni salad, 80 dozen hamburger rolls, seven homemade cakes, a dozen cases of cola, and countless cups of coffee.

The barbecue feed ran from 1 to 4 p.m., as scheduled, but was ribless for the last half hour. Late arrivals settled for improvised snacks.

The complimentary eating spree came after visitors toured seven Towne House and one-story garden patio home models, registered for a free television set, and viewed or participated in several poolside sets of square dancing in Huntington Bay's club- house.

"I GUESS the atmosphere here, and the fact that our community is designed for 'active' adults, was evident to our visitors," commented

Mrs. Jo Hannigan, social di- rector at Huntington Bay.

Activities are conducted continuously at K&B's 120-home development, located three minutes from the ocean at Adams Avenue and Brook- hurst Street. Price range on one-to-four bedroom homes is $12,990 to $17,490.

Ron Sheeley, Van Lissen Realty, will introduce Freed. The meeting starts at 8 a.m. at the Crown Bowl, 1301 Arden.

Huntington Bay Holds Open House

A record of sorts—involving appetites—was set when some 600 persons promenaded through Huntington Bay on opening day at the Huntington Beach development by Kaufman and Broad Homes, Inc.

Guests consumed more than 200 pounds of barbecued prime ribs, some 50 pounds of oven-baked beans and a like amount of macaroni salad, 80 dozen hamburger rolls, seven homemade cakes, a dozen cases of cola, and countless cups of coffee.

The barbecue feed ran from 1 to 4 p.m., as scheduled, but was ribless for the last half-hour, late arrivals settled for improvised snacks.

The complimentary eating spree came after visitors toured seven Towne House and one-story garden patio home models, registered for a free television set, and viewed or participated in several poolside sets of square dancing in Huntington Bay's clubhouse.

"I GUESS the atmosphere here, and the fact that our community is designed for the 'active' adults, was evident to our visitors," commented

Mrs. Jo Hannigan, social director at Huntington Bay.

Activities are conducted continuously at K&B's 120-home development, located three minutes from the ocean at Adams Avenue and Brookhurst Street. Price range on one-to-four bedroom homes is $12,990 to $17,490.

Lakewood Man Gets Union Oil Vice Presidency

M. S. Thomson, of 4150 Annapolis Road, Lakewood, has been elected vice president in charge of refining for Union Oil Co.

Thomson, a graduate of Purdue University in chemical engineering started with Union as a laborer at its Los Angeles Refinery in 1940. After a series of promotions that took him back and forth between the local refinery and Union's Oleum Refinery near San Francisco, he was named manager at Los Angeles in 1959.

He headed the refinery for three years until 1962, when he became manager of planning and development for the company and, subsequently, its director of refining.

VISITORS' DAY

More than 600 people swarmed over the Huntington Bay development during opening-day celebrations and consumed prodigious amounts of barbecue provided by the management of the adult activity tract.

Four Guesses

They have something in common

One is concerned with walking, one with riding, one with flying and one with (other people's) parking.

Two wear hats to work. Two wear slacks. All are different ages. All lead different lives.

In most ways the women pictured aren't much alike. But, in one way (one very important way), they're four of a kind.

What puts them in the same league? Why are they included in this week's photo quiz? There is one special reason.

What's their (alike) line ... or why are they four of a kind?

- It's not that they all work, or have dark tresses.
- It's not that they know each other (they haven't met) or that they all live in Long Beach (even though they do).
- It's not that they buy the same breakfast food, watch the same TV thrillers. It's not that they voted for Goldwater, practice Karate, passed a toothpaste test. They weren't asked such questions.

Now that you've eliminated all those, have you guessed what this uniformed, dark-haired foursome has in common?

Here are two hints. 1. Those who say there's nothing in a name weren't talking about this one. 2. To these women, work's a sideline. Their other line — the one that makes them four of a kind — is the most important facet of their lives.

BONNET PARTY

Hats will g-r-o-w on trees

Women's Auxiliary to the Salvation Army would like to put a bee in your bonnet. Save May 21! That's when the auxiliary will present its annual, glamorous Bonnet Party and fashion show benefit.

Affair will take place in Davis Hall at Army's new Citadel, 455 E. Spring St. Tea from 12:30 to 1:30 p.m. will precede afternoon's many faceted attractions.

Highlight of the day will be awarding of approximately 30 high-style hats (many of considerable value) from the famous Bonnet Tree, all donated by local merchants. There will be an additional number of other door awards given. Wilma Hastings will present a style show of designer fashions from Parisienne, furs from Luckwoods.

In addition, there will be a series of artistic tableaux presented by Army personnel, in the manner of Laguna Festival of Arts' Pageant of the Masters, depicting Army work.

All women of the community are invited. Tickets will be available at the door or may be purchased in advance from Mrs. Jess Grundy, 1188 Bryant Rd. Background music will be provided by the Paul King Combo.

THE MALE VIEW

Mom's pretty special--when you notice

By ANDY PARK
 I, P-T Staff Writer

I've spent the past 13 years finding out that my mother wasn't perfect. As a matter of fact, she was pretty imperfect.

It isn't as though this knowledge was ever hidden from me while she was alive; it's just that I never thought about it much, either way.

Not thinking about her much either way was, in cruel reality, a result of the way she provided for my life.

She was working when my father died and I was nine years old, so she just kept working. And I kept eating. I never thought about it much. It was only a few years ago I found out she already had given her notice and had planned on "retiring" to become a housewife when he died.

We moved back to my hometown and into grandmother's house when I was 10. I never thought about it much; figured it was just a little more inexpensive that way.

In going through her papers after she died, I found out she took over the mortgage on grandmother's house so her mother would always have a place to live.

She never remarried; though I knew of several men who asked her out from time to time. But I never thought about it much.

My aunt, her sister, told me one night last year about a proposal she turned down because the suitor, justifiably, wanted a home for them alone, without grandmother.

She got dizzy halfway up a flight of stairs once, but I never thought about it much. She had put on a little weight. I knew, but her curly red hair and her fiery Irish temper were still intact.

Our doctor, after he signed her death certificate, told me she had had a heart condition for five years but refused to do anything about it. I was in college and she couldn't afford the time off, she had told him.

She was always very proud of her wedding rings, but she never was a "show-off" about them; I never noticed them much.

For a year before she died she hadn't worn them, but I never even noticed. I found the expired pawn certificate after her death. It seems she wanted a "suitable" graduation present for me.

It's not easy to find out your mother wasn't perfect. Not easy at all. When you don't notice things much, it even comes as somewhat of a shock.

Had she been more toward perfect, she could have handled her money better, found a husband and provider, thought of herself first and restricted her charity to only what she could provide without hardship.

But she didn't. She wasn't even smart enough to let anybody know about it so they could help. And she wasn't smart enough to raise a child with the perception to notice without it being pointed out to him.

This will be the 13th year that I have worn a white flower on the second Sunday in May. It's just a little difference—a white flower instead of a red one. Lots of people who don't notice much won't even notice the difference.

I do, finally.

WILD WAVES SAY

Snow melts, skiers still cavort

SLATS BUFFS of Long Beach Ski Club cavorted at their 26th annual awards dinner-dance at Meadowlark Country Club, laughing on the outside, crying on the inside as the snow melts quickly away and they wind up their official winter season.

"Skip" Hayward, new president, announced memberships will open June 1 for those interested in skiing. Information is available through the Chamber of Commerce. Joiners will be eligible for a whole program of summer funnery, including water skiing June 12-13 on the Colorado River at Parker Dam.

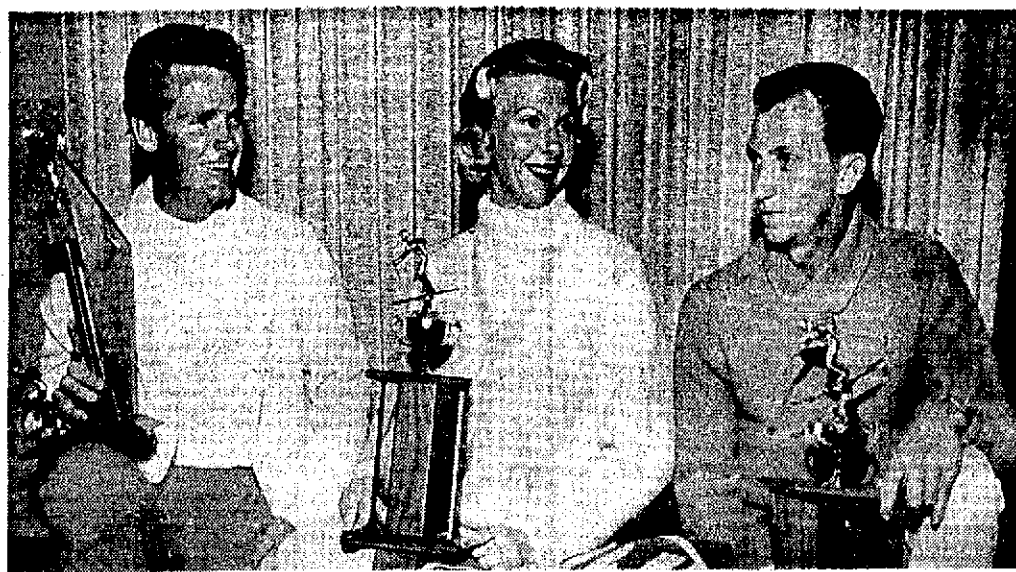

Richard Dooley, veep, arranges the winter events while Linda Hoskins is in charge of "dry land" gatherings—including camping trips, luaus, boating jaunts and plain party parties. If you think this is primarily a man's group, think again. The other new officers are Amy Dubich and Shirley Coffman. Summer or winter, schuss enjoy yourselves.

WHILE the Desert Inn Classic Golf Tourney was going on in Las Vegas, there was a classic event of another nature taking place. Lee Ison and Mary Ann Kenaley, a steady-dating twosome for years, took a golf-watching time out to get married! The newlyweds are at home at 815 Loma. They'll go to Mexico City in June for their honeymoon.

DISPLAYING grins of sheer pleasure, below, are Maurice and Betty Lewis. And who wouldn't? They were beginning voyage on SS Lurline for Hawaii. During Polynesian vacation, they'll celebrate their 38th wedding anniversary.

THESE SMILES SPELL ALOHA
... Maurice and Betty Lewis

WITH WINTER-WON TROPHIES, SKI CLUB WINNERS LOOK FORWARD TO SUMMER PLAY

EXCITED enough to get there under their own power, Nancy and Carl Wellard flew to New York Thursday. But I'm glad they took a plane, otherwise we'd have been flooded with those Unidentified Flying Objects stories that keep popping up.

Again by plane they'll go to London and, after that, their itinerary reads like perpetual motion. They'll tour Europe by Volkswagen, which they'll bring back to park in garage about July 4.

EVERYTHING was pretty—hostesses, honoree, guests and the packages they carried, when Betty Kesler and daughters, Jan, Susann, Toland entertained at a bridal shower for Gae Chatten (Gae will become bride of Frederick Lach end of June). Among those in both festive dress and frame of mind for tea party shower were Barbara Markham, Donna Holland, Susan Lemon, Jean Bennett, Susan Cunningham, Alice Elliott, Karen Wood, Jane Newcomb, Carrie Reach, Judy McCook and honoree's mother, Mrs. M. W. Chatten. Gay day for Gae.

SEEMS THAT Fran and Oliver Connor have a pet cocker spaniel, Smokey, who loves to do the twist. But he likes a partner so Fran frequently puts on swing records and they twist. They were dancing up a storm this week until something went twaang in Fran's back. No real damage. Just left the petite blond a little muscle-bound and one dance hound temporarily a wallflower.

WHEN Pat Corbett and Bob Dilday were "in residence" at Memorial Hospital at the same time, they decided to stir up a little excitement. They wrote Helen and Bob Crow (Bob and Pat are both city councilmen) asking to be sent some Geisha girls. Instead, Helen sent them fancy Chinese dinners from their restaurant, Mr. C's. Quick as a wink, Pat and Bob sent her a bouquet as thank you but couldn't resist the plaintive note, "But where were the Geisha girls?" Bob is now home, on strict orders to rest and Pat's due to go home Sunday.

FANS OF Model A Fords, Jeannie and Paul Bauer, returned from a Model A Club tour to Yuma, Ariz. Paul, who has restored the classic, he owns (he's worked on it for seven years with tender, loving care) can perk the grand, old lady along the road at a snappy 50 to 55 miles per. They hope to go on a national Model A drive-through to Dearborn, Mich., in August, to join fans from throughout the U.S. To Michigan in a classic oldster—in AUGUST? You'd HAVE to love 'em.

More speedily and in greater comfort, the Bauers will go to New York in June. Walt Disney (Paul works for him) is sending five couples at a time back in the company's private plane to see the fair. Smart Walt! What great public relations that is between himself and wives of men who work for him.

GREAT welcome home party was given for Bonnie and Dr. Harry Orme on return from their medical missionary trip to Pakistan by Walter and Diane Janssen and co-hosts Betty and C. Duane Mooney at the Janssen's Huntington Harbour home. About 60 were there for a 5 to 7 p.m. cocktails affair. The Ormes impishly outdid everyone by arriving in full Pakistan native dress... she in a lovely silk orange sari; Harry in gray Persian lamb hat and tunic over wrinkled native trousers. A riot!

Snow melts, skiers still cavort

SLATS BUFFS of Long Beach Ski Club cavorted at their 26th annual awards dinner-dance at Meadowlark Country Club, laughing on the outside, crying on the inside as the snow melts quickly away and they wind up their official winter season.

"Skip" Hayward, new president, announced memberships will open June 1 for those interested in skiing. Information is available through the Chamber of Commerce. Joiners will be eligible for a whole program of summer funnery, including water skiing June 12-13 on the Colorado River at Parker Dam.

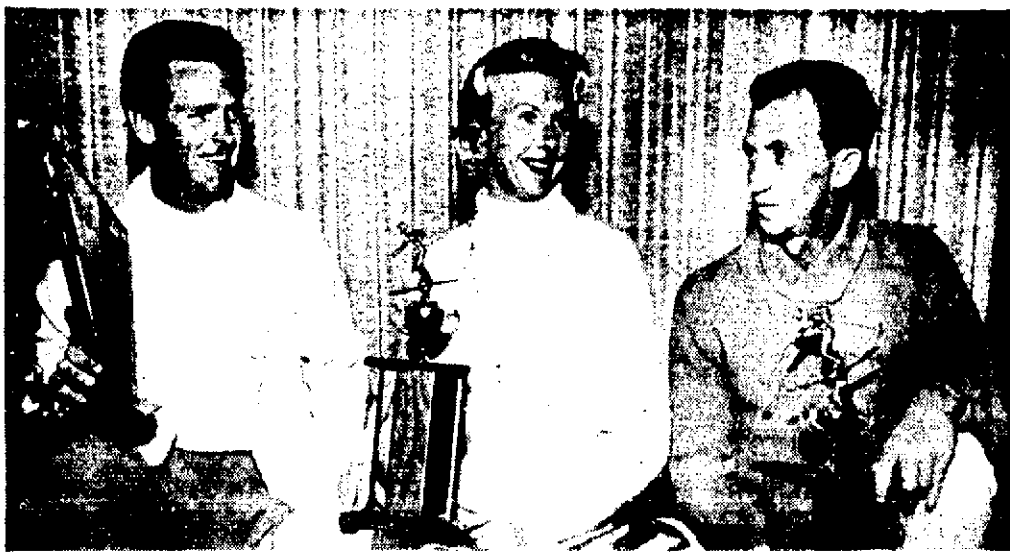

Richard Dooley, vee, arranges the winter events while Linda Hoskins is in charge of "dry land" gatherings—including camping trips, luaus, boating jaunts and plain party parties. If you think this is primarily a man's group, think again. The other new officers are Amy Dubich and Shirley Coffman. Summer or winter, schuss enjoy yourselves.

WHILE the Desert Inn Classic Golf Tourney was going on in Las Vegas, there was a classic event of another nature taking place. Lee Ison and Mary Ann Kenaley, a steady-dating twosome for years, took a golf-watching time out to get married! The newlyweds are at home at 815 Loma. They'll go to Mexico City in June for their honeymoon.

DISPLAYING grins of sheer pleasure, below, are Maurice and Betty Lewis. And who wouldn't? They were beginning voyage on SS Lurline for Hawaii. During Polynesian vacation, they'll celebrate their 38th wedding anniversary.

THESE SMILES SPELL ALOHA

EXCITED enough to get there under their own power, Nancy and Carl Wellard flew to New York Thursday. But I'm glad they took a plane, otherwise we'd have been flooded with those Unidentified Flying Objects stories that keep popping up.

Again by plane they'll go to London and, after that, their itinerary reads like perpetual motion. They'll tour Europe by Volkswagen, which they'll bring back to park in garage about July 4.

EVERYTHING was pretty—hostesses, honoree, guests and the packages they carried, when Betty Kesler and daughters, Jan, Susann, Toland entertained at a bridal shower for Gae Chatten (Gae will become bride of Frederick Lach end of June). Among those in both festive dress and frame of mind for tea party shower were Barbara Markham, Donna Holland, Susan Lemon, Jean Bennett, Susan Cunningham, Alice Elliott, Karen Wood, Jane Newcomb, Carrie Reach, Judy McCook and honoree's mother, Mrs. M. W. Chatten. Gay day for Gae.

SEEMS THAT Fran and Oliver Connor have a pet cocker spaniel, Smokey, who loves to do the twist. But he likes a partner so Fran frequently puts on swing records and they twist. They were dancing up a storm this week until something went twanging in Fran's back. No real damage. Just left the petite blond a little muscle-bound and one dance hound temporarily a wallflower.

WHEN Pat Corbett and Bob Dilday were "in residence" at Memorial Hospital at the same time, they decided to stir up a little excitement. They wrote Helen and Bob Crow (Bob and Pat are both city councilmen) asking to be sent some Geisha girls. Instead, Helen sent them fancy Chinese dinners from their restaurant, Mr. C's. Quick as a wink, Pat and Bob sent her a bouquet as thank you but couldn't resist the plaintive note, "But where were the Geisha girls?" Bob is now home, on strict orders to rest and Pat's due to go home Sunday.

FANS OF Model A Fords, Jeannie and Paul Bauer, returned from a Model A Club tour to Yuma, Ariz. Paul, who has restored the classic he owns (he's worked on it for seven years with tender, loving care) can perk the grand, old lady along the road at a snappy 50 to 55 miles per. They hope to go on a national Model A drive-through to Dearborn, Mich., in August, to join fans from throughout the U.S. To Michigan in a classic oldster—in AUGUST? You'd HAVE to love 'em.

More speedily and in greater comfort, the Bauers will go to New York in June. Walt Disney (Paul works for him) is sending five couples at a time back in the company's private plane to see the fair. Smart Walt! What great public relations that is between himself and wives of men who work for him.

GREAT welcome home party was given for Bonnie and Dr. Harry Orme on return from their medical missionary trip to Pakistan by Walter and Diane Janssen and co-hosts Betty and C. Duane Mooney at the Janssens' Huntington Harbour home. About 60 were there for a 5 to 7 p.m. cocktails affair. The Ormes impishly outdid everyone by arriving in full Pakistan native dress... she in a lovely silk orange sari; Harry in gray Persian lamb hat and tunic over wrinkled native trousers. A riot!

UNUSUAL COLLECTION

Children and pets star in photographic salon

Have you ever heard the phrase... "If you've got a child, a pet or a pretty girl, you can bet your picture will be a success?"

Photographer Perry Griffith has combined children and pets in a series of portraits now on display in Buffums' Children's Department. It introduces a new process of full natural color with startling realistic effects.

The photographic exhibit features children from the Long Beach area—each with his favorite pet. There are 52 portraits in the collection.

"WE'VE studied the ideas, the lighting and the composition of the Renaissance painters," says Griffith. "Whether the setting, indoor or out, we seek classic poses and attitudes that lift portraits out of the ordinary."

The children, ranging from 3 to 16 years, are photographed in their own world, with their own possessions.

Most of the portraits include a pet. "This very fact raises the charm of the portrait at least 50%," he said. "It also raises your chances of failure to the same proportion."

The exhibit will be on display Monday through May 22.

GOP WOMEN INVITE—

All hands on deck for nautical fling

Members of the Los Angeles County Federation of Republican Women will point their compasses for Ports O'Call Village in San Pedro Tuesday when they set sail on a "Nautical Fling."

The fund-raising event will get underway at 10 a.m. when the M.V. "Princess" launches several 40-minute cruises of Los Angeles Harbor. After the cruises, members will browse through shops in the village until 1 p.m. when luncheon will be served in the Ports O' Call and Yankee Whaler restaurants.

A SCORE of GOP members will be on deck during and after the luncheon modeling the newest styles for fun in the sun, by land and by sea, presented by the Forecast Shop of the May Co., Lakewood.

Haute couture will vie with styles for the budget-minded, from sun-up casuals to after-sundown sophisticates.

Mrs. James K. McCall of Long Beach is chairman of the benefit for the organization which includes more than 22,000 members in 95 county-wide clubs.

ASSISTING will be Mmes. Peter J. Felker, Clifford Kip Johnson, Carl Ernest Johnson, Wayne Scott, Elizabeth Phillips, Theron A. Martin, Floyd T. Winslow, Harold C. McLendon, Archie Lee West, Ralph J. Bertele, Roscoe L. Wood, James Crawford, Roland E. Raasch and Basil Ruysdael.

Reservations may be obtained from Mrs. McCall, 343 Bay Shore.

UNUSUAL COLLECTION

Children and pets star in photographic salon

Have you ever heard the phrase . . . "If you've got a child, a pet or a pretty girl, you can bet your picture will be a success?"

Photographer Perry Griffith has combined children and pets in a series of portraits now on display in Buffums' Children's Department. It introduces a new process of full natural color with startling realistic effects.

The photographic exhibit features children from the Long Beach area—each with his favorite pet. There are 52 portraits in the collection.

"WE'VE studied the ideas, the lighting and the composition of the Renaissance painters," says Griffith. "Whether the setting, indoor or out, we seek classic poses and attitudes that lift portraits out of the ordinary."

The children, ranging from 3 to 16 years, are photographed in their own world, with their own possessions.

Most of the portraits include a pet. "This very fact raises the charm of the portrait at least 50%," he said. "It also raises your chances of failure to the same proportion."

The exhibit will be on display Monday through May 22.

Here's what they have in common-- KIDS!

"MY MOM drives a bus," 9-year-old Marilee Bridgman will tell you with pride. Her mother, Mrs. Lloyd Bridgman, has been driving for the Long Beach line for 13½ years, likes the work because she "likes to meet people." The rest of the Bridgman family includes two sons, 22 and 18, and husband, Lloyd.

Each has poured innumerable glasses of milk, fretted over bouts of sniffles, made untold trips to doctor's offices, given spankings, glowed with pride when good marks came home from school.

They've all received small bear hugs and unexpected scrawled notes of adoration. They've all known, at times, the wrath of the very young—the thunderous look, the defiant pout.

And, along with this, they've all managed, somehow, to rush from their homes looking deceptively well groomed, calm and unperturbed to put in a "working" day.

They share the title of "working mother"—along with millions of other American women. They represent the striking 20th-century change in the American household, the American way of life.

We wish them—and all the other mothers of Long Beach—a happy Mother's Day!

Mrs. Eugene Moreke likes the out-of-doors and children. As a school crossing guard she gets full quota of both. The job (three shifts, five hours total) gives her plenty of time with her handsome teens: Donna, 16, and Terry, 17. It also helps her husband, a welder, balance the budget.

PRETTY Tammy, 6, and Judy, 8, don't play nurse, they play meter maid. They're the daughters of auburn-haired Martha Fox, who's been scootering around, checking overtime parking for three years now. "The craziest things happen," she says. "I've been asked to deliver packages, mail letters, take dimes for ice cream."

MRS. LLOYD CROWL, mother of three girls, has worked for 13 years as aircraft sealer at Douglas (her husband works there, too). Now, with two daughters away from home (one with an aunt, one married), Mrs. Crowl has so much time, she goes to school evenings. Pictured here, married daughter, Mrs. Harry Hendrick (left), and at-home daughter, Sandy, 14.

IT'S AN OLD TURKISH CUSTOM

To be 'in' this season... throw on a towel—or two!

Once was when terrycloth could be described only as very dry—and twice as dull. Not so today. The once-utility fabric has become high fashion... so much so, in fact, that if you want to be "in" this season, the credo is: just wrap yourself in a bath towel or two. The idea started with Gerald Pierce, a brilliant young southern designer and a new name in the fashion world, who was inspired to create the fashions shown on this page when he caught his first glimpse of Stevens' Utica "Fine Arts" towel collection. Some of his creations are so simply constructed that they can be whipped up without patterns. For others, sewing directions are available from stores where towels are on display. Pierce went back to the beginning of fashion for his chic designs... back to the days of the ancient Egyptians, Etruscans, the Romans, the Gothic—when textiles were all hand woven. In the collection are togas, beach skirts, a bikini, hip-huggers, ponchos and shorts.

(For information on where merchandise is available, call I, P-T women's department, HE 5-1161.)

DRIPPING WITH FASHION... hep hip-hugger slacks whipped up with needle, thread and two Stevens Utica Fine Arts towels in "Louvre" pattern.

TWO BATH TOWELS and one hand towel, plus fringe and a tassel, combine to make this poncho (left) one of season's most dramatic beach fashions.

A BEAUTY OF A BURNOOSE... at home on the sands of Morocco or Long Beach. Created from three "Louvre" patterned towels that contrasts avocado with vivid blue. Also available in yellow-saffron combination or red muted with brass.

DEAR ABBY

You are lucky, you know

ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: My husband is a clergyman. He is young, handsome, warm-hearted and understanding. He is constantly being called upon to help poor frustrated women work out marital problems.

My problem: How do I handle love-starved women who transfer their affections to my husband? Women who feel that he can fill the need in their lives for affection and understanding. He never visits women in their homes unless their husbands are present. But some women stop him on the street, come to his office and even to his home. Everywhere I go, I hear how "lucky" I am to be married to such a wonderful man. What can I do?

—PARSON'S WIFE

DEAR WIFE: Are you bragging or complaining? I once knew a clergyman who was all the things your husband was. Many women attempted to transfer their affections to him, but he was a past master at rerouting them. He told them in his most ministerial tone that they should emulate Benjamin Franklin, and go fly a kite.

DEAR ABBY: I dialed a wrong number by mistake and this man who answered had such a nice, friendly voice I talked to him for about an hour. He said he was 33 and not married. He also told me lots of other interesting things about himself. He's been in the service and has been practically all over the world. Toward the end he even got a little romantic and said he would like to meet me in person. I am only 17 but I look much older. I didn't give him my telephone number but I told him my name. He gave me his phone number and his first name, but not his last. Should I call him? I would really like to meet him.

—TELEPHONE SWEETHEART

DEAR SWEETHEART: This man sounds as though he would make a lovely stranger. Keep it that way. Anonymous telephone trysts are shabby and dangerous. Unless you want to live shabbily and dangerously, forget you ever heard his voice.

DEAR ABBY: Why does my wife always take the kids' side against me? I told our older boy he couldn't have the car because he failed two subjects. The very next day my wife gave him permission to take the car.

She said she wanted him to do some "errands" for her, but he kept the car all day and didn't get back with it until midnight.

This morning I told our 16-year-old daughter she could not go to her girl friend's slumber party because at the last one the police were called to pull the boys off the side of the house. Well, my wife told her she could go!

It looks like my wife is trying to cut me down in front of the kids just to be ugly. I would like your opinion on this.

—DAILY READER

DEAR READER: No wonder so many children are confused about what's "right" and what's "wrong." Parents should NEVER fight in front of their children, even if one must give in knowing he's right. It's the responsibility of parents to make the "rules" for their children to follow, and to support each other in enforcing those rules. You and your wife need to iron out your own differences. She is probably punishing you for something that has nothing to do with the children.

Problems? Write to ABBY, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif. For a personal reply, enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

IT'S AN OLD TURKISH CUSTOM

To be 'in' this season... throw on a towel—or two!

Once was when terrycloth could be described only as very dry—and twice as dull. Not so today. The once-utility fabric has become high fashion... so much so, in fact, that if you want to be "in" this season, the credo is: just wrap yourself in a bath towel or two. The idea started with Gerald Pierce, a brilliant young southern designer and a new name in the fashion world, who was inspired to create the fashions shown on this page when he caught his first glimpse of Stevens' Utica "Fine Arts" towel collection. Some of his creations are so simply constructed that they can be whipped up without patterns. For others, sewing directions are available from stores where towels are on display. Pierce went back to the beginning of fashion for his chic designs... back to the days of the ancient Egyptians, Etruscans, the Romans, the Gothic—when textiles were all hand woven. In the collection are togas, beach skirts, a bikini, hip-huggers, ponchos and shorts.

at home on the sands of Morocco or Long Beach. Created from three "Louvre" patterned towels that contrasts avocado with vivid blue. Also available in yellow-saffron combination or red muted with brass.

DRIPPING WITH FASHION... hep hip-hugger slacks whipped up with needle, thread and two Stevens Utica Fine Arts towels in "Louvre" pattern.

TWO BATH TOWELS and one hand towel, plus fringe and a tassel, combine to make this poncho (left) one of season's most dramatic beach fashions.

DEAR ABBY

You are lucky, you know

ABIGAL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: My husband is a clergyman. He is young, handsome, warm-hearted and understanding. He is constantly being called upon to help poor frustrated women work out marital problems.

My problem: How do I handle love-starved women who transfer their affections to my husband? Women who feel that he can fill the need in their lives for affection and understanding. He never visits women in their homes unless their husbands are present. But some women stop him on the street, come to his office and even to his home. Everywhere I go, I hear how "lucky" I am to be married to such a wonderful man. What can I do? —PARSON'S WIFE

DEAR WIFE: Are you bragging or complaining? I once knew a clergyman who was all the things your husband was. Many women attempted to transfer their affections to him, but he was a past master at renouncing them. He told them in his most ministerial tone that they should emulate Benjamin Franklin, and go fly a kite.

DEAR ABBY: I dialed a wrong number by mistake and this man who answered had such a nice, friendly voice I talked to him for about an hour. He said he was 33 and not married. He also told me lots of other interesting things about himself. He's been in the service and has been practically all over the world. Toward the end he even got a little romantic and said he would like to meet me in person. I am only 17 but I look much older. I didn't give him my telephone number but I told him my name. He gave me his phone number and his first name, but not his last. Should I call him? I would really like to meet him. —TELEPHONE SWEETHEART

DEAR SWEETHEART: This man sounds as though he would make a lovely stranger. Keep it that way. Anonymous telephone trysts are shabby and dangerous. Unless you want to live shabbily and dangerously, forget you ever heard his voice.

DEAR ABBY: Why does my wife always take the kids' side against me? I told our older boy he couldn't have the car because he failed two subjects. The very next day my wife gave him permission to take the car.

She said she wanted him to do some "errands" for her, but he kept the car all day and didn't get back with it until midnight.

This morning I told our 16-year-old daughter she could not go to her girl friend's slumber party because at the last one the police were called to pull the boys off the side of the house. Well, my wife told her she could go!

It looks like my wife is trying to cut me down in front of the kids just to be ugly. I would like your opinion on this.

—DAILY READER

DEAR READER: No wonder so many children are confused about what's "right" and what's "wrong." Parents should NEVER fight in front of their children, even if one must give in knowing he's right. It's the responsibility of parents to make the "rules" for their children to follow, and to support each other in enforcing those rules. You and your wife need to iron out your own differences. She is probably punishing you for something that has nothing to do with the children.

Problems? Write to ABBY, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif. For a personal reply, enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

...An old city growing younger

Delta Air Lines jetted a plane full of happy passengers to Venezuela recently. The occasion! inaugural flight to Caracas, capital of that country. Among the guests, who enjoy the line's famed Southern hospitality, was Mary Neth, I-PT Women's Section reporter. The discoveries she made during the five-day Venezuela vacation follow.

By MARY NETH
I, P-T Staff Writer

If Caracas were a woman, she'd be the envy of all femininity.

She's growing younger, more chic, more modern and sleeker every day. I'm told that in 1936 people stopped in the streets to gawk when a building more than six stories high was raised.

Now blase Caraqueños (there are close to a million of them), take skyscrapers in their stride—and the stride's a pretty quick one, too.

If you're looking for the old, the picturesque, Caracas, at first glance, might be disappointing. The emphasis is on the new; the pace is much like that in the U.S.

Cabbies weave their way through snarls of L.A.-like traffic with foot on gas, hand on horn (if you can't honk, you may as well park).

Modern stores of steel and glass lure throngs of shopping shoppers. At night, neon lights beckon to the restless—advertising the quick-pulsed entertainment of cabarets.

But this Caribbean metropolis offers more than big city excitement. It's a place of contrast—busy, yes; brusque, no.

Modernity is cushioned with old-world charm, softened by balmy Caribbean breezes (it's always bikini weather, temperatures hover in the 70s all year long).

THE CITY abounds with huge luxury hotels, vacation resorts in themselves. There's the luxurious Macuto-Sheraton, complete with 1,500-foot private beach and brilliant green Andean backdrop. There's the Tamanaco, whose tiered upper-floors resemble the Incan pyramids. And at the very summit of El Avila, the highest mountain of Caracas, the luxury hotel Humboldt reaches like a modernistic finger into the sky.

This hotel (no longer in operation), was one of the expensive brain children of dictator Perez Jimenez now on trial for his spendthrift reign.

Though today only a skeleton crew of caretakers occupies the posh hostelry, the cable car trip to see it shouldn't be missed. It's one of the most memorable sight-seeing trips in Venezuela.

ALL TOLD, Caracas is a tourist's paradise—a privileged place of sunshine and beautiful settings.

But, as in all 20th century paradises, all's not perfect. Caracas—Venezuela—has its problems. The biggest problem—babies.

Venezuela, cited by a recent U.S. News and World Report as having one of the most stable of South American governments, has undergone a baby boom bigger than we have had in the U.S.

Result: as more and more babies weighed in, there's worry that the economy may go out of balance.

What can be done to keep the scales neat and even? "We need to bring in some people—more tourists," says a Venezuelan businessman.

"More tourists mean more restaurants, laundries, etc.—more jobs."

He feels this Caribbean land of sunshine has yet to receive its maximum of foreign visitors.

"People get the wrong idea," he explained. "For example, on a recent trip to Mexico I picked up a newspaper with big black headlines about trouble in Venezuela. All it amounted to was a little skirmish in a tiny jungle outpost. But, foreigners didn't know that."

"It makes me sick—just a few trouble makers, and so much bad publicity."

We wonder how this Venezuelan businessman is feeling today in light of recent stories from his country.

But, perhaps there is a bright side. . . . The adventure-some tourist, (who wants to vacation away from the mob,) may have found his Eden.

But, he'd better enjoy it now. There's no doubt more and more Americans soon will be jetting their way to this Caribbean playground.

Caracas is a city of contrast: modern skyscrapers, memories of a historic past. National Pantheon, housing tombs of liberator, Simon Bolivar, and other heroes of War of Independence, is a tourist "must."

LBAA has brilliant show at art museum

By VIRGINIA LADDEY

The Long Beach Art Association makes a brilliant showing with its 41st Annual Juried Exhibit at the Long Beach Museum of Art, 2300 E. Ocean Blvd. The 40 paintings, drawings, graphics and sculptures will be on exhibit through May 30.

This group seems to have galvanized into new levels of creative action this year, investigating all kinds of avant-garde directions and succeeding admirably.

Marcella Julie Tinner's "Composite No. 1 — The World's Her Oyster" is seven canvases fitted into a rectangle. Some are smoothly painted; others are in impasto; the lady, a jewel, the oyster, and a framed floral still life. This ambitious enterprise "comes off" with splendor.

EUGENE Wallin's ovoid "Yellow Counterpoint," shimmering against a white ground, seeming to reflect someone mysterious, is a new development in style by this versatile painter. Rose Clark's "Moon TV" is a wonderful machine painted in grey and black with one stroke of greyed yellow. Billy York's "Tree" bursts into glorious foliage above a sensitively sketched, gnarled trunk.

An ink wash — broad strokes in wet and dry — by Byron Rodarmel menacingly suggests "Warrior" on a grand scale. The joyous patterning of leaves and branches surrounding "The Embrace," a print by Julie Polowsky, is elegant.

Magnolia to open 'Happy'

"The Happy Time," a warm, human comedy by Samuel Taylor, will open at Magnolia Theater, 2400 Magnolia Ave., Thursday at 8 p.m.

The plot concerns a colorful, engaging French Canadian family during the 1920s. Maman is trying to raise her 13-year-old son, Bibi, in an atmosphere of dignity, decorum and good influence but Papa, who conducts orchestra in a vaudeville house, is a deterrent to her plans with his eccentricities, such as bringing home the delectable Mignonette, an out-of-work acrobat, to be a maid.

OTHERS who foil Maman are Grandpa, a bon vivant who chases widows, Uncle Louie, a tippler who carries a water cooler filled with wine about with him, and Uncle Desmond, known as the Casanova of Canada.

'Tobacco Road' goes Upstairs

For its eighth production, The Theater Upstairs will stage "Tobacco Road" beginning Friday at 8:30 in Morgan Hall, 835 Locust Ave. The show will run Fridays and Saturdays for six weekends.

The play by Jack Kirkland was adapted from the novel by Erskine Caldwell. It holds the record of the second longest run in Broadway history — 3,182 performances, or eight years.

THE STORY concerns the Lester family: father Jeeter, (Ben Daniels), who dreams of planting a garden beside his ramshackle poor-white home; the idiotic son, Dude (Red Kelly), who marries a ravenous evangelist, Sister Bessie (Roxxy); a daughter, Pearl (Trina Sagers), with strong sexual inclinations; and another, Ellie May (Sonja Roberts), who is sold into marriage and keeps running back home.

Put Brown directs; reservations are being taken now at Magnolia's box office.

HOW TO GET MARRIED (6)

Get set for marry-go-round of parties

By JUDY HAZLETT
I. P. T. Staff Writer

The gala social whirl before a wedding is all part of the fun. There are as many varieties of parties as there are wedding ceremonies, so get out your notebook and start circling the important dates.

Showers usually take place at a luncheon, bridge party, tea, supper or some form of entertainment in the bride's honor. Many times, the hostess may plan it as a surprise — or she may ask you to help plan the guest list.

The variety of showers is numerous... linen, lingerie, stocking, china, kitchen, book, miscellaneous, silver, etc.

These parties should begin no sooner than two months prior to the wedding. You must remember to keep a list of all gifts with the names of presenters and to send thank-you notes within a few days after each party.

Thank-you notes are a

MUST. How rude of a young bride-to-be to accept gifts from those who have been thoughtful enough to search for just the right gift, then not have the manners even to say "thank you."

They do not have to be long or involved... merely mention somewhere in the note the name of the gift item. Never, never send pre-printed thank-you notes for shower or bridal gifts.

A few days ago, this note was received from a reader:

"Many, many times the bride neglects to write thank yous. In fact, at least six mutual friends mentioned to me recently they had not received acknowledgements of wedding gifts they'd sent. We compared notes. In one case, none had received thank yous, but later they were remembered with birth announcements, which each of us promptly tossed in the wastebasket."

You see, people do remember when their thoughtfulness is not recognized.

A FEW days before the wedding, you may want to give a bridal party. It is sometimes called a "spinster luncheon" (or dinner). This is a good time to present your gifts to the attendants... or maybe you'll want to wait until the rehearsal dinner.

If a luncheon doesn't strike your fancy, how about a late afternoon tea or trousseau affair, where guests can have a peek at your new wardrobe.

And the groom, no doubt, will want to entertain his attendants with a bachelor's party. It usually is planned a few days before the wedding, often on the same evening as the bride's party.

He can take his guests to a club or a private dining room. He, too, can present the best man and ushers with their gifts at this time.

The bridal dinner (or rehearsal dinner, as it is often called) is traditionally given by the bride's family. However, if the groom's family really wants to plan the event (and the bride's family doesn't object) it's a good way for them to get in the swing of the excitement. The dinner should include all of attendants, their husbands and wives, parents of the bride and groom, the clergyman and his wife, also any out-of-town relatives of the bridal pair.

The occasion is usually formal, however, if the wedding is less formal, you may want to serve a buffet supper following rehearsal.

A club, hotel, restaurant or your home is a good place to hold the dinner. For a home party, it is easier for all concerned to have the food catered, if the budget allows. How can you expect mother to spend all day in the kitchen and then look perky for the rehearsal that evening? In any case, it is wise to choose a site close to the church so no more time than necessary be wasted on travel following rehearsal.

INVITATIONS may be word-of-mouth or a small personal note if you desire. These parties are the obligations of the bride and groom. Although your friends will probably want to give you several parties that will take place before the ceremony.

There is a lot to do before your wedding, and you may think there just isn't enough time for everything. As mentioned before, if you take care of your obligations one at a time, there will be time for plenty of fun along with the necessities.

Find any excuse for a party... this will be one of the happiest times of your life and you want it to be a "time to remember."

(Next: Responsibilities of the bride's parents.)

If you have questions concerning wedding etiquette for bride, parent or guest, write to "How to Get Married," Long Beach Independent, Press-Telegram, 604 Pine Ave., Long Beach. All questions will be answered by mail or in this column.

BEFORE AND AFTER: A 'YEAR OF BEAUTY' TREATMENT... Mrs. Robert Czerwony stages house re-do at luncheon

THE LONG BEACH FIXITS

Navy wives paint up

By MARY ELLIS CARLTON

When a fleet of Navy wives sink their oars into a project, you can expect things to shape up pronto... like ship-shape! Especially with outgoing president Mrs. Herman (Katie) Graven at the helm. Take, for instance, the Navy Officers' Wives Luncheon the other day at Allen Center, when program chairman and engineer-for-a-day Kate Graven and would-be carpenter Mrs. Robert Czerwony staged a lively testimonial for Paint-Up, Clean-Up, Fix-Up Week and Long Beach's Year of Beauty campaign.

Now I ask you, who could redecorate and landscape a house in one-half hour? Well, they did. With Mrs. Graven behind the mike and Mrs. Czerwony behind the hammer (also up a ladder), the sad abode pictured above got its face lifted with a few "simple" feats like a re-roofing job, new shutters, bright paint on the door.

After the house was ship-shape, the do-it-yourselfers painted and fixed up themselves for a fashion show of new spring styles with Jan Rinella as commentator.

DEAR MRS. MAYFIELD

Prompted gift is nothing

DEAR MRS. MAYFIELD:

A friend of mine says she reminds her husband a month ahead of time that their anniversary is due. I wonder if I should do that?

For about nine years, my husband remembered our anniversary with a gift or dinner out but for the last five or six years, he has ignored it. When I remind him the next day, he gets angry.

I don't like the idea of telling him a week or two early that our anniversary is coming up. I feel that any gift he might buy then would be meaningless.

Why has he changed? Do you think my friend has the right idea?—J.L.

DEAR J.L.:

When I have to remind my husband he should buy me a gift, that's when I do without. I won't say it has never slipped his mind but his remorse when he discovers his forgetfulness is worth ten times more than any gift he might have bought because I reminded him early enough. No, I don't think your friend has the right idea.

Why your husband has changed is hard to say. Did you ever give him an anniversary gift? Personally, I think a wife should be just as appreciative as a husband — and show it — for good years of marriage.—M.M.

DEAR MRS. MAYFIELD: Jack and I got married two years ago. I have four teenage children from my first marriage and he has two girls, 10 and 5.

His parents live near us and continually buy lavish gifts for his children but my children receive only very small gifts at Christmas time and a card with a dollar bill for their birthdays. I'm sure his mother doesn't mean anything by this because she is always very friendly with my children but it bothers me.

Should I just let the situation continue as it is?—P.S.

DEAR P.S.: When the opportunity presents itself for a private little chat with your mother-in-law why not tell her how hurt your children are because they think she loves the two younger children so much more than she does them; how they look upon her as their grandmother too and love her as such.

She surely doesn't realize what effect her partiality has on the children. M.M.

He engineers tasty enchiladas

By MILDRED K. FLANARY
L. P. Food Editor

Believe it or not, he's a fourth generation Californian. And, while today's Chef of the Week, Robert O. Pollard, was born in Reedley (near Fresno), he returned to Downey as a child, the town in which his dad was born. He hasn't budged since.

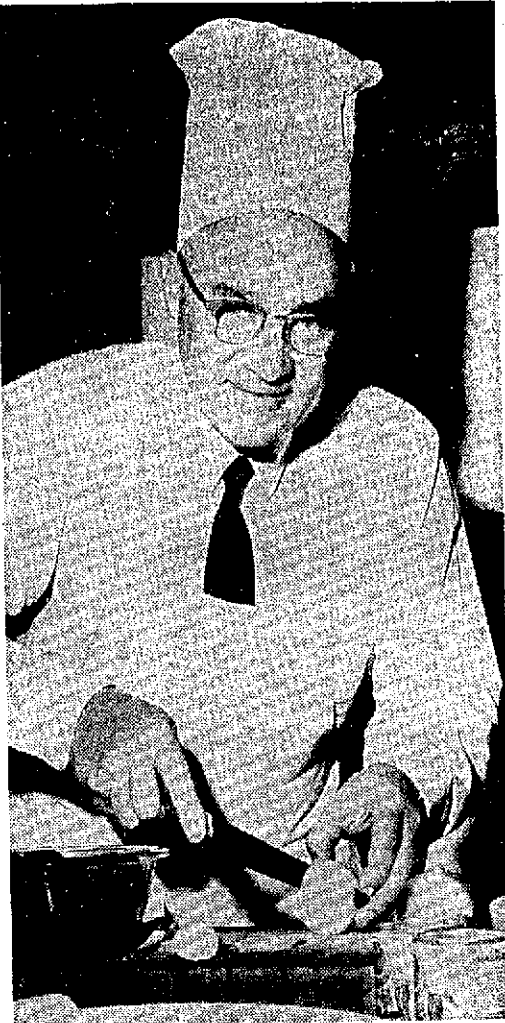

In fact, Pollard joined the Richfield Oil Co. in Downey in 1936. Starting as a roustabout, he climbed to junior engineer, division engineer, division superintendent and in 1955 became division manager, the position he now holds. He's the only man in the company who hasn't been exposed to a change of scenery.

Pollard received his degree in petroleum engineering from U.S.C.

On the board of directors of the Chamber of Commerce, Pollard belongs to the Petroleum and the Pacific Coast Clubs.

HAVING JUST celebrated a birthday on April 13, his family's gift to him was the thing he wanted most... a 1963 Model T. Ford Coupe. His family includes wife, Marion, and sons Bob, Jr., a 1st Lt. in the Marine Corps, stationed in Le Jeune, N.C., and Kirk, 13, a student at Downey Junior High. There are three daughters, Gwynne, married and living in Palos Verdes Hills, Darin, 18, a freshman at U.C. Santa Barbara, and Judy, a Downey High junior.

"A hacker at golf," (his

words), Pollard is a great do-it-yourselfer but, confidentially, he seldom cooks. His newest interest is building shortwave sets and intercoms with his son. And while the sets never seem to work, Pollard is fortunate in having a brilliant son-in-law (he's with S.T.L., a space technology laboratory) who can successfully put things in an operable condition.

Our "Chef's" recipe for Enchiladas—Early California Style, is truly his and he can prepare them.

ENCHILADAS - EARLY CALIFORNIA STYLE

- 1 pkg. (12) corn tortillas
- 2 large cans chopped olives
- 1 can (size 2 1/2) Las Palmas Red Chili Sauce
- 1 lb. sharp cheddar cheese
- 2 onions
- Shortening

Grate cheese on large side of grater. Grind onions and sauté with boiling water, then drain. Fry each tortilla in hot shortening a few seconds until puffed (not brown). Lay two tortillas side by side on sheet cake pan. Sprinkle each tortilla with 1 tbsp. each of cheese, onion, olives, and sauce. Repeat procedure with remaining tortillas, stacking six tortillas to a stack, adding a little extra sauce and cheese on top. Bake in slow oven 350 degrees, 20-30 minutes, basting occasionally.

To serve, quarter each stack. Will serve 8 generously. Serve with green salad, garlic bread or flour tortillas, and fruit dessert. Refrigerate any left-overs for wonderful cold snacks, or if cut in bite size make great cocktail treats.

Oswald Jacoby Careful play for contract

Vic Mitchell of New York has long been known as one of the most brilliant of our top experts, but in this year's Spring Nationals he had to take a back seat to his wife Jacqui. She started out the week by playing on the winning women's team, while the best Vic's men's team could do was to come in second.

Then when the major event — the Vanderbilt Cup — came along Vic's team lost out in the quarter finals while Jacqui's team went one round further by defeating the defending champions.

One of the key hands in that victory is shown today. Jacqui, sitting South, passed over East's three-heart bid but when her partner persisted to four diamonds Jacqui revalued her hand and went on to game.

West doubled and opened the deuce of hearts.

JACQUI won with dummy's ace and studied the hand carefully. She had to lose a spade and a club. In order to make the contract it was up to her to ruff two hearts in dummy and to lead clubs twice in hope of finding either the king or queen in the East hand.

She solved her problem by leading the ten of clubs at trick two. East played the king and Jacqui won with the ace. She ruffed a heart, returned to her hand with a trump, ruffed her last heart, drew trumps, and conceded one club and one spade.

STREET SCENE IN DAR ES SALAAM, showing modern buildings completed or under construction in a downtown area.

ACROSS THE EARTH TO DAR ES SALAAM

Land of 'in a little while'

When Alitalia Airlines recently inaugurated DC8 jet service from Rome to Dar es Salaam, capital of Tanzania (Tanganyika and Zanzibar), Independent Press-Telegram and Evening News travel editor Fred Taylor Kraft was aboard with 55 other journalists from the U.S. and 12 foreign countries.

By Fred Taylor Kraft
Travel Editor

DAR ES SALAAM, Tanzania—No two clocks—and their faces seem to look down upon you almost anywhere you go downtown in this Indian Ocean port city of south-east Africa—seem to give the same time.

"It makes no difference," explained an African native with a shrug. "This is the land of 'in a little while'."

The city's strangely beautiful name means "Haven of Peace" in Arabic, and it appears on the surface to be just that — quiet, relaxed, plumed with the riotous colors of the tropics.

Dar es Salaam does, indeed, seem to be just the place to sit back comfortably with a glass of cold British-made beer, yawn, and sigh contentedly that you will go on about your business "in a little while."

Here, 45 miles across the bay from the island of Zanzibar, and three degrees below the equator, you feel that Los Angeles International Airport is at the far end of the earth. And it is — 10,718 miles away with an 11-hour time differential.

BUT DESPITE our long flight from Rome (3,910 miles), with but brief stops at Athens, Greece, and Nairobi, Kenya, we were not tired. We had speeded at nearly 600 miles an hour over country upon which the Queen of Sheba traveled wearisome miles by camel train so long ago. And to make the trip even more relaxing, our pilot was Sergio Mosetti, the great one who a few weeks ago flew Pope Paul VI to the Holy Land.

Mosetti brought us in for a perfect landing on the velvety soft wings of a tropical evening cooled by a recent shower, and we were greeted at the airport by a group of Africans who sang and danced to the rhythm of crude native instruments. It was the type of friendliness that we were to encounter everywhere we went in Tanzania (pronounced Tan-zan-EE-uh) from a people sometimes shy but never bearing a cloaked hostility that some of us had feared after reading of troubled times in some other African countries. Tourists are welcome — if they do not intend to stay.

MOST NATIVES who contact tourists speak English at least passably well but, among themselves, they stick to Swahili, a language of African origins with Arabic implications.

Dar (as most Africans refer to their capital) has come a long way since 1862 when, no more than a native fishing village, it was chosen for his headquarters by an Arab sultan. Then came colonization by the Germans. After World War I it was a British protectorate, and its importance as an Indian Ocean port began to grow. Today, with a population of 130,000, Dar es Salaam is pulsating with activity from its wharves, agriculture, and ivory trade from its vast interior.

LIKE MOST cities, building is booming. A university is under construction on a hill overlooking Dar, some of its multi-storied structures already completed. When all of its facilities are in operation, it will be one of Africa's largest institutions of higher learning.

Everyone here, it seems, turns out to trade at the public marketplace, a huge area crammed with tropical fruits of all kinds, fresh-killed meat, household utensils, clothing, and native-made products and trinkets.

And no visit to Dar is complete without a call at the Ivory Room where elephant and rhino tusks, leopard skins and other trophies of the hunt are sold at auction. At the last sale, proceeds totaled 750,000 pounds sterling (more than 2 million U.S. dollars).

AN ELEPHANT tusk brings about $2.80 a pound, that of a rhino, 80 shillings ($11.20). Most ivory is shipped to Hong Kong where cheap labor carves it into many kinds of salable objects.

We were told that last year government game rangers killed 4,000 to 4,500 elephants to bring nature to a better balance. Certainly, that is a lot of elephants until you realize that Tangan-

Cost of flying goes lower

The American public is flying cheaper all the time — and excursion fares point up the trend dramatically.

Excursion fares are those which fix criteria for a given trip—a time limit of a few days up to a month to complete a round trip.

For example, the average jet coach fare on most U.S. routes is around 5 cents per mile. Yet an excursion, such as Delta Air Lines' 8,000-mile circle trip from Los Angeles to New York and the Caribbean, is 20% lower at only 4 cents a mile.

That vast circle trip lets a traveler stop anywhere on the Delta system so long as he completes the entire journey in 30 days. The complete fare: $325.

An even more dramatic example of the bargain aspect of excursion fares is illustrated by a new excursion fare—this one a triangle.

The round trip jet coach fare between Los Angeles and Chicago is $210.90. For just $1 more, Continental Airlines and Delta offer an excursion which gives the traveler a visit to New Orleans. Continental flies the passenger to Chicago while Delta carries him from Chicago to New Orleans and back to Los Angeles.

If you figure the cost of that extra leg by the mile, the passenger is paying 1/10th of a cent for the 795 extra miles of jet travel.

American Airlines has taken a major step in its "Autojet" program—the combination of the jet airliner and the public car for vacation travel—by signing a low-cost agreement with three leading firms in the field.

The agreement, new in effect, makes it possible for American's passengers to rent an Avis, Hertz or National automobile at their destination for $99 a week. The plan provides for seven days of unlimited free mileage, a beginning full tank of gasoline, and no drop-off charges between cities involved in the program.

A standard sedan will be available under the plan. Extra days beyond the one-week period will be charged for at a rate of $15 a day, with the customer paying for all gasoline. Car rental reservations must be booked 24 hours in advance and can be made through a travel agent or the sales offices of American Airlines, Avis, Hertz or National.

"From Here to There," selected the best color film in its category last year, again highlights United Air Lines' free and accessible exhibit at the 1965 New York World Fair.

The 8½-minute Saul Bass-directed film, which was praised by the International Film and Television Festival of New York for capturing the human experience of jet travel, was viewed by 700,000 persons during the fair's first season. It will be shown every 15 minutes from 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. daily in the exhibit's air conditioned 118-seat theater located adjacent to General Motors' popular Futurama.

The big apple orchards of the Oak Glen area, between Yucaipa and Beaumont, are now in full bloom and the blossoms will continue good through next Sunday.

This is the word from Blackie Wilshire, president of the Oak Glen Apple Growers Assn., who invites nature lovers and camera enthusiasts to visit the area via the San Bernardino Freeway or U.S. 60.

Restaurants along the winding Oak Glen Road are open, serving their specialty — hot apple pie.

There's a wonderful touch of the Old World in Victoria, the Capital City. See the Parliament Buildings, browse through fine antique stores, and relax.

The Interior is a land of especially varied attraction. Whether you're touring or vacationing, you'll enjoy quiet lakes, friendly people, magnificent scenery.

People from many lands and cultures have shaped British Columbia. The Northwest tribes of Indians are renowned for the totem poles they carve and their hand-crafts.

Throughout the Province you'll find first-class restaurants and accommodation, some ranking with the finest on the West Coast.

STREET SCENE IN DAR ES SALAAM, showing modern buildings completed or under construction in a downtown area.

ACROSS THE EARTH TO DAR ES SALAAM

Land of 'in a little while'

When Alitalia Airlines recently inaugurated DC8 jet service from Rome to Dar es Salaam, capital of Tanzania (Tanganyika and Zanzibar), Independent Press-Telegram and Evening News travel editor Fred Taylor Kraft was aboard with 55 other journalists from the U.S. and 12 foreign countries.

By Fred Taylor Kraft
Travel Editor

DAR ES SALAAM, Tanzania—No two clocks—and their faces seem to look down upon you almost anywhere you go downtown in this Indian Ocean port city of south-east Africa—seem to give the same time.

"It makes no difference," explained an African native with a shrug. "This is the land of 'in a little while'."

The city's strangely beautiful name means "Haven of Peace" in Arabic, and it appears on the surface to be just that — quiet, relaxed, plumed with the riotous colors of the tropics.

Dar es Salaam does, indeed, seem to be just the place to sit back comfortably with a glass of cold British-made beer, yawn, and sigh contentedly that you will go on about your business "in a little while."

Here, 45 miles across the bay from the island of Zanzibar, and three degrees below the equator, you feel that Los Angeles International Airport is at the far end of the earth. And it is — 10,718 miles away with an 11-hour time differential.

BUT DESPITE our long flight from Rome (3,910 miles), with but brief stops at Athens, Greece, and Nairobi, Kenya, we were not tired. We had speeded at nearly 600 miles an hour over country upon which the Queen of Sheba traveled wearisome miles by camel train so long ago. And to make the trip even more relaxing, our pilot was Sergio Mosetti, the great one who a few weeks ago flew Pope Paul VI to the Holy Land.

Mosetti brought us in for a perfect landing on the velvety soft wings of a tropical evening cooled by a recent shower, and we were greeted at the airport by a group of Africans who sang and danced to the rhythm of crude native instruments. It was the type of friendliness that we were to encounter everywhere we went in Tanzania (pronounced Tan-zan-EE-uh) from a people sometimes shy but never bearing a cloak of hostility that some of us had feared after reading of troubled times in some other African countries. Tourists are welcome — if they do not intend to stay.

MOST NATIVES who contact tourists speak English at least passably well but, among themselves, they talk as big as Texas, Louisiana and Mississippi combined and that much of it is unpopulated except for wild game.

Free Tanzania's chief of state is Julius Nyerere, son of a chief of one of the country's 120 tribes, and a graduate of Edinburgh University. Despite reported Red interference on Zanzibar, he is making strides in solving his country's greatest problems—underdevelopment, illiteracy, poverty and disease. But he has a long way to go.

Will Nyerere succeed? The African Tanganyikans are industrious, and they appear to be happy to be living in their own democracy. These factors, at least, are in his favor.

(Next week, Kraft will give his impressions of Kenya's thriving capital, Nairobi, and after that he will take you on a wild animal photo safari into the heart of the big game kingdom of interior Africa.)

LIKE MOST cities, building is booming. A university is under construction on a hill overlooking Dar, some of its multi-storied structures already completed. When all of its facilities are in operation, it will be one of Africa's largest institutions of higher learning.

Everyone here, it seems, turns out to trade at the public marketplace, a huge area crammed with tropical fruits of all kinds, fresh-killed meat, household utensils, clothing, and native-made products and trinkets. And no visit to Dar is complete without a call at the Ivory Room where elephant and rhino tusks, leopard skins and other trophies of the hunt are sold at auction. At the last sale, proceeds totaled 750,000 pounds sterling (more than 2 million U.S. dollars).

AN ELEPHANT tusk brings about $2.80 a pound, that of a rhino, 80 shillings ($11.20). Most ivory is shipped to Hong Kong where cheap labor carves it into many kinds of salable objects.

We were told that last year government game rangers killed 4,000 to 4,500 elephants to bring nature to a better balance. Certainly, that is a lot of elephants until you realize that Tangan-

IN THE TRADE

Cost of flying goes lower

The American public is flying cheaper all the time—and excursion fares point up the trend dramatically.

Excursion fares are those which fix criteria for a given trip—a time limit of a few days up to a month to complete a round trip.

For example, the average jet coach fare on most U.S. routes is around 5 cents per mile. Yet an excursion, such as Delta Air Lines' 8,000-mile circle trip from Los Angeles to New York and the Caribbean, is 20% lower at only 4 cents a mile.

That vast circle trip lets a traveler stop anywhere on the Delta system so long as he completes the entire journey in 30 days. The complete fare: $325.

An even more dramatic example of the bargain aspect of excursion fares is illustrated by a new excursion fare—this one a triangle.

The round trip jet coach fare between Los Angeles and Chicago is $210.90. For just $1 more, Continental Airlines and Delta offer an excursion which gives the traveler a visit to New Orleans. Continental flies the passenger to Chicago while Delta carries him from Chicago to New Orleans and back to Los Angeles.

If you figure the cost of that extra leg by the mile, the passenger is paying 1/10th of a cent for the 795 extra miles of jet travel.

American Airlines has taken a major step in its "Autojet" program—the combination of the jet airliner and the public car for vacation travel—by signing a low-cost agreement with three leading firms in the field.

The agreement, new in effect, makes it possible for American's passengers to rent an Avis, Hertz or National automobile at their destination for $99 a week. The plan provides for seven days of unlimited free mileage, a beginning full tank of gasoline, and no drop-off charges between cities involved in the program.

A standard sedan will be available under the plan. Extra days beyond the one-week period will be charged for at a rate of $15 a day, with the customer paying for all gasoline. Car rental reservations must be booked 24 hours in advance and can be made through a travel agent or the sales offices of American Airlines, Avis, Hertz or National.

"From Here to There," selected the best color film in its category last year, again highlights United Air Lines' free and accessible exhibit at the 1965 New York World Fair.

The 8½-minute Saul Bass-directed film, which was praised by the International Film and Television Festival of New York for capturing the human experience of jet travel, was viewed by 700,000 persons during the fair's first season. It will be shown every 15 minutes from 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. daily in the exhibit's air conditioned 118-seat theater located adjacent to General Motors' popular Futurama.

The big apple orchards of the Oak Glen area, between Yucaipa and Beaumont, are now in full bloom and the blossoms will continue good through next Sunday.

This is the word from Blackie Wilshire, president of the Oak Glen Apple Growers Assn, who invites nature lovers and camera enthusiasts to visit the area via the San Bernardino Freeway or U.S. 60.

Restaurants along the winding Oak Glen Road are open, serving their specialty—hot apple pie.

TRAVEL and RESORTS

"Can you suggest medium-priced hotels and how to get World's Fair tickets in New York in July?"

I CAN'T because it's hard to say what hotel will have rooms. This is going to be a big summer at the Fair. But the airlines — American, TWA, United — will show you a list of hotels of various prices.

The airlines will give you amazing amounts of free service: Make your hotel reservations. Get your tickets for the Fair. Sometimes at a discount (TWA). Give your pamphlets with all sorts of Fair information (American). United has its extra services.

The airlines will also get you theater tickets in advance. Have a rent car waiting if you need one. But a rent car is useless in New York City. You only need one if you are going up country.

A round of the ticket offices is rewarding. Just pick up all the World's Fair pamphlets you see on the counters. One evening of relaxed study and you'll go with a lot more fun.

"Do you have any information on camping in Europe?"

I'VE NEVER done this. And reader reports are puzzling. Some people have found it excellent. But this week I have a letter from an American woman who lives in Thailand—not an extremely clean country—who found the camps "incredibly filthy." Her description would put you off camping in Europe forever.

Camps I've seen just passing through in France, Germany and Switzerland look very nice. But then, I never lived in them.

I'm sure that camping is much cheaper — people who've done it quote very low daily costs. The price of road travel for a family, in Europe or in the U.S., is high. The only way to beat it is to camp.

"We have heard the European coffee is poor quality. Should we carry our own instant?"

YOU CAN BUY American brand instant coffee all over Europe. Tourist hotels usually have it on the table. Or ask for it.

"We hear cigarettes are expensive but that they can be bought at the airport at duty-free prices."

THEY CAN—if the airport shop is open. They work on daytime schedules. You order and the package is delivered on the plane. These shops also sell—duty-free prices — all kinds of travel items. Transistor radios. Battery powered razors. Get to the airport an hour and a half ahead of flight time and shop a little.

"Appreciate any advice on getting most stopovers out of a trip to Europe."

THE AIRLINE association is pretty complicated about this. You should have a travel agent work it out for you. The rough idea is that you can stop anywhere between your starting point and the farthest point you go. A ticket to Rome lets you stop in 16 European capitals.

Now—ask your agent to figure it out something like this: Enter via Shannon and then to London. Make the northern swing of Scandinavia, Germany, Switzerland. From Rome — exit through Madrid and Lisbon.

Now—see if you can't go home through Puerto Rico, Jamaica and other Caribbean ports. If it costs anything, it will be very little. I'd guess something like $20.

Now—have your agent figure out best prices: Ask about 21-day excursion rates. Ask about family plan. There are so many combinations that the man in the next seat may be paying $100 more for the same flight. Because he didn't explore all these possibilities.

"Can you suggest any Mexican wines?"

I'D SUGGEST you forget it. They have great beer. But the wine I wouldn't use for paint thinner.

Hail to the chef!

Standards of cooking and service have risen appreciably in the Caribbean islands Trinidad and Tobago since the founding of the Hotel and Catering School in 1960. Almost 400 cooks, waiters, bartenders and bellboys have been graduated from the institute.

FREE SWIMMING LESSONS are offered daily for all ages in this Olympic-size pool at Pine View Lodge Resort at Blue Jay, near Lake Arrowhead. Other activities include archery, camp fires, treasure hunts, dancing and sports for which equipment is furnished at no extra cost. Rustic mountain housekeeping cabins are available at the resort where "families with children are preferred." For brochures write the Resort at Box L.B., Blue Jay.

Beats fishing

A Pacific Northwest lumberman decided to build an airplane when he became irate over the slow delivery of a plane he wanted for fishing and hunting trips, according to United Air Lines. His name: William Boeing, founder of the Boeing Company.

"A HUNTER'S GUIDE TO MEXICO" by Sam W. Landis (Minutiae, Mexicana, S. A., Av. Alvarado Obregon 286, Mexico 7, D. F., $1.60): The author, an avid hunter, tells legal requirements the hunter must meet in Mexico, how to obtain a non-resident license, game laws in the various states, and where the game—from desert sheep to jaguar—can be found.

"RAND McNALLY VACATION GUIDE FOR 1965" (Rand McNally & Co., P. O. ## What Your Name Means

Send your name to La Reina Rule in care of Southland Magazine, 604 Pine Ave., Long Beach, Calif. 90812, for origin, meaning and brief genealogy, for reply only in this column.

DEAR MISS RULE: Would like data on TEAL, TEEL. — D.T., F.T., Long Beach.

D.T., F.T.: TEAL and the alternate form TEEL began in Britain as the forefather's inn-sign trademark, a colored picture of a "teal" or small duck. Ancestors include John Teel or Teal of Somerset, 1427. The Teal armorial shield is silver, emblazoned with a serpent, indicating eternal life, placed below three teal ducks.

DEAR MISS RULE: Kindly give data on DUMMOLIN, MOLINE. — M.M., G.L., Long Beach.

M.M., G.L.: DUMMOLIN had its beginning in France as "Du Molin," describing a man "from the mill." MOLINE was a variation of the same phrase. Descendants of the ancestral mill owner were awarded a coat-of-arms in the medieval French province of Dauphine. Their shield is silver, decorated with a black cross having a silver center.

DEAR MISS RULE: Would like information on BYRD, BIRD. — J.B., J.N., Long Beach.

J.B., J.N.: BYRD and the modern spelling BIRD represent a professional "hyrder" or "bird-catcher" in early Britain. The nursery rhyme about "four and twenty blackbirds" illustrates this occupation. Wild birds were a staple food in the Middle Ages. Byrd ancestors lived in Oxford, Suffolk and Shropshire, England in the 1200s. They later owned an estate at Broxton, Cheshire. Their armorial shield is silver, embossed with a red cross between four red birds. Rear Adm. Richard F. Byrd, Antarctic explorer, was the most famous descendant of this lineage.

DEAR MISS RULE: Would you explain ANDREWS. — R. A., M. F., Long Beach.

ANDREWS honored St. Andrew, patron saint of Scotland whose name means "strong and manly." The family shield is red, decorated with a gold St. Andrew's cross ("X"-shaped).

DEAR MISS RULE: Please explain HOCHSTADT, HOCHSTADLER. — J. H., Lakewood; W. H., Bellflower. J. H., W. H.: HOCHSTADT, describing "citizen of the high city," and HOCHSTAD-

Four BERT'S EYE VIEW

Mother Morticia Teaches 'Respect and Love'

By BERT RESNIK
TV and Radio Editor

THE INSCRIPTION on the welcome mat said "Go Away" but Carolyn Jones said to "Come on in anyway."

Her year-old French poodle, Beauty, disagreed with the invitation and barked that disapproval while 13-year-old Victoria, a dachshund, looked embarrassed over her younger colleague's obvious lack of restraint.

"The mat appeals to my sense of humor," said Carolyn. "I stole the idea from a girlfriend who lives near the beach in Miami. Her friends know if the mat's out, they can't come in."

Carolyn put the dogs out, seated herself in a chair in the library and talked about Morticia.

Morticia is the curvy, black-gowned, off-beat housewife-mother of ABC-TV's Friday night "The Addams Family." Morticia is Carolyn, or vice versa.

"The housewives," said Carolyn, "are very pleased with Morticia. They're terribly impressed by the fact that my husband still passionately loves me."

THERE ARE MEN, too, who are pleased with Morticia.

"Sure, I get lots of romantic letters from them," said Carolyn. "But anytime that any person will write something personal to someone they don't know; they're simply trying to get rid of their inhibitions."

Inhibitions? Carolyn explained further: "These men really don't want to meet me," she said. "They simply want to retain the type of mental picture they have of me."

"The type of men who write these letters have some kind of mentality that can't function normally with other women."

"It's a man that's just extremely lonely. He would be destroyed if he ever personally met me. Because nobody can be as perfect as they appear on that screen."

"They don't really want me to be a human being. They want something else."

AS A HUMAN BEING, Carolyn would like to be seen with "The Addams Family" for three years.

She is pleased with the type of mother she portrays. "In our show, we teach only love and respect between the children and the parents. There is no thought of disobedience. Never do we take anything away."

"And we have respect for the children as well as they do for us."

Also, despite the sounding-off of other television actors, Carolyn doesn't believe making a half-hour series is "really that difficult."

"Ok," she said, "so you work from 4:45 a.m. to 7 p.m. three days a week—that's not going to ruin you."

"And besides having four days off a week, you get a vacation from the 15th of May to the 15th of July."

"It is, believe me, a great way to make a fortune."

Such a great way, in fact, that she hopes she moves into another series when "The Addams Family" moves away from television.

★ ★ ★

TRUE, SHE REALIZES she'll never become a "superstar" by merely appearing in television series.

In her book that's a gain, not a loss.

"I'm perfectly content with my particular status," she said. "I don't want to go up. It's too much of a strain."

By strain, she meant the sort of fame that accompanies someone like Elizabeth Taylor.

She referred to the fact that Miss Taylor's father recently had a stroke and the actress returned from London to see him.

"There were people yelling at her and pushing her all over the place," said Carolyn. "She was even pestered in the hospital elevator."

"If it happened to me, I think I'd kill six people."

"I couldn't live Liz Taylor's life of having people all over me like measles."

There's another reason why Carolyn doesn't want to be a super-star.

"When the chins start getting double," she said, "I don't want to have to go see any fancy doctors in Europe."

"I want to start playing roles that go along with double chins."

WHAT'S IT LIKE IN JUNGLE WAR?

It's Hit-Run in Viet Nam

By RAY HOLDEN
As told to Hoyt McAfee

WITH the U.S. dispatching increasing numbers of fighting men to Viet Nam, many Americans are wondering out loud about the casualty rate so far. Have the losses been higher or lower than our country suffered, say, in the Korean war?

On that score we have only the word of Gen. Maxwell Taylor (U.S. Ambassador to Saigon) to guide us. During my two years in South Viet Nam, I — Ray Holden — attended several of Taylor's more informal press briefings.

Recently, I tried to pin him down on the number of Americans who've been killed in all types of warfare in Viet Nam: in the jungle, in air raids, during terror bombings, on helicopter patrols, and those cut down by guerrilla snipers. Ambassador Taylor at first evaded the issue by stating that such an official release (of the war dead) would have to come from Secretary of Defense Robert McNamara.

A BIT LATER he modified his stand somewhat. This was what he revealed: "Considering the limited type of warfare in which we're involved here (in Viet Nam), our losses have been a bit higher — proportionately speaking — than what we suffered in the Korean war."

Official figures show that in the long, on-again, off-again Korean conflict, 54,246 American fighting men met death. Anyone who has watched the Viet Nam struggle grind on, indecisively and agonizingly, knows that full-scale pitched battles have been few and far between.

There have been, instead, surprise air raids on Viet Cong bases, hit-and-run blows struck at enemy-held positions, jungle engagements, and the like. Military strategists label it "limited and pin-pointed warfare, the primary purpose of it being to strike at the enemy's most vital nerve centers."

In this type of warfare — Ambassador Taylor admitted in a moment of candor — terror bombings, sneak raids by guerrillas, and jungle fighting have been responsible for 80% of American casualties in Viet Nam.

THIS MEANS that American GIs there have had to

accustom themselves to warfare waged by stealth and guile. Seldom has what they expected — such as all-out frontal attacks by the enemy — come to pass. On numbers of occasions I've known forces to be poised and prepared for a big thrust.

For nerve-racking hours, even days, they waited in vain for it to break loose in full fury. Then, almost incredibly some night, Viet Cong guerrillas would infiltrate the American and South Viet Nam position. Their terror bombs, exploded in rapid-fire relays, blew up ammunition dumps, killed hundreds on the spot, and created much havoc and confusion.

After that came another period of eerie silence and watchful waiting — with the nerves of American and Viet Nam troops growing more jumpy by the minute. Patrols sent out to try to lure the enemy from his hiding places met with one of three fates: (1) Drew sporadic fire from snipers, (2) spotted no form of activity or movement, or (3) ran head-on into an ambush and were wiped out.

FROM ALL this one clear picture emerges: U.S. forces in Viet Nam are getting a liberal education — the hard and terrifying way — in unorthodox, guerrilla-type warfare. On my visits to up-front positions, I saw that American and Viet Nam commanders often had to improvise on the spot. A well-devised campaign would have to be discarded at the last minute in favor of a quickie, command-like raid by a small band of specially trained fighters.

At some of the jungle encampments I witnessed something which was truly astonishing. When an American and Viet Nam patrol would set out to probe enemy-held territory, special Chinese mercenaries would accompany them.

What was their role? As amazing as it may seem, their duty was to protect American GIs from being shot in the back by traitors among the Viet Nam soldiers! Making that discovery naturally disturbed me.

IT ALSO prompted me — a combination student-journalist — to ask questions which U.S. press relations' officers considered "embarrassing." But by persisting I ascertained this much: That the jungle fighting front in South Viet Nam remains in a state of "flux" and "uncertainty."

Most of the specially-trained fighters are loyal to the Saigon government. Others, however are secretly sympathetic and in league with the North Viet Cong regime. Unobtrusively and artfully they manage to infiltrate the ranks of South Viet Nam units.

This can prove doubly disastrous out in the jungle zone. For, there, small patrols must depend upon the loyalty and cooperation of each member. Months ago, I learned during my fact-gathering trip, two and sometimes three traitors would seize upon an opportunity to do their dirty work.

They'd suddenly turn their guns on American and American-trained guerrilla fighters in front of them and off to their side. This traitorous conduct immediately threw the jungle unit into confusion and often destroyed its effectiveness as a fighting team.

REPORTERS, I quickly discovered, are restricted in their movements in all staging and combat areas. Only rarely are they permitted to talk with men who fought the enemy in hand-to-hand combat: during the course of which they went through shocking, terrifying, and eye-opening experiences.

All impartial observers are agreed that the Viet Nam struggle against the Communist North has been an inadequately reported war. To cite my own experience: Press relations' officers suggested that I'd be "raking over an old sore," if I mentioned how GI jungle fighters need Chinese armed guards to protect them against traitorous attacks from within their own ranks!

Yet this qualifies as legitimate information, and in collaboration with Hoyt I'm passing it along to readers now. It logically follows that the more factual information Americans have about the elusive and at times confusing Viet Nam war, the clearer will be their understanding of what sacrifices must be made to win it.

ALL THE WHILE casualties, though seemingly small in number, continue to mount. Using Ambassador Taylor's comment as a guide, the final tally could be staggering — especially for a war conducted in hit-and-run fashion.

In his off-the-ruff remarks on various occasions, Taylor has predicted that stepped-up operations against Viet Cong forces would, in the long run, keep the American casualty rate down. For the reason that such an all-out, hard-hitting campaign should — and probably will — put the enemy to rout and prompt him to sue for peace.

With the American build-up in Viet Nam now a fact, that kind of campaign can be expected from here on out. In the meantime, American GIs who've seen action in Viet Nam are inclined to sum it up as "the strangest and most bewildering war we've ever experienced."

A Feeling for Writing

Ray Bradbury set himself a spartan goal and the regime has made him a successful writer.

By Aubrey B. Haines

MILLIONS of persons wish to become writers. Ray Bradbury became one by promising himself when he was 21 that he would complete a short story a week (or its equivalent in novels, plays, or film scripts) for the rest of his life. Having more than kept his promise, he has made himself a writer of distinction.

Ray Bradbury has sold more than 300 short stories alone and still found time to give a few away—to new magazines that need something good to grow on and to old magazines that need material to survive on. He writes novels, articles, and television scripts with the same fine hand, has a workshop with other writer friends, and travels around Los Angeles by cab, campaigning for public transportation.

As a boy Ray wanted to be onstage, literally working magic. When Ray was 10, Blackstone, the magician, gave him his first rabbit. Not until he was 19 did Ray get out of the wings and really write, although he began writing when he was 12.

"AT THAT TIME I wanted to be a famous writer like Steinbeck, Faulkner, and Cather," he recalls. "I had to wear glasses since I was 10, so I couldn't do much else than write. By the time I got out of Los Angeles High School, I was writing a good deal, and I said that if I didn't sell anything by the time I was 21, I'd quit. I had a story published on my 21st birthday. But I was still selling newspapers at Los Angeles' Olympic Boulevard and Norton Avenue. I was making $10 a week and living with my folks. I kept that up until I was 22."

When he speaks, Bradbury's voice rises a decibel or two, and his laughter sometimes grows shrill.

"Soon after I wrote the one-act play, 'The Pedestrian,' I read it to a group of friends," Ray recalls. "Shaking their heads, they said that it was a shame it would never be suitable to produce on the stage. I tore it into bits and threw it in the trash can. Then in the middle of the night I reconsidered, retrieved the shreds, and taped the manuscript back together. I gave it to director Charles Rome Smith and the Desilu Workshop on television. They put it into private production, and 'The Pedestrian' played successfully. That was lesson Number One for me. A writer must remain a student all his life."

RAY DOUGLAS Bradbury was born Aug. 22, 1920, in Waukegan, Ill., where his childhood was profoundly influenced by Edgar Allan Poe, Willkie Collins, 'The Wizard of Oz,' and Buck

Rogers. Ray first saw his name in print at age 21 and graduated from 'Weird Tales' to the American Mercury four years later. He married Marguerite Susan McClure in 1947, and the Bradburys have four daughters.

"An ancestor of mine was tried as a witch in Salem, Massachusetts," he says. Perhaps this gave rise to his 'Fahrenheit 451,' a short novel that attacks book-burning, thought-control, and mass-hypnosis.

Christopher Isherwood describes Bradbury as "a great and unusual talent" and objects to calling him simply a science-fiction writer. "If one must attach labels," says Isherwood, "Bradbury might be called a writer of fantasy and his stories 'tales of the grotesque and arabesque' in the sense in which those words are used by Poe."

ALTHOUGH Bradbury's fantastic stories and novels coincide roughly with the formula of science fiction, their impact is more often directed towards probing the human psyche. Or their impact is political and social. For Ray Bradbury the wide universe of science fiction has enabled his busy imagination to roam, unhindered. His tales, at their best, bring new insights into present-day culture and almost always spine-tingling chills.

"When I used to sell newspapers in Los Angeles," Ray recalls, "my friends would walk by my corner and laugh at me, saying, 'Bradbury, why don't you get a job with Standard Oil?'"

"I'd say to myself, 'Some day I'm going to be famous and surpass them.' Now they still have their jobs with Standard Oil, and when I see them, I never tell them anything about myself. I'm too lucky and too sorry for them."

Advice on Selling

Don't redecorate your home if you're planning on selling it.

That's the advice of James C. Brody, president of the Massachusetts Association of Real Estate Boards.

"While sensible improvements may add 25% to the resale value of your home," he says, "redecorating can often lose the sale. This is so because while most prospective house buyers can see the value in a modernized or extra bath, their tastes in interior colors and decoration may be as varied as there are prospects."

From Ideas a Den Evolves

FOUR BARE WALLS and the rectangle that is a room come to life when ideas come through the door. For example, the small, extra bedroom converted into the den in the home of Mr. and Mrs. James Hammond, 3252 Ruth Elaine Dr., Los Alamitos, pictured above. Drapes in the background are of the same colorful pattern as the paper covering the wall behind them. Adequate desk surface is provided and the wall is devoted to shelves, knickknack space, drawers and similar storage facilities. A painting hangs in a space within the center of the shelf arrangement.—STELLA GEORGE.

CRITIC'S CORNER

"FINE ACTING by George C. Scott and Michael Parks," commends review of the pair in their "Bob Hope Theater" appearance about a submarine crew in World War II.

Excerpted Reviews on Recent TV Shows

Program: "Bob Hope Theater" presentation of "A Time for Killing," aired April 30 on channel 4.

Screenwriter Edward Anhalt's directorial debut was auspicious, but the vehicle was fragile. While interesting at times, it lacked over-all impact. Such a story of introspection, a man soul-searching, is a subject rarely suitable for a visual medium.

Anhalt scripted the drama, based on a William Hardy tome, dealing with a U.S. submarine patrolling the coast of Japan in the closing days of World War II. The skipper doesn't believe in what he regards as senseless killing. The bomb has devastated Hiroshima and obviously the war is near its end. So when he sees Japanese vessels, he doesn't try to sink them. His aide, however, doesn't see it that way, so there is a sharp conflict. The aide feels it's their job to kill, and the commander's reply is he lacks the quality of mercy. Eventually, however, the skipper sinks a ship. Ironical ending sees the Japanese captain he rescues kill the compassionate commander. The Japanese has a gun in his possession — an obvious hole in Anhalt's script. Even a "merciful" officer would have had the POW searched.

The plot seems to take forever in the telling principally because there is relatively little action, with accent on the skipper's struggle with his conscience. There's some fine acting by George C. Scott as the troubled officer and Michael Parks is satisfactory as Scott's aide.

Critic Daku of "Variety"

Program: "Lorne Greene's American West," aired last Monday on channel 4.

"Lorne Greene's American West," an NBC special, was an attempt to wrap up the color and scenery of "Bonanza" with the rhythm of a musical variety show. The result was moderately successful.

Greene's West was less real than the Ponderosa but it gave him a chance to sing some sad ballads in a handsome outdoor setting. It was an attempt at something off the well-beaten variety path and for this deserves a Silver Star.

Critic Cynthia Lowry of AP

The title probably caused many to murmur, "here we go with another travelog." They couldn't have been wrong (a good early western word). It was closer to a diversion of "Oklahoma" than a guided tour of early American museum pieces and, to boot, one of the spiciest musicals of a season devoid of such inspired outings. The title may have cost the show points but the presence of tv's "father image" — Lorne Greene, should have balanced the books. Producer George Schlatter and his director, Alan Handley, both proficient in telemusicals, moved it along the hour with the speed and merriment of cowpokes living it up after a long cattle drive.

Critic Helm of "Variety."

Program: "Melina Mercouri's Greece," aired last Monday on channel 7.

The charm of Melina Mercouri is the charm of a mature woman in love with life — and Greece.

This you feel and share with her as she stands in front of the Acropolis and says:

"Hundreds of times I come up here and each time I get — how you say — emotional."

She smiles and adds: "I am a very emotional Greek."

She tells a story of a battle between the Turks and the Greeks. The Turks had seized the Acropolis and, in the battle to defend their position, had run out of ammunition.

They planned to melt down the columns of the Acropolis because the supporting structures had been fortified with lead.

The Greeks sent them a message urging them not to destroy the Acropolis.

"We will send you bullets," actress Melina quoted the message.

"And they did," she added.

Critic Bert Resnik of "TeleVues" Except for one absurdly staged early scene in which Mercouri's friends tell her what to show on her tour, the hour was a thorough charmer.

The color was breathtaking, the photography and script were mostly excellent — and the combination of Greece, Greek music and the irresistible naturalness and mature flirtatiousness of Mercouri made for a joyful end to a long and rare day.

Critic Rick Du Brow of UPI

Program: "Our Private World," premiered last Wednesday on channel 2.

"World" is a well-produced half hour. Based on the initialer, even though it was slow due to the customary intros of characters and problems, it looms as a strong commercial entry.

Eileen Fulton is seen as a divorcee trying to make a new life for herself in the Windy City, where she gets a job in a hospital — an ideal spot to find multiple problems.

Mountains that seemed to be almost an impassable barrier to the Spanish explorers are the background in this photo of downtown Santa Monica.

By Anna Lemley

IMPORTANT to Californians today because their rugged beauty is ideal for a state park, the Santa Monica Mountains were important in 1769 also, for they formed a barrier that nearly stopped exploration. Jose Remundo

Carrillo, a member of the Portola expedition, the group of white men who were the first to walk the Indian trails now known as El Camino Real, told his descendants a story of the mountains, of a tired priest and how the thought of Saint

Monica influenced the course of history.

The story began in Laredo, Mexico, starting place of the Spanish expedition that set out to explore upper California and open it for settlement. Or perhaps the story rightly began 227 years earlier when Cabrillo sailed along the coast and wrote in his diary about the many off shore islands and the bay of San Diego. Another chapter, an important one, was added in 1602 by Vizcaino who sailed into and described a beautiful bay now known as Monterey Bay. This was the place the 1769 expedition hoped to reach.

THE EXPLORERS went first to San Diego Bay and established the first white settlement in Alta California, San Diego. From there Father Junipero Serra, the church head of the group, sailed with part of the men for Monterey. The 63 others, led by Capt. Gaspar Portola (later to be California's first governor) and Father Crespi, went by land. This group of men—soldiers, priests and Indian muleskinners—were daring adventurers. Although it was less than 200 years ago—and hard for modern minds to realize—there were no maps, no assurance that food and water would be found or that the Indians encountered would be friendly, no radio to bring search parties or planes to drop medicine and food. Ac-tells how the northern edge was a barrier that seemed impassable to tired and undernourished men.

THE LATE Leo Carrillo, the loved descendant of Jose Carrillo, told the story his great great grandfather revealed in his book, "The California I Love." Camp was made of an August evening without a decision being reached about continuing the journey. Father Crespi left camp and walked toward the beach hoping to see a way to travel around the mountains by walking along the water's edge. He saw the Palisades and as he wrote, that the mountains seemed to go into the sea.

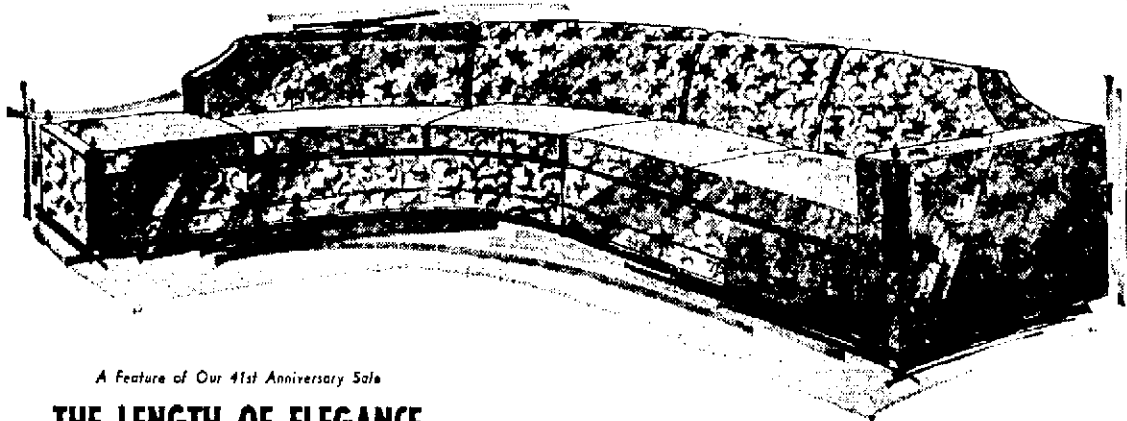

The priest followed a little stream that emptied into two pools shaped like a woman's eyes. He exclaimed "Las Lagrimas de Santa Monica" (the tears of Saint Monica). To the devout man this was a reminder of that saint's characteristic—she never gave up. The mother of a wayward worldly man, she wept, prayed and worked until he was reformed and became Saint Augustine. The woman who is famous for her tears and determination inspired Father Crespi and brought new cording to the diaries that are a record of the trip, these foot travelers seemed to feel that an average of three miles a day was good. Of course they were mapping, exploring, studying, not hiking for fun. The Crespi-Portola party had many adventures before they reached the mountain barrier. Mountains at the south end of the cup we now call the Los Angeles basin were low enough to cross easily. Father Crespi's diary

Nation's progress in aviation symbolized at vast March Air Force Base.

By EV HOSKING

FOR SOME, a ghostly air armada of the past will be soaring over March Air Force Base today as the nation opens its celebration of Armed Forces Week.

For those whose memories can span 47 years or more there will be a dual sensation.

Their eyes will take in the skyscraping white missile at the entrance to March Air Force Base; will see the airstrip with the long-range jets roaring aloft.

But their ears will ring to the racket of ancient OX5 engines as they power a ghostly fleet of ancient "Jennys" over the field.

It will be only a fleeting memory, though. The Jennys are long gone. And so are most of the men who flew them.

AIR PIONEERS of the past, however, must be beaming with pride wherever they are in eternity—for March Air Force Base near Riverside, from its humble beginning in 1918, has become one of the most famous military installations in the world and the center of one of the most elaborate defense complexes in the nation.

Only 47 years ago, it housed the kids who first dared to challenge the "Wild Blue Yonder." Today it is the headquarters of the Strategic Air Command's fabulous Fifteenth Air Force, allied units and also operating base for the 452nd Troop Carrier Wing of the Air Force Reserve.

Forty-seven years ago top speed of the famed Jenny was in the neighborhood of 80 miles an hour. Today 800 miles an hour is just a starter.

Under the direction of Lt. Gen. Archie J. Old Jr., famed flying commander of the Fifteenth Air Force, March Air Force Base today is the headquarters for a manned bomber-missile complex that includes most of the Western United States and extends westward past Guam.

MARCH AIR FORCE BASE itself houses the 22nd Bomb Wing with its B52 long-range jet bombers and the KC135 tanker planes needed for its global flights as well as a computer-equipped combat operations center that is second to none in the world.

The maze of electronic equipment enables Gen. Old and his battle staff to maintain control over the vast missile-plane complex at all times wherever its units may be in the world.

This is a far cry from the day the base was activated in 1918 after an advance party of four men from Rockwell Field in San Diego had scraped off a scanty, single dirt runway.

The field was named as a memorial to Lt. Peyton C. March, son of the Army's World War I chief of staff. Lt. March died in a Texas plane crash in 1917.

During World War I, March Field's primary mission was to train Jenny pilots for overseas duty. Later the base was closed down for a few years and reopened in 1927 as a primary flying training center. Among the famous Air Force leaders who received their training there was Gen. Curtis E. LeMay, recently retired chief of staff of the United States Air Force. His instructor was Gen. Nathan E. Twining, former chairman, Joint Chiefs of Staff.

ONE OF THE early commanders of the base was Gen. H. H. (Hap) Arnold, who became the Army Air Force's chief of staff during World War II and who is generally regarded as father of the present-day Air Force.

Crews for every major heavy bomber in the Air Force history from 1920 were trained at March. These included the old Martin B10, forerunner of the super, high-speed bomber, later the B12, B17, B24 and B29.

The base even achieved fame in the fighter field. After World War II, Lockheed P80 fighters arrived with the First Fighter Group in 1945, which was the first fully equipped jet tactical unit in the nation's history.

Many outstanding achievements have been recorded at March Air Force Base over the years, contributing to the science of aviation.

In the late 1920s, an aerial refueling record was established when "The Question Mark" took off from March and flew around the vicinity for five days, refueling in midair by primitive means.

MANY YEARS LATER, Gen. Old commanded the "round-the-world" flight of three B52 jet bombers in the first non-stop jet aircraft circumnavigation of the globe.

In 1949, headquarters of the Fifteenth Air Force was transferred to March Air Force Base from Colorado Springs, Colo., under the command of Maj. Gen. Emmett O'Donnell Jr.

Equipped with World War II B29 Superfortresses, the Fifteenth's 22nd Bomb

Group, later the 22nd Bomb Wing, was alerted for overseas on July 3, 1950, and made its first combat mission against North Korean Communist forces exactly eight days later. The 22nd has been stationed at March Air Force Base since May 1949.

With the advent of jet bombers, personnel and planes from March continued to pioneer in the air. In early 1954, a flight of B27 Stratojets of the 22nd Bomb Wing flew nonstop from England to March in slightly over 12 hours. Again, in 1947, another B47 commanded by Maj. Gen. Walter C.weeney Jr., then Commander, Fifteenth Air Force, flew nonstop from March to Japan.

TODAY, March Air Force Base is the home of a full wing of B52 bombers and its accompanying force of KC135 tankers—airborne filling stations for their worldwide missions.

Presently most of March's bomber force is deployed at other bases, primarily on Guam in the Western Pacific, but the permanent manpower needed to fly, fuel and staff and supply this mighty air arm is retained at March Air Force Base.

Command of this global force is vested in tough, sharp Gen. Old who was responsible (Continued on Page 16)

NO 'SECRET AGENT' KILLINGS

Patrick McGoohan, Series Lead, Prefers 'Character Nobility'

By JOAN CROSBY

NEW YORK (NEA)—Meet Patrick McGoohan, the man who had a chance to play James Bond and turned it down.

"Take the promiscuous sex and violence out of James Bond and what have you got? A man who knows how to order the proper wines for dinner."

If Bond, as 007, has a license to kill, McGoohan, as CBS-TV's Secret Agent John Drake, has to be called Just Plain 7. "I have never killed anyone on one of our shows," the tall, handsome New York City-born Irishman said. "I don't even carry a gun."

Secret Agent is a slick, suspenseful, British production which has been on English television for six months (as Danger Man). Five years ago, the series also ran on British television (it was a half-hour long then; it's 60 minutes now), and was imported into the U.S. as a summer replacement, airing Saturdays on CBS-TV.

PATRICK MCGOOHAN . . . Doesn't Carry Gun

"There was a gap of three-and-a-half years when the show was not on television," McGoohan said, during a trip to New York with his wife to meet his many relatives, and a trip to Arizona to see the sights "because my wife and I are Zane Grey fans." But McGoohan had a contract with ITC, the British commercial channel, and they had an option for his services for another show.

"I didn't like most of what they offered me, so I thought, 'Why not the same old one?'"

McGoohan is determined that his character have nobility, and that the show not be offensive "to any kids or grannies watching. I get letters from grateful parents because their children can see the show. I don't know if this is really good for business. But I do know you can't have a hero promiscuous in 39 episodes and still have him a hero. James Bond is an anti-hero. I don't want my kids (he has three daughters) to see the Bond movies. You can't teach goodness and nobility through violence and a hero who goes to bed with every woman he meets.

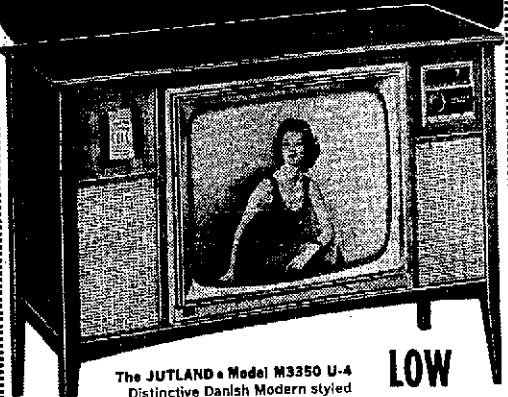

"Generally we have a fight in each of our shows, but that's as far as our violence goes. I'm a fan of Westerns, and the essence of Westerns is violence. But it's a sort of mythological violence. It's games. A barroom brawl or a shoot-out are very different from showing someone breaking a bottle, and then pushing the broken edge in someone's face. That kind of violence is dangerous."

Dr. Walter H. Munk conceived big drilling idea.

How Old Is Earth?

What is world's origin?
How did oceans fill with water?
How did life on this planet begin?
Project Mohole--deepest holes ever drilled--may give the answers.

Above, diagrams show problems involved in drilling hole deep into the earth. Left, a scale replica of the $10 million drilling platform to be used in probe of earth's mantle. Drilling is scheduled in the Pacific, giving West Coast an edge in bidding on contract to build platform.

The optimum depth believed obtainable by drilling is about 35,000 feet.

DRILLING of the Hawaiian hole is to begin in 1968 and is expected to last three years. Work on the secondary holes off the West Coast is scheduled to begin in 1967.

Selection of the Pacific areas for the drilling could mean that a West Coast shipyard, possibly in Southern California, will be chosen to construct the drilling platform-vessel.

The 21,500-ton drilling craft is to be a 279x234-foot platform standing 135 feet above the water on six huge columns which stand on a pair of giant submarine-sized pontoons.

Described as the most sophisticated drilling machinery ever conceived, the platform, which will have three decks, is to be capable of operating during gale force winds, and should remain afloat even if one entire column is flooded.

IT WILL COST in the neighborhood of $10 million, and its construction is expected to get under way by April.

While plans go forward to put the operation into effect, NSF scientists plan to continue to search for another drill site.

"If we can cut a few thousand feet off the total depth to be drilled, the chances of a success on the first try would be materially increased and the cost materially cut," explains NSF director Dr. L. J. Haworth.

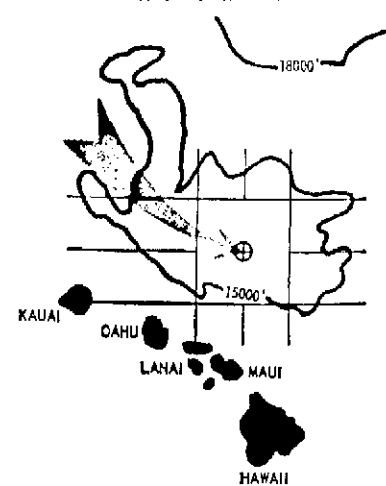

The idea of tapping the inner core of the earth was conceived over breakfast, in 1957, by Dr. Walter H. Munk of the Scripps Institution of Oceanography at La Jolla and Dr. Harry Hess of Princeton.

THE PROJECT hopes, by bringing up samples of earth's internal materials, to provide clues or answers to some of man's profoundest scientific mysteries including:

How old is the earth? What is its origin? How old are the oceans and how did they become filled with water? Is the earth getting hotter or colder? Why are the ocean basins fundamentally different from the continents? How did life on earth begin?

Mohole is also expected to produce numerous technological by-products including improved oil drilling and ocean mining techniques and improved oceanographic research capabilities.

By LOU JOBST

SCIENTISTS are going to poke some very deep holes into the earth in an attempt to learn how this 4½-billion-year-old world was made and what makes it tick.

The audacious undertaking by the National Science Foundation, costing about $68 million, is called Project Mohole, so named for the mysterious Mohorovicic Discontinuity lying between the planet's thin outer skin and its fiery six-to-20-mile-deep mantle.

The plan is to sink six strategically situated shafts into the ocean floor under the Pacific, including the deepest hole ever dug by man, one 30,000 to 35,000 feet deep between California and Hawaii.

Another, but shorter penetration, will be made in the so-called San Diego Trough just off the Southern California coast between Long Beach and San Diego.

OTHERS ARE to be drilled off San Francisco, Seattle and Panama.

The Southland hole is meant to tap bottom sediment lying under 1,000 to 1,500 feet of water.

Groundwork for Mohole was laid four years ago off Guadalupe Island in Mexican waters.

Drilling through 12,000 feet of water, scientists, for the first time in history, successfully penetrated the "second layer" of the earth's crust.

They found, among other things, that this section of the planet skin was volcanic in origin, and, in drilling through 500 feet of bottom ooze, that life existed on this ocean floor about 20 million years ago.

THE SUCCESSFUL Guadalupe preparatory work was done from the Long Beach-based drill ship, CUSS I.

Total depth of the Mexican Mohole was 12,300 feet.

The deepest land hole ever drilled was a dry well down to 25,340 feet in Texas in 1958.

The "big hole" site 170 miles northeast from Oahu and 2,556 miles west of Long Beach was chosen because the earth's crust is believed the thinnest in this location.

The ocean floor lies at a depth of 14,000 feet with the distance from the floor to the mantle somewhere between 14,000 and 17,000 feet.

Who are the shoplifters,
and why do they do it?

The Booster and The Snitch

Hoping to make off with the item, undetected, a teen-ager palms a lip-stick in a variety store. She's one of a growing number of shoplifters.

By KAY DUNN

SHOPLIFTING activities across the country leave a trail of "deficits" and "shrinkage" in its wake. Yearly losses run into the billions. Prices rise and the buyer picks up the tab. It is estimated that every consumer in the United States pays up to 1% more for his food and many other commodities because of "five-fingered" bandits.

Authorities claim that one shopper out of every 10 is a potential shoplifter. And the percentage is growing despite the efforts of security officers, floor walkers, store detectives and modern inventions such as walkie-talkies, two-way mirrors and TV scanning.

Who are these people whose activities are creating the need for such costly security measures? Are they kleptomaniacs, driven by an uncontrollable impulse to steal, or are they hardship cases, forced to steal to survive? They are neither. Modern shoplifters are usually the next-door-neighbor type, nicely dressed, respected locally and seemingly well adjusted.

TAKE, FOR INSTANCE, the housewife who goes to her community shopping center and enters the grocery market. She puts her large-sized purse in the kiddie seat of her shopping cart and begins selecting items from the shelves. After several packages have been stacked in the bottom of her cart, she takes two cans of honed chicken, a can of shrimp and some crabmeat and places them beside her purse.

Continuing on through the store she reaches a secluded corner and quickly slips the luxury items into her purse and at the same time slips her billfold into her pocket. Closing her purse securely she proceeds to the check-out counter. There she pays for the stable groceries from her billfold and walks out with $3.23 worth of "extras." The tid-bits will enhance her menu and give it that special flare that her limited budget would not allow.

In general, this description applies to the amateur, the "snitch," who steals for his own use. On the other hand, the professional, known as the "booster," operates differently. He's engaged in the serious business of making a living, or, possibly, supporting the narcotics habit, and the stakes are higher.

LIKE THE SNITCH, he takes a shopping cart when he enters a supermarket but his modus operandi differs. He selects tall thin packages such as detergent and lines them around the outer edge of the cart. In the center he places a box or large paper bag and when he reaches the cigarettes or liquor he packs the box full and heads for the point nearest an outside door. There he quickly passes the box to an accomplice who takes the shortest route to a waiting car. Instead of a mere $3.23 worth of merchandise, he has made off with closer to $30 or $40 worth!

A variety of techniques are used by lifters. The snitch usually relies on his regular pockets or purses but the booster is armed with devices that range from cleverly concealed pockets, loose-fitting coats, specially constructed boxes and bags to hooks of all sizes and shapes. And, of course, the "pregnant" woman is often found concealing a bouncing eight-pound ham!

Although boosters get away with more merchandise at any one time, snitchers give authorities more trouble because there are several times as many of them. Ages and types vary according to geographical locations. For instance, in downtown Long Beach where there is a concentration of senior citizens, oldsters comprise the majority of lifters. But in other areas, such as Lakewood, teen-agers are the principal offenders.

FROM VARIETY stores the oldsters take items such as greeting cards, thread, gadgets, accessories and hardware. From drug stores they take patented medicines, and from department stores cosmetics, billfolds, small articles of clothing and jewelry. The teen-ager prefers cosmetics, records, candy, school supplies, billfolds and clothing. The booster, however, takes more valuable merchandise like cameras, luggage, radios, coats, dresses and suits.

Where teen-agers are involved, surprises are often in order. Recently when a 16-year-old had lifted and cleverly concealed nine articles from a variety store, she was asked, "How did you learn to shoplift so efficiently?" Her answer was, "I went to shoplifting school." Her admission led to the arrest of a mother, father and three teen-age daughters who were actually conducting classes in shoplifting!

Another teen-ager admitted belonging to a club. To qualify for membership she had to steal $25 worth of merchandise. And to maintain her standing she was required to lift an additional $5 worth each week!

When asked, "Why do you steal?" teen-agers give a variety of answers. Some shrug and say, "Just for kicks." Others say, "Why pay for it when you can get it for nothing?" Another answer is, "So what! It's not really stealing. Everybody in my gang does it."

IT IS VERY seldom that either teen-ager or adult steals from necessity. Bill Gerber, director of security for a Long Beach market chain, says, "Out of 2,300 shoplifters who were apprehended in our 26 stores during 1964, only three were hardship cases." He said that it is not unusual to find that a person stealing a 25-cent article has anywhere up to $30 in his billfold. "Neither do they steal because they can't help it," he adds. "Research proves that only about one in 300 lifters are kleptomaniacs."

The reason most adults give for their petty pilfering is, "I have a tight budget. I just wanted to add a few extras to my regular purchases. When asked, 'But don't you consider this dishonest?' the answer is usually, 'Well, not really. The little I take isn't going to break anybody.'"

A recent study shows that most shoplifters do not think of themselves as dishonest. One explanation for this delusion is that many may have started when quite young and became used to excusing themselves as "naughty" children. Now that they are adults they still tend to see themselves as delinquent youngsters rather than as thieving adults. One woman, when apprehended, said, "Sure I stole the purse. But does that make me a thief?"

IT SEEMED that very few of those studied had a clear idea of what stealing really means. Most agreed that stealing is wrongfully taking something that belongs to another. However, further questioning revealed that they did not practice strict adherence to the definition. Most agreed that petty pilfering, under certain circumstances, is excusable.

While declining morality may be a contributing factor to the widespread scandal of shoplifting, it is also true that modern methods of merchandising invite thieving. Never in the history of the world has stealing been made so easy.

The prevalence of shoplifting has grown in step with new trends toward self-service stores. Open shelves, fewer barriers between the customer and the merchandise, goods attractively arrayed to entice impulsive buying, and displays that encourage the customer to handle the stock in trade are all factors that induce thieving. These conditions are calling for new programs to curb the outbreak.

James E. Hinton, chairman of the Long Beach Downtown Associates' shop thieving committee, working in close cooperation with the Long Beach Police Department, is conducting such a program. Although he admits that the present function of his committee is to control and prevent rather than to cure, he maintains that results are good. Several hundred lifters were apprehended during the past year.

A CENTRAL registry is one of their most helpful facilities. This enables merchants to check out suspects who claim that this is their "first time." If it is found that they have been apprehended previously they are hurriedly put under arrest. But if it is ascertained that this is their first offense, they are occasionally released. In these cases intent and attitude play an important part.

While programs such as these are vital, most authorities agree that unless morals and merchandising methods both change, it will take an ever-growing army of detectives, special agents, security directors and law enforcement officers to cope with the mounting problems in years to come.

Paeans to Mothers

By Enola Chamberlin

"ALL THAT I am or ever hope to be," Abraham Lincoln once said. "I owe to my angel mother." And James McNeil Whistler painted a portrait of his mother which makes her seem not much less than an angel in the way she looked to him.

Benjamin West, who painted a portrayal of Raphael and Mrs. West, once said, "A kiss from my mother made me a painter." Thomas Carlyle gave his mother credit for what he became because of her trust in him. Ruskin, who so cruelly criticized Whistler's portrait of his mother, was full of thanks and appreciation for his own. Thomas Edison once declared he would have been nothing without his mother. She taught him, gave him hope, encouragement, love after a teacher had sent him home from school, calling him a dunce. Benjamin Franklin, Eugene Field, John Wesley all paid quiet but heartfelt tribute to their mothers.

Some way we do not ordinarily connect Edgar Allen Poe with his mother. We think of him and Lenore, whom he eulogized in the poem, "The Raven." But he was terribly intense with his declarations about his mother. But then he was Poe and the circumstances were a bit out of the usual.

MRS. POE, it is remembered, was an actress, and in her time people of the stage were not held in esteem by the world at large. Yet Poe was defiantly proud of his mother. He was proud of her as a mother, proud of her as a woman, proud of her profession. At one time he wrote:

"The artist of talent is poor indeed, if he does not look with contempt on the mediocrity of a king. The writer of this article is himself the son of an actress—has invariably made it his boast—and no earl was ever prouder of his earldom than he of his descent from a woman, who although well born, hesitated not to consecrate to the drama her brief career of genius and beauty."

Thomas Gray, famous for his "Elegy Written in a Country Churchyard," had this inscription put above his mother's grave: "The careful, tender mother of many children, one of whom alone had the misfortune to survive her."

BUT WE DO not have to go afield to discover the deep reverence in which people hold and have held their mothers. We know that Mother's Day itself came into being because Ann Jarvis so adored her mother, as did everyone else who knew her. Gen. Douglas MacArthur felt such a deep love for his mother, held for her such a debt of gratitude, he enclosed a small garden dedicated to the perpetual memory of "A lovely lady." He once said of her:

"She taught me a devotion to God and such a love of country which have ever sustained me in many lonely and bitter moments of decision in distant and hostile lands."

Music Around the World

By Bob Loeffelbein

BOAST of a Southland University is a unique feature not found in any other school of its kind in the world—the Institute of Ethnomusicology at the University of California at Los Angeles.

In short, the name means that it is a research center for the study of music around the world, except for the Western "classical" tradition.

Classes and study groups in these various musical cultures are part of the regular curriculum of the Department of Music of UCLA and are designed to enable students to learn to communicate with these areas through the media of their music and dance.

As Dr. Mantle Hood, director of the institute, states:

"In this latter half of the 20th century it may well be that the very existence of man depends on the accuracy of his communications . . . Communication is accurate to the extent that it is founded on a sure knowledge of the man with whom we would hold intercourse."

"The significant trend in great universities of establishing integrated centers of study based on geographic areas and dedicated to the quest for comprehensive knowledge of societies offers the potential of accurate communications. Music and the related arts . . . are principal carriers of his tradition and vividly reflect his actual identity. The musical cultures of the world, a sine qua non of configuration studies, are very little known and even less understood."

"The Institute of Ethnomusicology—its staff, facilities and environment—offers an interdisciplinary atmosphere for training and research in this field of knowledge and welcomes cooperation and exchange with others having related interests."

CARRYING out his thesis, a unique aspect of the program is practical training in the performance of various types of non-western music, using the authentic instruments of the culture.

More than 1,000 instruments from more than a dozen non-western countries are included in laboratory studies by students using the facilities of the institute. Playing experience on these instruments insures an increased sensitivity of ears, hands, voice and breath control necessary to a comprehension of the refinements of melodic and rhythmic characteristics of non-western music. Such preparation, students and professors have found, also ultimately gives greater command over, and understanding of, Western-style instruments and music.

All classes start quite naturally with basic fundamentals, leading up to participation in more formal courses, seminars, concerts and festivals, and group recording for such companies as Columbia Records, in its Columbia Masterworks Series.

Two types of personnel are in charge of these performance groups: (1) the American specialist who has had practical experience and training in the field, and (2) the non-western musician who is brought to UCLA both to assist in the program and to be trained in international musicology.

CURRENTLY on the staff of the Institute training study groups in the music of their countries are: Tjokorda Mas, Balinese gamelan; Tsun-Yuen Lui, Chinese music; Gayathri Rajapur, South India; and Hardja Susilo from Java. Suenobu Togi, court musician of the Imperial Household of Japan, has just returned to his country after two years with the institute, guiding the Gagaku study group. Two master drummers from Ghana also recently spent nearly two years with the institute.

Studying under native teachers leads naturally to the next step: depth study of the music "in the field"—that is, in the country whose music it is and within the context of the society that produces the music. Currently individuals or teams have projects active in the Far East, the Philippines, New Zealand, Indonesia, South and Southeast Asia, the Middle East, Africa, Western Europe, the Balkans, North America, South America and Alaska.

The Institute and the music department also offer specialized training courses for foreign visiting musicians who do not wish to pursue a formal degree. These musicians, recognized professional artists in their own countries, may take a two-year course individually designed to fit their needs.

THE INSTITUTE also cooperates in arranging special orientation programs for the American who will be stationed abroad and who desires an empathetic understanding of the peoples among whom he intends to live and work. Members of the Institute have participated in the training of Peace Corps volunteers going to Nigeria, Ghana, Ethiopia, Togo, Sierra Leone and Indonesia.

The Institute's varied activities, guided by Dr. Hood and Dr. David Morton, his assistant, are carried out by a rather unusual staff. It includes two research musicologists, a teacher of the psychology of music, an editor, a librarian, a museum scientist, technical translators for books on music in Chinese, Japanese and Indonesian, a recording technician, an office staff of administrative assistant and two secretaries, and specialists in the music of Africa, the Balkans, Latin America, Thailand, Persia and Indonesia, as well as instructors in Indonesian and African dance.

A select advisory committee also cooperates with the institute. It includes members of the African Studies Center, the Center of Mythology and Folklore, and the Departments of Dance, Theater Arts, Music, Anthropology and Art.

SPECIAL

THE PILGRIMS—The dramatic flight to Holland, and the danger-packed journey to the New World in their search for religious freedom is re-created in this season's final program for "Saga of Western Man," at 7:30 p.m., in color, ch. 7. The story is told primarily through the experiences recorded in the journal of William Bradford, with the Mayflower II, a replica of the original ship, used for filming at sea, with other scenes filmed at Scrooby, Babworth, Boston and Hampton Court Palace, all in England; Leiden in Holland; and Provincetown, Plymouth and Cape Cod Bay in the U. S.

JONATHAN WINTERS—Steve Allen, Leo Durocher and the comedy team of Stiller and Meara are Winters' guests in a full hour of ad lib comedy at 9 p.m., in color, ch. 4. For his sixth and last special of the season, Winters gives an audience "warm-up," performs a zany baseball pantomime, portrays a children's nature show host (afraid of the studio lion), joins Allen for ad lib phone calls and has a family picnic in which he plays all the characters. Alexander Scourby provides off-screen narration.

FINLANDIA—The Early Bird satellite is used for its first cultural broadcast as CBS observes the 100th anniversary of the birth of composer Jean Sibelius at 10 p.m., ch. 2. Charles Kuralt is reporter at Ainola, the rural home where Sibelius lived and worked from 1904 until his death in 1957 and which is now a national shrine, where one of the composer's 5 daughters is interviewed and the University of Helsinki choir performs. Then, from Helsinki, an all-Sibelius concert by the Finnish Radio Symphony Orchestra is seen in progress. (Other Early Bird segments are seen on network news shows today, with the first transatlantic colorcast set for NBC next Monday from London.)

LETTER From an Only Child—Don Balluck's symbolic play about a young woman on the verge of either understanding herself or having a nervous breakdown is repeated at 10:30 p.m., ch. 2, starring Amy Fields, William Tomlinson.

MERV GRIFFIN—Premiere—Formerly the toast of the daytime airwaves, Griffin now returns in a syndicated 90-min. nightly series (successor to the earlier Allen and Philbin series) to be seen at 11 p.m., ch. 11. Arthur Treacher and Colin Romoff's orchestra will be regulars, joined on the opener by Carol Channing, Danny Meehan, puppeteer Larry Reeling and UPT's Merriman Smith.

Imagination Creates a Setting

By Stella George

DECIDEDLY different is the interior decorating theme of the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Carver, 3252 Rowena Ave., Los Alamitos, where imaginative use of materials and units establishes a Spanish decor.

The house has no entry as such but positioning of furniture has created the impression of such an area. The living room is sufficiently large to create an entrance hall but leaving the area open increased the idea of spaciousness.

Mrs. Carver combined efforts with interior designer Bryan Waller in carrying out the desired theme. Predominant colors are avocado, shocking pink, and shades of red. A long sofa upholstered in a rose and floral linen faces the windows of the living room in the front of the home. Across the room, backing the entry, are two occasional chairs done in shocking pink velvet and flanking an end table that matches another at the far end of the sofa. The tables are of wormy chestnut finished in a rich brown-black tone. A high-backed, Spanish-type occasional chair is finished in avocado with an avocado velvet seat cushion. On the opposite side of the room is another occasional chair upholstered in a tweed-like avocado material.

Imagination is evident in the decoration and furnishing of the living room of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Carver.

ACCESSORIES in the room are interesting. To break the wood effect in the room, two small cocktail tables in front of the sofa are finished in gold leaf. Lamps have carved cathedral candlestick bases. The gallery wall over the sofa is a combination of former personal treasures of Mrs. Carver with the additional use of carvings — black wall sconces, St. James, a door knob, a gold key, a smaller black key, and framed pastels.

The dining room group is antique olive green with chair seats covered in the same material as the sofa. The table is an old refectory table which, when extended, can seat 12 persons. The kitchen area has been masked off by the use of shutters which match those on the lower part of the windows in the front of the living room.

The candelabra over the fireplace is distressed gilt from the metal workers of Madrid. The chandelier over the dining room table is black wrought iron with dimming candles. A matching fruit bowl rests in the center of the table.

Daughter Cindy's room is done in Carver blue (similar to Wedgewood). She has a dressing table, chest of drawers, desk (one which her father had many years ago but which is now done in Carver blue), and bookshelves.

The master bedroom is unusual. A four poster bed and matching pieces are pine.

THERE ARE many details characteristic of this home. For example, firewood is kept in an antique round-top trunk place near the fireplace. Small accessories in the kitchen have been sprayed or painted black (by Mrs. Carver) to carry out the Spanish theme. Obviously functional ash trays were chosen for their beauty as well as utility. The wall to the right of the entry is papered in avocado and gold, thus bringing this area into the living room and trying in the color scheme. The low chest which runs along the wall was once the top part of an old buffet. Now, painted avocado and washed with umber, with a gold leaf top, it is unique. The base of the buffet was transformed into a very low table, finished in avocado, placed beside the green occasional chair in the living room.

Santa Monica

courage to the party. They, too, would carry on! The next day they found a pass through the mountains and discovered a wonderful valley. The pass is now called Sepulveda Canyon; the valley, San Fernando!

THE NAME Santa Monica, given by the Spaniards to the pools that resembled eyes, was later given to the mountains and a canyon. In 1875, the townsite of Santa Monica was recorded. The large Rancho San Vicente of the Spanish era was divided into lots and today's city was born.

The story of the pools and of Saint Monica's influence upon the explorers cannot be proved for it does not appear in any of the diaries. The legend is widespread, and old timers who remember the early days of the town's growth say the pools were near Sawtelle. One is said to have disappeared as so many springs in this area have done. The other, many believe, is in the grounds of West Los Angeles' University High School. Whether or not this is the spring that refreshed the men of Portola's expedition, it bears a plaque put there by the San Vicente Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution, which reads Father Junipero Serra Spring.

The city that lies at the edge of the mountains has not forgotten its saint. A huge statue of Saint Monica stands guard in Palisades Park at the corner of Wilshire Boulevard and Ocean, a reminder of California's Spanish heritage of fact, legend and soft flowing Spanish names.

Laundry Aid

The basement laundry in apartment houses, in theory a fine way to eliminate the need for individual laundering facilities, may not be quite so successful in practice, especially for the busy housewife and mother who must leave her home for an hour or more or else dash up and down.

Recognizing the inconvenience of commuting from apartment to basement laundry with the family wash, Tandy & Allen Construction Co. has decided to bring the laundry room to the wash in its new Crescent Park luxury apartment in East Orange, N.J. There will be a laundry room on each floor of the 19-story building, with a conventional basement laundry to handle any overflow of traffic.

With the laundry room only a few steps down the hall, household duties need not be interrupted, and mothers don't have to be out of the house for long periods.

'Slattery' Star Takes High-Finance Road

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI)—Richard Crenna, star of the "Slattery's People" series, has parlayed his television earnings into a booming personal fortune.

In video's swaddling days Crenna played the dimwitted high school kid Walter Denton in "Our Miss Brooks." He was only slightly more bright as Luke McCoy in "The Real McCoys." But his image as a sophisticated, polished politician in the new show is very much like the real Crenna.

The actor has invested his television gains in real estate, a dry cleaning establishment, a laundry, a television production company and various prosperous corporations.

An unactorish fellow with a serious outlook, Crenna and his wife Penny are the sort of people you'd like to have for neighbors.

They've been married seven years and have two youngsters, a daughter, Seana (pronounced Shawna) and a son, Richard.

THEIR HOME is situated on an acre and a quarter in the plush Royal Oaks section of Encino in the San Fernando Valley. Their neighbors are Shirley MacLaine, Dennis Weaver, Gale Storm, Roger Williams and Julie London.

The house is a low, rambling ranch style modern, which Penny has converted into a French farm house. She is responsible for the decor which is principally French antique and Italian provincial.

Her kitchen is done over in farm kitchen style with plenty of room for family gatherings around the table. There's an indoor barbecue pit where Penny does much of the cooking, and the kitchen table is where the Crennas thrash out the problems of the day when he returns from the studio.

The family moved into the house five months ago. They had lived only three doors away, but felt the need for more space. And space is what they have.

THERE ARE five bedrooms, a maid's room and seven baths. There is also a spacious patio, a swimming pool, an office-den, a workshop and a three-car garage. Dick's particular hangout, however, is a huge play room with soda fountain for the youngsters.

"When they grow up and leave the nest I'm going to convert it into a tavern room," Crenna says.

To complete the picture of gracious living there is a badminton court and a driving range (with net) on the grounds. Crew members of Crenna's new CBS-TV show provided the golf paraphernalia.

Delicate Orange Chiffon Mold is a true harbinger of springtime. (See article below for recipe.)

Orange Chiffon

By Mildred K. Flanary

WHAT could be a truer harbinger of spring, than a delicate Orange Chiffon mold?

It has wonderful sweet-tart flavor and handsome appearance, and also may be molded, made into a soufflé, filling for a lady-finger pie shell, or served in individual dessert dishes. The recipe:

Orange Chiffon Mold

1 envelope unflavored gelatine
 $\frac{3}{4}$  cup sugar, divided
 $\frac{1}{8}$  teaspoon salt      2 eggs, separated

$\frac{1}{2}$  cup cold water
 1 can (6 ounces) frozen orange juice concentrate, kept frozen
 1 cup heavy cream, whipped
 Whipped cream
 Orange sections
 Strawberries

Mix gelatine,  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup sugar, and salt in medium saucepan. Beat together egg yolks and water; stir into gelatine mixture. Place over low heat; stir constantly until gelatine dissolves and mixture thickens slightly, about 5 minutes. Remove from heat; add frozen (Continued on Next Page)

SPECIAL

KKK: "Society of Bigots"?
—For the third time in 100 years, Ku Klux Klan crosses burn with fury throughout the south, and Imperial Wizard Robert Shelton squares off against President Johnson's warning to get out of the Klan. From bits and pieces the mosaic is assembled for a chilling, factual presentation of "ABC Scope" told by Howard K. Smith at 10:30 p.m., ch. 7. In a small South Carolina town feelings ran so high over the Klan, pro and con, that an ABC camera crew was run out of town at knife point.

LONG BEACH had a colorful entry in a Los Angeles floral pageant that pre-dated the first one in Pasadena by some 20 months.

A flower encrusted revolving model of a light-house, complete with blinking light, was constructed by Mrs. C. T. Healey, a Mrs. Peebles and others for the flower festival held April 21, 1888. The wife of Capt.

Healey, the surveyor who laid out the townsite of Long Beach, donated the above photograph to Long Beach Public Library.

The Long Beach Journal, the city's first newspaper, had two brief items about the festival in its April 27, 1888, issue.

One read: "Mrs. Belle Lowe has contributed 1,000 callas, 400 roses and 400 carnations to the Festival, all raised within a few hundred feet of the breakers." The date and wording of this item indicate that the festival lasted for several days.

The other Journal piece expresses thanks to all concerned from "the management of the Long Beach booth." Besides the Mmes. Healey and Peebles, Mrs. Fillmore and Mrs. Goucher are mentioned for "procuring from Mr. Goodman the extra train for Saturday night." Mrs. Dodsworth is thanked "for the use of her ladder in constructing the tower."

From his March Air Force Base complex, Gen. Old directs major air bases and missile installations at 20 or more locations in the United States and Alaska.

Operating from these installations are several hundred B47 and B52 bombers and approximately 450 ICBM's poised and ready to fire should the need arise.

CONTROL of this vast Air Force is maintained from the combat operations center, an on-the-top, under-the-ground structure that houses some of the world's most complex electronic equipment. It is the nerve center of a twin-pronged strike force—bombers and missiles always on the alert.

So, while the nation thinks of the past and present, this Armed Forces Week, Fifteenth Air Force and all of the Strategic Air Command will maintain their 74-hour work week to assure the nation's future.

It's a never-ending alert for Gen. Old and his fabulous Fifteenth Air Force.

It's always one step from "go."

Recipe of the Week

BOT BOI might sound exotic but it's really the name of a good sturdy dish of Pennsylvania Dutch origin, submitted as this week's $5 prize-winner by Mrs. Jack Ruffer, 1280 Oakmont Rd., Apartment 54-G, Leisure World, Seal Beach, Calif. 90840. The recipe:

Pennsylvania Dutch Pot Pie (BOT BOI)

2 lbs. stewing beef, pork or veal 1 onion
Salt and pepper

6 potatoes

Dough:

1½ cups flour

Little milk or water

3 tblsp. shortening

1 tsp. salt

1 egg

Cut the meat into 1 inch pieces and cook in boiling water for 1½ hours. For the dough: cut shortening into flour and salt then add beaten egg and enough water to make dough. Roll out thin and cut into squares. Then into the boiling meat and liquid, slowly drop layers of sliced potatoes and sliced onions and dough squares. There should be enough liquid to boil up over top of potpie. Cover tightly and cook 20 minutes. A pinch of saffron may be added.

What's your favorite recipe? For each recipe published in this space, Southland will pay $5. Men are urged to submit their recipes along with the ladies. Send yours, with name and address to Recipe Contest Editor, Southland Magazine, 604 Pine Ave., Long Beach, Calif. 90812.

Hotel Comforts Orange Chiffon

The modern bedroom is taking its cue from the up-to-date hotel, providing its occupants not only with a place to sleep and dress, but with sitting room facilities as well.

Mary Morrison Kennedy, vice president of Decorating, Design and Architecture for the Sheraton Corp., a leading hotel chain, says the guest who does not rent a suite now is provided with a "daytime" area in the bedroom featuring occasional chairs, a sofa in some cases, a small desk and, of course, a television set.

Following this fashion, really a return to the tradition of an earlier era when the master bedroom always had a parlor area, home builders have been lavishing more space and planning care on the master bedroom. Often alcoves or bay window areas are included that can be used for dressing, watching television or answering mail. In some homes, even the luxury of a bedroom fireplace is included.

'Inside Job'

Extra living space can be yours right now if your home has an attic that can be finished. This can be an economical way to expand living space, because no new basic construction is required.

Unless the attic is immense, however, make one large room and a bath instead of several smaller ones. Surface the bathroom floor and walls with waterproof ceramic tile to prevent moisture damage to ceilings underneath. You can use low spaces in the attic for cabinets, shelves.

orange juice concentrate and stir until melted. Mixture should mound slightly when dropped from spoon (if not, chill a few minutes). Beat egg whites until stiff but not dry. Gradually add remaining ¼ cup sugar and beat until very stiff. Fold into gelatin mixture. Fold in whipped cream. Turn into 5-cup mold. Chill until firm. Unmold. Garnish with whipped cream, orange sections, and strawberries.

Yield: 6 servings.

To section oranges, cut slice from top, then cut off peel in strips from top to bottom, cutting deep enough to remove white membrane. Then cut slice from bottom. Or, cut off peel, round and round, spiral fashion. Go over fruit again, removing any remaining white membrane. Cut along side of each dividing membrane, from outside to middle of core. Remove section by section, over bowl, to retain juice from fruit.

Chiffon Desserts

Turn orange chiffon mixture into individual dessert dishes. Serve immediately or chill until firm. Garnish with whipped cream and orange sections. Yield: 6 servings.

Chiffon Pie

Split 8 ladyfingers. Cut ends off enough ladyfingers to line sides of 9-inch pie plate (they should extend above rim of pie plate to hold generous filling). Line bottom of pie plate with remaining split ladyfingers and ends. Pile orange chiffon mixture into pie shell. Chill until firm. Garnish with whipped cream and orange sections. Yield: 6 servings.

I saw that fabulous English group Freddie and the Dreamers on the Ed Sullivan Show and I just had to write to say I think Freddie is the most adorable little guy alive next to John Lennon of the Beatles, that is.

Man, he's so smashing! I love the way he runs around doing that tough new dance called The Freddie.

Kathy Noone, Long Beach
Thing are tough all over.

Charlie Weaver of the now defunct Dennis Day Show

and the incomparable Burl Ives, are they one person?

Also, I would like to know when Steve Lawrence starts his TV weekly show.

Dolores Nartea, Long Beach
Weaver and Ives are incomparable individuals—separate.

Lawrence starts Sept. 13 on CBS-TV.

Recently I saw one of the "Man from UNCLE" series with David McCallum's wife, Jill Ireland.

Enjoying it very much, I wondered if, in the new fall series, Jill Ireland would get a permanent role in the show.

Pauline Daniels, Long Beach
She'll guest-star again. All of the permanent roles have not yet been decided at this point.

What happened to the "Hullabaloo London" segment of "Hullabaloo"? That's my favorite part of the show.

Sherry Melton, Long Beach
The producers of the series couldn't agree less. In revising the format of the program, they eliminated London and intend to keep it that way. "Better-paced show without it," they claim.

Why are some of the "Branded" episodes in color and the others are not?

Gary Hacker, Long Beach
The three-part "Mission" sequence was made in color to be released overseas as a movie. All the rest of the "Branded" segments will be in black-and-white.

NANCY HALLINAN interprets a young actress in an extraordinary novel "A VOICE FROM THE WINGS" (Knopf, $5.95) telling the story of an individual's quest for herself through various roles: daughter, child prodigy, rebel, wife, mistress, actress.

WHY HAS Finland, almost alone among the small nations formed after World War I, remained vigorous, productive and creative? David Bradley asks and answers that question in "LION AMONG ROSES" (Holt, Rinehart and Winston, $5.95). The title describes the heraldic emblem of Finland.

Bradley shows the Finns through the eyes of an American family. The family, first engulfed in domestic vicissitudes and confusions of living with a seemingly impossible language and culture, gradually adjust through ski trips to Lapland, summer schools and a long camping trip in war-torn areas of eastern Finland. They come to feel the history of the land of lakes and forests, they grow to understand the people who have shaped the history and been shaped by it. And they get as explosively aroused as the Finns at interference with the election of a Finnish president.

GREGOR Piatigorsky likes a joke — particularly when he is the joker. His autobiography, "CELLIST" (Doubleday, $4.95) is replete with anecdotes—jokes he played, jokes played on him, good musical performances, musical disasters, and times when his temper exploded.

From childhood in Russia, Piatigorsky took a long road to international fame as a virtuoso cellist. He describes inexpensive rooming houses, temporary jobs, membership in trios and quartets. He tells about the four years when the Berlin Philharmonic could be hired by anybody—and was hired by conductors, soloists and composers who wanted to show themselves off.

He recalls the touching moment when Richard Strauss conducted one of his own works and then said "I have heard my Don Quixote as I thought him to be."

BOOK REVIEWS

The Lives of Oscar Wilde

By Vera Williams

Southland Magazine Book Editor

DESMOND Hall's "I GIVE YOU OSCAR WILDE: A Biographical Novel" (New American, $5.95) strips away the glittering facade of the man of letters and reveals the sympathetic and sometimes pathetic figure underneath. It recreates the glamour, excitement and debauchery which typified the literary and artistic circles that made up London's intelligentsia in the fading days of Victoria's reign.

A seldom-mentioned and not widely known facet of Wilde's life, his role as an ardent swain during his courtship of Constance Lloyd, and his role as affectionate husband and father are recounted. The tragedy of Oscar Wilde's conviction and jailing also is recounted by Hall, who wrote that portion of his book in the rooms in London's Canogan Hotel occupied by Lord Alfred (Bosie) Douglas during Wilde's first trial. In that trial, Wilde brought a libel suit against Lord Alfred's father, the Marquess of Queensberry, who had inferred Wilde was a sodomite. Wilde lost his suit, and as a result of testimony brought out during the trial, was arrested and convicted.

Hall has taken great pains to infuse into "I Give You Oscar Wilde" the man's penchant for witty banter, puns, jokes, wry comments and brilliant jests.

JAN CAREW went through much the same experiences as did his protagonist in "GREEN WINTER" (Stem and Day, $4.95). The novelist was the first youth from British Guiana to be given a scholarship to Russia; his novel is the story of Joseph, a Negro from a colonial country and a foreign student in Russia. Joseph and his fellow colonials who have been cajoled to the Soviet Union arrive wide-eyed, full of ideals, illusions, hopes.

Their experiences illuminate the news stories we have read of the African student demonstrations in Moscow and in the other Red capitals — not the trumped-up anti-U.S. riots which are turned on and off like water spigots, but those more deeply significant protests, spontaneous, needing no rehearsals, in which Africans have gotten their bitter disillusionments off their chests and held them up for all the world to see.

Joseph falls in love with a Russian girl; she is banished to the Virgin Territories of Soviet Asia. He and his fellow Negro students hear themselves mocked, they find that terror did not disappear with the ashes of Stalin, but indeed is still very real. The adventures of the Negro students in search of socialism are picaresque, but they are frightening too.

V. S. NAIPUL, native of the Caribbean island of Trinidad and descendant of immigrants from India, has delighted those who have been fortunate enough to read the picaresque doings of the Trinidadian Hindus who people his novels and short stories. In "AN AREA OF DARKNESS" (Macmillan, $5.95) he reverses the udysey of his ancestors and visits the land of his forefathers, India. He arrives there as much a stranger as an American of Mayflower descent is to England.

He finds India fabulously and endlessly fascinating, but he also finds it heart-rendingly sad. He uses, in one hand the scalpel and in the other the paint brush of a brilliant artist. From Madras to Calcutta, from Bombay to breathtakingly gorgeous Kashmir, in New Delhi, wherever he goes, he does not blink at the abject poverty, the grinding degradation, the filth; but he paints the humility and the sweetness of Indians as few have done it.

"The Taj Mahal," he finds, "is exquisite. Transported slab by slab to the United States and re-erected, it might be wholly admirable. But in India it is a building, wastefully without a function; it is only a despot's monument to a woman, not of India, who bore a child every year for fifteen years."

Naipul's is one of the finest books about an India where "caste imprisons a man in his function . . . the poor are thin; the rich are fat . . . beggars whine" and "holy men give up all."

"THE BOOK OF PARADISE" by Itzik Manger (Hill and Wang, $5) is a quaint, slit-eyed fable, buoyantly translated from the Yiddish, recounting the adventures of a baby angel (a temporary one) born to an unimaginative couple. The story is based on an old folk tale that children before birth live in Paradise, and just before they are born, an angel taps them on the nose and they forget their stay in

AN OFFICE is as interesting as the people who work in it. A bizarre collection of office workers is seen through the eyes of a scavenging housefly in Richard Chopping's chilling novel "THE FLY" (Farrar, Straus, $4.95).

Paradise. Illustrated with 20 delightful drawings by Mendel Rief.

POLYNESIA — You can take a 90-minute visit to six enchanted islands of the Pacific without leaving your easy chair—and Bill Burrud's color cameras did the same trick without leaving the multi-million dollar "Disneyland of Polynesia" built by the Mormon Church on the island of Oahu. The unique Polynesian Cultural Center includes six villages—Tahiti, Samoa, Hawaii, Tonga, Fiji and New Zealand (Maori)—each with authentic grass huts, swaying palms and natives in the traditional garb of their own island. At 8:30 p.m., in color, ch 13, you'll see native crafts, fierce Fiji warriors, grass-skirted Tahitian maidens, and a lovely young Samoan girl adorned in a costume of taro leaves.

SUSPENSE THEATRE — An East German refugee, whose pregnant wife didn't make it with him through the Berlin Wall, devises a conscienceless scheme to bring her over during an Easter weekend of relaxed travel restrictions. He meets an American look-alike, woos her to steal her passport and switch the woman's identities, leaving the American girl alone and unidentified behind the Wall. Richard Beymer stars at 10 p.m., in color, ch. 4, with Katherine Crawford in a dual role.

Canada 'Find'

By Maurice M. Gould

A NEW VARIETY of the 1955 Canadian cent has recently been discovered. This item will undoubtedly find its way into all of the catalogs and coin books of the future.

This date comes with and without shoulder straps and the scarce variety is the piece without shoulder straps. As the coin is of recent date, there is always an opportunity to find one of these in your collection or in Canadian change, as a tremendous amount of these go back and forth across the border.

Figures to date show that the no-strap variety is 200 times as scarce as the strap cent. If coins are well worn, it would be difficult to tell whether or not it is of the scarce variety.

A collector in Ontario searched through 75,000 cents before finding one, but these items have been found in every one of the Provinces of Canada and in the United States.

It is difficult to set a price on this item as yet until reliable figures are available and the supply and demand price the coin at the proper level.

WITH THE PASSING of the immortal Sir Winston Churchill, a great many medals and tokens will be struck in his memory.

One medal, which was started in November 1963 and was planned to honor the great statesman at the time of his 90th birthday, had to have an entire new reverse made because of the recent tragic event.

Medals are being struck in England and Canada and will shortly be struck in other countries. The British will strike a 5-shilling piece, which is equivalent in size to our silver dollar, in his memory, and the coin will be eagerly sought after by collectors throughout the world.

THE MOST FAMOUS issue of Hawaiian coins is the series of 1883.

Since Hawaii became the 50th state, the interest in all numismatic material of the islands has greatly increased and a book on Hawaiian coins published.

The 1883 issue was struck in four denominations: 10 cents or one dime, quarter, half dollar and dollar, all minted at the San Francisco mint.

Hawaiian Dollar of 1883

One-half-million pieces of the quarter and dollar were struck; several hundred thousand of the half dollar and 250,000 of the dimes.

The great majority of the dollars were withdrawn from circulation and melted, leaving approximately 10% of the issue outstanding. A great many of these beautiful pieces found their way into various forms of jewelry and many were holed for this particular purpose. It is very difficult to obtain any of these pieces in uncirculated or brand new condition.

FOR ANYONE who wants a Hawaiian coin in the least expensive category, I suggest the 25-cent piece, which retails at from $7.50 to $15, depending on the condition.

The 10-cent piece runs $10 to $25, the 50-cent piece sells at from $35 to $75, and the dollar sells at $75 to $200, with the price range depending on whether they are in fine or uncirculated condition.

Proofs or specially struck coins for collectors are known and all of these are very rare.

'Wide World of Sports' Makes the Unusual 'Routine'

By RICK DU BROW

HOLLYWOOD (UPI)—The big Saturday treat in the New York neighborhood where I was brought up was to be packed off, with lunch in a brown paper bag, to a local movie house fondly nicknamed "The Itch" because of its general condition.

The matrons there all looked like Wallace Beery, and I don't know how many times they slugged us kids for howling with gleeful disbelief at those crazy short films about exotic, remote-type sports (to us) that filled in during the double- or triple-feature breaks. I mean, here we were sitting in "The Itch," and there they were showing us some films with a guy sailing his yacht off Ceylon. Or maybe it was about tree-climbing in Tasmania or polo in Algiers. It all seemed like that, anyway. I never saw a film about baseball or football.

Well, times have changed—maids own boats, brown paper bags simply aren't what they used to be, and ABC-TV's "Wide World of Sports" has made events like the National Skydiving Championships almost as routine an occurrence for the televiewer as the World Series. And what I am getting around to is that "Wide World of Sports" marked its fourth anniversary recently—showing the Tournament of Champions Golf competition at Las Vegas and stock-car racing at Daytona, Fla.—and I just wanted to say "Happy Birthday, 'Wide World of Sports.'"

I WANTED TO SAY THAT because "Wide World of Sports," with rare exceptions, is really an accomplishment each week. Although ABC-TV is the smallest network, "Wide World of Sports" is still the best sports show on national television and has caused its competing broadcasters to come up with imitations, none of which has survived as steadily or as long. It was the cord of this "Wide World of Sports" staff that was responsible for ABC-TV's brilliant coverage of the last winter Olympics with same-day prime-time specials.

I don't know about tree-climbing in Tasmania, but "Wide World of Sports" has shown events in 29 countries, from the Davis Cup to barrel-jumping championships, from the English Derby to lumberjack competition, from billiards to the Japanese All-Star Baseball Game, from the St. Patrick's Day Irish hurling showdown in Dublin to American-Russian track meets in Moscow. It is worth your time.

Set Sail for Big Fun

Happy summer days are plentiful with this sailboat that's easily made from a pattern.

DO YOU want summer to enter your blood like a tonic? If you do, then build a sailboat. There isn't a do-it-yourself project that will pay you and your family bigger dividends in fun and relaxation. Even though sailing has never been considered a branch of medical science, it can cure many ills that pills can't touch. Each launching starts a new holiday of fresh adventure and new family fun.

The sailboat pictured here is 15 feet long; it has a beam of 5 feet 3 inches, a depth of 24 inches and weighs about 500 pounds.

GENEROUS free board and clean lines distinguish this simple, well designed knockabout. Though its performance delights experts, the craft is what its name implies, a safe, stable sailboat for family fun on any water. Anyone can build it, for the joinery involved is straightforward carpentry. Planking is exterior type fir plywood which makes any boat easy to build — and when built, better. The pattern for this project includes easy-to-understand directions and lots of different illustrations clearly showing the various steps. A complete list of required materials is included. These are not expensive and are available from your local dealers.

To obtain the easy-to-follow pattern number 380 for building the sailboat pictured, send $2 in currency, check or money order with name and address to Steve Ellingson, Southland Magazine Pattern Dept., Box 2383, Van Nuys, Calif. 91409.

Majestic Park of the Pinnacles

By Earline M. Gladstone

FANTASTIC and picturesque, the peaks of Pinnacles National Monument rise eminently from the surrounding terrain. The Monument, with the exception of a very small corner which spills over the line into Monterey County, is located in San Benito County. Not too often publicized, it is interesting, restful and majestic.

Thirty million years ago the area was not peaceful. Violent volcanic eruptions tore the earth's surface, and poured tons of boiling lava over the land. These flows built a mountain which geologists estimate must have been 8,000 feet high, about three times as tall as the present day pinnacles. The spasmodic convulsions of the earth subsided in time, but the faulting of the land continued, and Nature's sculptors, the wind, water, frost and heat have relentlessly chiseled away at the original volcano until only a small portion remains. They have formed the tapers and spires as seen today, and their work continues.

In 1794 George Vancouver, accompanied by a small group of equestrians, looked upon this southern extremity of the Gabilan Range, and "was gratified with the sight of the most extraordinary mountain" that he had ever seen. In describing the view he said that one side "presented the appearance of a sumptuous edifice fallen into decay." After his visit these unusual rock formations were sometimes called "Vancouver's Pinnacles."

THE GREAT American educator and naturalist, David Starr Jordan, was instrumental in the selection of the Pinnacles as a national monument and President Theodore Roosevelt proclaimed it as such in 1908.

The Monument contains 23 square miles. There are 15 miles of hiking trails, and visitors are urged to use them for many of the scenic wonders can be viewed in no other way.

One popular trek is the one-hour, one-mile "Caves and Moses Spring Trail." There is no human guide, but the visitor is handed a leaflet with explanatory descriptions, and number corresponding to those on markers along the loop trail.

Along this route one passes through caves which were formed by parts of the cliff walls falling like bridges over the canyon floor. There are more than 150 steps to ascend on this trail.

"THE BIG ROOM" is about 100 feet long. It was created when a 64,000-ton rock arched the canyon. It is said that this room was once the hideout of bandits. Tiburcio Vasquez, a bad man of early California, is supposed to have hidden in the Pinnacles on several occasions.

Moses Spring, along the way, has a unique story. In the early 1920s, two home-steaders along Chalona Creek — Z. N. Marcott and Herman Hermanson — were working on this trail when they noticed a damp spot. Marcott said, "Moses smote the rock and water came forth. I'll smite this one." He struck a few times with his pick and the water flowed.

Chaparral is the predominating plant life, furnishing food and protecting wildlife, but there are groves of live oak and digger pine. Deer, raccoons, foxes, rabbits and wood rats are permanent residents. The Monument is well known for the many species of birds.

CAMPING and picnicking are allowed in designated areas. Park rangers are on hand to assist visitors and to enforce regulations, and a park naturalist will explain geological and other natural features of the Monument. The park is open all year, but is especially beautiful in the spring and early summer when myriad wild flowers weave Persian carpets on the green hillslopes.

Pinnacles National Monument is located just off State Rt. 25, 35 miles south of Hollister and about the same distance north of King City. The preferable ingress to the monument is a paved five-mile road that leads west from Hwy. 25 to the east gate of the Monument. It is a pleasant tree-shaded road and the motorist is likely to pass deer feeding close by.

S. I. Turoff, well-known scalp authority, opens a 6-day hair clinic to demonstrate remarkable new scientific methods, that stop hair loss, eliminate dandruff and help grow stronger, thicker hair offer complete introductory hair and scalp treatment for $2 during Clinic Week—next 6 days.

S. I. TUROFF
Director 12 California
TUROFF CLINICS

QUESTION: IS BALDNESS INHERITED?

ANSWER: Definitely NOT. WE MAY INHERIT A TENDENCY to baldness, not baldness itself.

QUESTION: WHAT CAUSES BALDNESS?

ANSWER: Many things, among them excessive dandruff, poor circulation, neglect. It takes a professional to determine the factors in each individual case.

QUESTION: WHAT CAN BE DONE ABOUT BALDNESS?

ANSWER: No matter WHAT stage of baldness you have reached, your hair can be regrown with proper treatments, if the roots are alive.

FIRST REMARKABLE TREATMENT TO NEW CLIENTS
$2.00 NEXT 6 DAYS

What ARE the Danger Signals

There are definite warnings and everyone can recognize them. DANDRUFF means there are bacteria at work. If they are not removed, they choke off the hair roots, a bald spot soon appears, and baldness spreads until you are completely bald. The same is true of EXCESS FALLING HAIR and ITCHY SCALP. In fact, anything but a healthy, good-looking head of hair means something is wrong and you MAY BE ON THE WAY TO BALDNESS. The longer one waits, the more advanced the condition.

AMAZING NEW METHOD MUST BE

Antidepressant Drugs Queried

By Ben Zinser

Southland Magazine Medical-Science Writer

A LARGE-SCALE study of anti-depressant drugs has prompted VA hospital researchers to question their efficacy in the treatment of depression.

Following four studies involving 443 patients, VA researchers say findings indicate these drugs "do not offer any conspicuous advantage over other possible treatments."

Among the drugs evaluated were imipramine, isocarboxazid, desipramine, amitriptyline and thioridazine.

Among the study group were some schizophrenics. The drug thioridazine did help these patients. But researchers were mainly interested in anti-depressant properties of the drugs.

The research projects were reported to the American College of Clinical Pharmacology and Chemotherapy.

A NEW DEVICE—the endoscope—has been developed to permit visual examination of the middle ear with a minimum of discomfort to the patient.

Under local anesthesia, a small incision is made on the ear drum to permit insertion of the small round probe into the middle ear.

Through an attached surgical microscope, the surgeon may observe the functioning of the middle ear. The tip of the probe is electronically illuminated, with light conveyed by optical fibers.

The scope was devised by Dr. S. Bruce Mer of the National Institutes of Health and built by the Illinois Institute of Technology Research.

DUTCH researchers have found a close relationship between chronic bronchitis and lung cancer.

A recent study of 150 lung cancer patients admitted to the University Hospital in Groningen, The Netherlands, over the past few years showed that 144 (96%) had had chronic bronchitis for many years.

Among a comparison group of 100 patients who had the same smoking habits but no lung cancer, only 28% had chronic bronchitis.

The researchers define chronic bronchitis as frequent coughing over a period of years, shortness of breath and the expectoration of mucus.

A NEW anti-anxiety drug, oxazepam, has proved "exceptionally effective and safe" in a study of 148 patients suffering a wide variety of behavioral disorders.

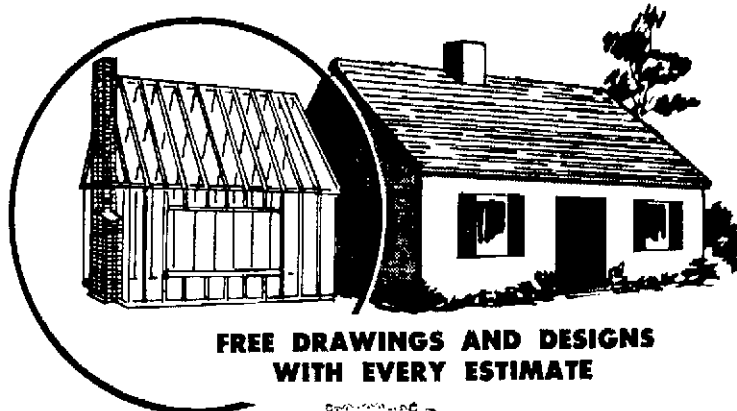

An excellent to good response was seen in 85% of those treated, Oak Forest, Ill., researchers report. Responses were obtained without the drowsiness and loss of balance that frequently stem from use of other drugs used to alleviate symptoms of acute and chronic anxiety.

Oxazepam is expected to be available for general use by June under the trade name Serax.

SPECIAL

INTERNATIONAL HOUR

Premiere. The five CBS-owned stations again exchange hour-long cultural programs with TV networks of Japan, Australia, Hong Kong, Singapore, Italy and Canada in a series to air Saturdays at 3 p.m., ch. 2. Opener is the U.S. entry, produced by St. Louis' KMOX-TV, and featuring Met baritone Robert Merrill, duo-pianists Ferrante and Teicher, and the St. Louis Symphony under the baton of Brazilian maestro Eleazar de Carvalho. With one exception (Merrill's singing of an aria from "Barber of Seville"), the entire "Festival of Music" hour is made up of works by composers from North America. Exchange programs from abroad begin next week with a performance of the Tokyo Symphonic Orchestra. Margaret Truman Daniel will be hostess for shows from abroad.

GLEASON'S GAITIES

Featured players, writers, producer, director and other cast members become entertainers at 7:30 p.m., ch. 2, as Gleason encores his annual cast show featuring songs, balancing acts, dancing and rope tricks. Sixteen male staffers imitate the June Taylor Dancers, and Frank Fontaine doffs his Crazy Guggenheim rule to imitate Sen. Robert Kennedy, Sen. Everett Dirksen, Claude Rains and Cary Grant. (Al Hirt heads a 13-week musical-variety series to spell Gleason for the summer starting June 19.)

PET PARADE

Busy Day for the Dogs

By Eleanor Avery Price

TODAY is a busy one for dogs and their owners. At Pan American Park in Long Beach, the San Gabriel Valley Cocker Spaniel Fan- ciers have a puppy match, with entries closing at 9:45 a.m. Obedience trained dogs are striving for "legs" at North Hollywood Park in the Hollywood Dog Obedience Club trial. Members of the Basset Hound Club of Southern California and spectators will laugh all afternoon as hounds enter contests such as longest ears, loudest howl, saddest face, and a costume parade. San Fernando Valley Kennel Club has its event at that city's Recreation Park, and the Boxer Club of Southern California has its sanctioned match at El Nido Park, 182nd and Kingsley Streets, Torrance.

owned by Ruth Anderson, Torrance. Don't let the formidable appearance of the boxer send you up a tree. Almost all are amiable, although they will protect their owners and property very capably. As puppies, boxers are seemingly tireless and romp with great enthusiasm. They need someone with whom to play, or another boxer.

WHEN GROWN, the boxer is still vigorous and gets bored if left alone long hours every day. If there are school children in his family, they can give him a romp in the morning and greet him gaily when they return. And there should be a good-sized yard and safe toys. Beef hide strips are fine. Get the large size for large dogs. They are available in quantity from California Animal Products Co. The smaller ones are often quickly eaten. They are not greasy, and they provide chewing exercise. The active boxer and other dogs usually benefit from obedience training. There has been some unrest recently among obedience people. They feel there should be another class beyond U. D. (Utility Dog) other than Tracking Dog. Some owners have actually turned to training their friendly dogs to be attack dogs. In case you have this in mind, you should know that an attack dog is considered a lethal weapon. It can be very difficult to turn an attack dog or war dog back into a dog suitable for community living, although in many cases it can be done. For dogs in the armed service there are classes at Fort MacArthur, San Pedro. Usually it takes six weeks to readjust the dog to civilian life.

Borzoi Club of Southern California sponsors an all-

ONE OF MY first tasks as a child helping my mother keep house was to run the carpet sweeper over the floor. It was a real honor to be permitted to use this one piece of equipment which the average home had in those days. No doubt it was put into my hands to keep me from using the broom to sweep the dust under the carpet.

For the carpet sweeper had a marvelous pan which fastened onto the bottom so that you had to turn it upside down when you wanted to empty out the assortment of fuzzy dust, black and white thread, paper scraps, and hairpins which you had picked up running the sweeper over the floor.

CAME THE DAY when the vacuum cleaner burst into popularity, and it had been a long time since I had thought to use anything which didn't plug into a switch into the wall or on the floor. But recently I went shopping for a carpet sweeper and was amazed to find the beautiful bright blues, pinks, greens and yellows available. They were dressed as if going to a party instead of to do a routine household job as did the previous black and brown models.

Selecting a turquoise sweeper to use in a new work area, I discovered the dirt pans are on top, the easier to dump out the dirt into the handiest wastebasket. My sweeper has such a bright luster I can see how to straighten up my messed up hair before going to answer the doorbell, if caught in the cleaning process.

The sweeper is as quick and easy to grab as a broom and still keeps me from putting dirt under the carpet, supplementing the plugging in of the vacuum for the heavier cleaning. But the surprising thing is that in the emptying I discover that not only is the sweeper a rainbow shade, but much of what it picks up from the floor is colorful.

OCCASIONALLY there is a piece of lint from a bright

rose electric blanket, a piece of candy stripe carpet from where Smokey, the cat, tested his paws, a strip of multicolored yarn from the new sweater being knit for the man of the house, and a scrap of silver foil from the wrapping of a candy bar that fell to the floor. It's a colorful world when the new carpet sweeper and the dust it picks up match in supercolor.

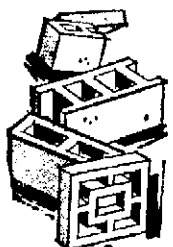

Better still, we'll deliver it to your door. A Weinheimer truck complete with carpet & furniture cleaning specialist, the most modern equipment and over 18 years experience. Call GE 3-9906 for a free estimate. Carpet & furniture will last years longer. You'll see.

If your carpet is beyond cleaning we carry top name brands of first quality carpet... all at reasonable prices and guaranteed workmanship.

Dragon in the Garden

By Virginia M. Crill

TERROR of ancient fairy tales, the fiery-tongued dragon may not have been as completely imaginary as we always believed. For he has left distant relatives and apparent descendants living among us. If they were not now in miniature they could be as frightening today as in ages past when they stole lovely princesses and gobbled up inhabitants of whole villages.

The miniature descendants still have voracious appetites. But the villages they gobble up now are considerably smaller. They are little, dragon-type lizards that like to eat ants. They like red ants, black ants, big ants and small ants — for breakfast, lunch and dinner, as well as for snacks.

The horned-toad as this ugly but welcome small creature is commonly called has an unending appetite. When he finishes the ants in a backyard he pleases all gardeners by next dining on sow bugs, spiders and other pesty insects. Although he has never been seen to spout fire as the dragons of old, his stomach appears to be lined with it for one of his species was observed sitting outside a beehive eagerly swallowing the bees as fast as they flew near him.

SINCE the horned toad is native to this region, many persons without even knowing it may have some of these small lizards living in their yards. They are colored so that they blend into the ground where they live. Even the spots on their backs look like variations in the ground. Insects also seldom notice them—until it is too late. Their bodies are so constructed they do not even cast a shadow when sitting quietly. Close watchers can almost never see them actually catch an insect. The only noticeable motion is the swallowing of the horned toad as the insect suddenly vanishes.

Ugly and slow, horned toads seem completely vulnerable for they apparently never fight, are non-poisonous, and so small that when full grown they can sit comfortably in the palm of a hand.

But they do have a built-in defense. The rows of spines around the backs of their heads and necks are not just decorations. Animals that eat one seldom live to eat another for these spines pierce the throat of the bird or snake or other reptile trying to swallow one, and usually kill it. There is a record of a young western diamond rattlesnake killed by having its neck pierced by the horns in an attempt to swallow one of these small lizards.

WHEN frightened they usually squirt a drop of blood from one eye at or on anything which bothers them. These tiny creatures have been known to squirt blood several yards although the average is only a few feet. In Mexico they are referred to as the lizard that cries blood.

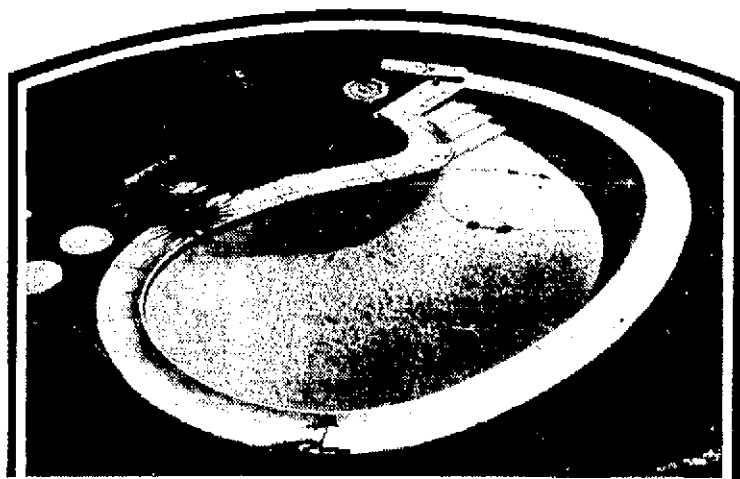

Although they never obviously show affection they can apparently be tamed. Miss Ann Crill, Long Beach, has owned several and can pick them up and carry them around as though they were delicate dolls. They show no sign of fear and do not even try to jump away. And there are no ants around her home.

The horned toad is one of more than 3,000 kinds of lizards, only 20 of which are poisonous. The Gila Monster of Arizona and Mexico and Horrid Heloderma of Mexico are the only poisonous lizards in this part of the country. They are easily distinguishable by their fat, sluggish bodies about two feet long. The largest distant relative of the harmless horned toad is the Dragon Lizard of Komodo in the East Indies. It may grow to 12 feet long and may weigh up to 250 pounds.

Meanwhile the horned toad grows more welcome each day to gardeners and homemakers who understand it, as it sits or moves in near invisibility, quietly eating many times its weight in unwanted insects.

Pet horned toad sits on knee of Ann Crill. Reptiles devour vast quantities of insects.

Mums are easily grown if certain rules for their culture are observed by the gardener.

By Joe Littlefield

MUMS are easily grown but many mum fans still haven't mastered the trick of making these plants produce bushy, sturdy branches with green foliage well down on the lower branches.

Gardeners must be consistent in pinching back the new growths at the right time, instead of cutting the branches each time they grow long after previous cutting back.

A well-cared-for chrysanthemum, whether pompon, decorative, exhibition, or one of the numerous fancy types, can be trained to grow sturdy, well foliaged and massed with flowers, simply by pinching tips back each time new growth develops after a previous pinching, and new growth has two pairs of leaves. Pinching must stop around four to six weeks before flower buds set. (Nothing is a sadder looking sight in the garden than vine-like branched mums, the gardener has to stake early in the season, then tie and retie them after each time he cuts them back and new weak leggy stem branches grow out.)

YOUR GARDEN

FERTILIZE the plants every three or four weeks with a balanced plant food. Protect them from aphids, and leaf hoppers and possible other stray pests, water them preferably in the mornings.

You'll make those mums serve two purposes by selecting certain branches and snap off all the young buds but one remaining. The single larger flower blossoms should be cut for indoor decoration. Branches not disbudded will have many more but smaller blossoms that may be left on the plant for color in the garden.

Choose some mum varieties that flower early, some in mid-season and, unless you live in an area where frosts come early, some late kinds, too. Thus you'll have mums from September through December and into January.

PLANT DAHLIAS now for summer and fall color. Green plants or roots with sprouts started should be set out. Place stakes while planting. Dahlias upon growing, develop fattened roots right away. Driving a stake alongside a growing plant may pierce the main root, or damage smaller roots, possibly causing rot.

Label, after planting. We can't always remember just what's been planted where.

Watering and spraying are the two routines to start this month. The frequency in watering depends somewhat on possible late rains; overcast, foggy weather, and type of soil. Don't overwater; that might cause weeds.

"Spray early. We start spraying as soon as the dahlia sprouts are above the surface of the soil. Thrips seem to be the common early pest.

Pinch off tip growth after three pairs of leaves develop. This forces six side shoots to grow. For flower show growing, pinch tip off large flower variety after second pair of leaves, forcing four side shoots for huge blooms.

Dorothy Digs

All sorts of pests are starting to appear on my flowers and shrubs since the late rains have everything putting on real rapid growth.

I have already sprayed my roses twice with a dual purpose rose spray because I want to prevent mildew and/or black spot.

However, for the other pests I like to use a multi-purpose bug killer that is a combination for killing both chewing and sucking bugs. With one spray I can get them all at once and not have to use a different one on each pest.

One year I neglected to spray my Madonna lilies and before I woke up there was a nice round hole in each bud and not one opened up.

Gardenias are now covered with buds and two thorough sprayings 10 days apart will be real insurance for a full blooming.

GARDEN CLUBS

Members and guests of Long Beach Garden Club will have an armchair trip to the New York World's Fair in a program to be presented by the Dilday Family at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday in Linden Hall, 208 Linden Ave. New officers will be installed. They are Florence Sunn, president; Patricia Dailey, vice president; Blanche Ashby, treasurer; Grace Bonnewitz, corresponding secretary, and Adelaide Keating, recording secretary.

"Plant Life and General Culture" will be the topic of Bert Slatter at a meeting of Long Beach Fuchsia Society at 7:30 p.m. Thursday in Machinist Hall, 728 Elm Ave. There will be a plant table.

Long Beach African Violet Society will have its annual African Violet Show from 1 p.m. to 9 p.m. Monday and from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Tuesday, May 17 and 18, at the Woman's City Club, 1309 E. 3rd St. Show theme will be "A Garden of Violets" and will be carried out on the stage and in arrangements and compositions. The public is invited.

Berry Seeds

Do you know that you can grow strawberries from seeds? There's a variety named Baron Solemacher which will flower eight weeks after planting and will produce large, sweet, very fragrant berries for weeks. This is an Alpine type strawberry which does not produce any runners, but will remain small.

This little strawberry is especially useful as a border to a path or a flower bed, near the house of course so you can pick the berries as they ripen.

New Soil Aid

LAWN and flowering plant fanciers bedeviled by barren ground will suddenly see greener pastures, literally, in a new discovery that attacks the problem of alkaline soils.

Already patented, the idea is being introduced after extensive research in Southern California coastal areas where "alkaline" means that the dirt under lawns and plants has too much mineral salt. Much of this dirt is ocean bottom hardened by lack of rain.

The new preparation contains food elements, micronized iron and bacterial activating elements—including humusite which has been a popular plant-growth activator for the past decade and Green Gard, a patented iron preparation that will not burn the soil.

THROUGH a deliberate but gradual process, the new dressing breaks down—unlocks—the hard-sticking soil, commonly known as "hardpan."

The dressing seeps down into the hard layers of alkaline soil which are packed as tightly as new shingles on a roof. It loosens up the earth into small bunches or an overall porous condition, thus it unlocks the soil so that its nutritive values are free to reach up to the grass and plant roots above.

A partial analogy is drawn from the oil-well drilling procedure in the Long Beach area: the operator mixes water with his drilling mud so that it will seep more readily into the cracks and fissures along the walls of the hole he is drilling.

The preparation's manufacturer, Black Magic, Inc.,

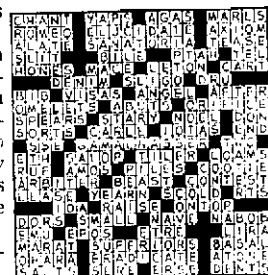

states it has found the new product far outlasts sludge, manure or even peat moss as a mulch. It is odorless and contains no filler, sludge or manure.

"HORTICULTURAL experts have declared that Southern California needs a particular kind of mulch—one without salt content. We have the same faith in this new formula that we had in our indoor plant mix discovered in the Forties," said Miss Martha Parks, president and board chairman of Black Magic, Inc., Hermosa Beach, now the world's largest manufacturer of plant aids.

Recent examples of the successful use of the dressing are in evidence in the South Coast Botanical Gardens in Rolling Hills, who have reported excellent results since the dressing was applied on a large new fill of earth that had not been seeded as a lawn before.

Another experiment proved very successful at the base of a eucalyptus tree where there is usually a ring of earth that will not grow grass. Ten days after the dressing was used, the bare ring filled with new shoots of grass (see picture).

Garden Tips

Garden Tips for the week

Shrubs that have finished blooming need feeding now to develop strong new growth. Lawns should be fertilized now, and pay particular attention to chrysanthemums and fast-growing annuals and perennials.

A good pair of hedge shears can be the gardener's best friend. Even if you don't have a hedge, they're worth the investment for shearing back ground covers and perennial edgings after bloom. Use them on alyssum, ajuga, candytuft, chamomile, and snow-in-summer.

Geraniums are blooming in pots at the nursery, and this is an excellent time to add them to your collection.

What Your Name Means

Send your name to La Reina Rule in care of Southland Magazine, 604 Pine Ave., Long Beach, Calif. 90812, for origin, meaning and brief genealogy, for reply only in this column.

DEAR MISS RULE: Would like data on TEAL, TEEL. — D.T., F.T., Long Beach.

D.T., F.T.: TEAL and the alternate form TEEL began in Britain as the forefather's inn-sign trademark, a colored picture of a "teal" or small duck. Ancestors include John Teel or Teal of Somerset, 1327. The Teal armorial shield is silver, emblazoned with a serpent, indicating eternal life, placed below three teal ducks.

DEAR MISS RULE: Kindly give data on DUMMOLIN, MOLINE. — M.M., G.L., Long Beach.

M.M., G.D.: DUMMOLIN had its beginning in France as "Du Molin," describing a man "from the mill." MOLINE was a variation of the same phrase. Descendants of the ancestral mill owner were awarded a coat-of-arms in the medieval French province of Dauphine. Their shield is silver, decorated with a black cross having a silver center.

DEAR MISS RULE: Would like information on BYRD, BIRD. — J.B., J.N., Long Beach.

J.B., J.N.: BYRD and the modern spelling BIRD represent a professional "byrder" or "bird-catcher" in early Britain. The nursery rhyme about "four and twenty blackbirds" illustrates this occupation. Wild birds were a staple food in the Middle Ages. Byrd ancestors lived in Oxford, Suffolk and Shropshire, England in the 1200s. They later owned an estate at Broxton, Cheshire. Their armorial shield is silver, embossed with a red cross between four red birds. Rear Adm. Richard E. Byrd, Antarctic explorer, was the most famous descendant of this lineage.

DEAR MISS RULE: Would you explain ANDREWS. — R. A., M. F., Long Beach.

ANDREWS honored St. Andrew, patron saint of Scotland whose name means "strong and manly." The family shield is red, decorated with a gold St. Andrew's cross ("X"-shaped).

DEAR MISS RULE: Please explain HOCHSTADT, HOCHSTADTER. — J. H., Lakewood; W. H., Bellflower. J. H., W. H.: HOCHSTADT, describing "citizen of the high city," and HOCHSTAD- (Continued on Page 27)

Tall Gals Like Short Fellas

VIOLATING all of the accepted rules of reason, tall, blonde beach bunnies Mary Hughes and Mary Sturdivant, featured players in American International's new musical comedy "Beach Blanket Bingo," prefer to date fellows on the short side.

Mary Hughes is 20 and stands 5 feet, 8 inches tall. Mary Sturdivant is 19 and stands 5 feet 8½ inches tall.

Neither finds her height a disadvantage. On the contrary, Mary S. is convinced that tall girls have all the best of it.

"You can wear more things and look better in them even carrying 10 pounds of overweight," she says. Mary S. weighs 123 pounds.

"IT'S QUITE an advantage," says Mary H. "When I walk in some place, everyone sees me immediately, and I can also see them. What's more, a girl with long legs can wear things other girls wouldn't dare put on."

Mary H. prefers sports-wear, with a strong leaning to pants and bikini bathing suits. "A girl with long legs likes to show them off," she confides.

Both beauties say they have rarely dated a boy as tall or taller than they though they admit that most modern youngsters are growing taller and larger than their forebears.

But Mary S. gives some provincial insight into their reasoning when she says,

"In Hollywood the boys tend to be so strikingly handsome a girl needs something to make her stand out so she doesn't get an inferiority complex."

White House

Originally known as "The Palace" or the "Executive Mansion," the White House got its name around 1814 after it was severely burned by the British and had to be painted white to hide the traces of charring on its buff colored freestone walls. Shortly after the repainting, the name "White House" began to be used on Capitol Hill and stuck through the years.

TER with a similar meaning, originated from a forefather who lived at the south German city of Hochstadt, Bavaria. The family shield is gold on the upper half, emblazoned with a red rampant lion; blue on the lower half, decorated with a gold, 3-tiered fountain.

DEAR MISS RULE: Would like data on MENDENHALL.—D. M., E. M., Long Beach; I. S., Bellflower.

MENDENHALL is an unusual English name with an ancient origin. The source was the old Teutonic German term "Mandjan" meaning "most happy and glad one." Mandjan evolved in Britain as Menden, to which was added the word "Hall" for the owner of a large, imposing manor house. No shield is available for Mendenhall, American ancestors include John Mendenhall, born in Wiltshire, England, 1659, who settled in Chester County, Penn., about 1680 and left many descendants.

DEAR MISS RULE: Kindly analyze COLBERT.—Mrs. C., Los Alamitos.

C. COLBERT, French in nationality, began in the 1300s as a hero-warrior name. The source "Kolberht," portrayed "man with the shining helmet." The Colbert armorial shield from Paris is gold, embossed with a springtime blue serpent. The Colberts originated in the old northeast French province of Champagne. Family descendants are exemplified by the noted Jean Baptiste Colbert, Marquis de Seignelay, 17th century financier.

DEAR MISS RULE: Would like data on MAZZANTTI.—M. S., Long Beach.

M. S. MAZZANTTI, of Italian background, was handed down from a forefather baptized Giacomazzo, a nickname for Giacomo (James in English) meaning "The Supplanter." Giacomazzo was shortened to Mazzo, then enlarged as "Mass-antti," or "son of Mazzo." The Mazzantti armorial shield is gold, emblazoned with an arm in red holding a war club, placed below a blue stripe engraved with three gold fleurs-de-lis (lilies).

DEAR MISS RULE: I would be fascinated by genealogy data on the south French Basque name SERRES.—C. M. S., Pomona.

M. S. SERRES, from the old Iberian-Spanish "Serre" means "from the mountains." This southern French lineage achieved an armorial shield in Gascony. Their shield is in four parts, two blue with a pair of gold eagle claws on each; two red, centered with a dove holding an olive branch in its beak.

WHAT'S IT LIKE IN JUNGLE WAR?

It's Hit-Run in Viet Nam

By RAY HOLDEN
As told to Hoyt McAfee

WITH the U.S. dispatching increasing numbers of fighting men to Viet Nam, many Americans are wondering out loud about the casualty rate so far. Have the losses been higher or lower than our country suffered, say, in the Korean war?

On that score we have only the word of Gen. Maxwell Taylor (U.S. Ambassador to Saigon) to guide us. During my two years in South Viet Nam, I—Ray Holden—attended several of Taylor's more informal press briefings.

Recently, I tried to pin him down on the number of Americans who've been killed in all types of warfare in Viet Nam: in the jungle, in air raids, during terror bombings, on helicopter patrols, and those cut down by guerrilla snipers. Ambassador Taylor at first evaded the issue by stating that such an official release (of the war dead) would have to come from Secretary of Defense Robert McNamara.

A BIT LATER he modified his stand somewhat. This was what he revealed: "Considering the limited type of warfare in which we're involved here (in Viet Nam), our losses have been a bit higher—proportionately speaking—than what we suffered in the Korean war."

Official figures show that in the long, on-again, off-again Korean conflict, 54,246 American fighting men met death. Anyone who has watched the Viet Nam struggle grind on, indecisively and agonizingly, knows that full-scale pitched battles have been few and far between.

There have been, instead, surprise air raids on Viet Cong bases, hit-and-run blows struck at enemy-held positions, jungle engagements, and the like. Military strategists label it "limited and pin-pointed warfare, the primary purpose of it being to strike at the enemy's most vital nerve centers."

In this type of warfare—Ambassador Taylor admitted in a moment of candor—terror bombings, sneak raids by guerrillas, and jungle fighting have been responsible for 80% of American casualties in Viet Nam.

THIS MEANS that American GIs there have had to

accustom themselves to warfare waged by stealth and guile. Seldom has what they expected—such as all-out frontal attacks by the enemy—come to pass. On numbers of occasions I've known forces to be poised and prepared for a big thrust.

For nerve-wracking hours, even days, they waited in vain for it to break loose in full fury. Then, almost incredibly some night, Viet Cong guerrillas would infiltrate the American and South Viet Nam position. Their terror bombs, exploded in rapid-fire relays, blew up ammunition dumps, killed hundreds on the spot, and created much havoc and confusion.

After that came another period of eerie silence and watchful waiting—with the nerves of American and Viet Nam troops growing more jumpy by the minute. Patrols sent out to try to lure the enemy from his hiding places met with one of three fates: (1) Drew sporadic fire from snipers, (2) spotted no form of activity or movement, or (3) ran head-on into an ambush and were wiped out.

FROM ALL this one clear picture emerges: U.S. forces in Viet Nam are getting a liberal education—the hard and terrifying way—in unorthodox, guerrilla-type warfare. On my visits to up-front positions, I saw that American and Viet Nam commanders often had to improvise on the spot. A well-devised campaign would have to be discarded at the last minute in favor of a quickie, commando-like portunity to do their dirty work.

They'd suddenly turn their guns on American and American-trained guerrilla fighters in front of them and off to their side. This traitorous conduct immediately threw the jungle unit into confusion and often destroyed its effectiveness as a fighting team.

REPORTERS, I quickly discovered, are restricted in their movements in all staging and combat areas. Only rarely are they permitted to talk with men who fought the enemy in hand-to-hand combat: during the course of which they went through shocking, terrifying, and eye-opening experiences.

All impartial observers are agreed that the Viet Nam struggle against the Communist North has been an inadequately reported war. To cite my own experience: Press relations' officers suggested that I'd be "raking over an old sore," if I mentioned how GI jungle fighters need Chinese armed guards to protect them against traitorous attacks from within their own ranks!

Yet this qualifies as legitimate information; and in collaboration with Hoyt I'm passing it along to readers now. It logically follows that the more factual information Americans have about the elusive and at-times confusing Viet Nam war, the clearer will be their understanding of what sacrifices must be made to win it.

ALL THE WHILE casualties, though seemingly small in number, continue to mount. Using Ambassador Taylor's comment as a guide, the final tally could be staggering—especially for a war conducted in hit-and-run fashion.

In his off-the-cuff remarks on various occasions, Taylor has predicted that stepped-up operations against Viet Cong forces would, in the long run, keep the American casualty rate down. For the reason that such an all-out, hard-hitting campaign should—and probably will—put the enemy to rout and prompt him to sue for peace.

With the American build-up in Viet Nam now a fact, that kind of campaign can be expected from here on out. In the meantime, American GIs who've seen action in Viet Nam are inclined to sum it up as "the strangest and most bewildering war we've ever experienced."

raid by a small band of specially trained fighters.

At some of the jungle encampments I witnessed something which was truly astonishing. When an American and Viet Nam patrol would set out to probe enemy-held territory, special Chinese mercenaries would accompany them.

What was their role? As amazing as it may seem, their duty was to protect American GIs from being shot in the back by traitors among the Viet Nam soldiers! Making that discovery naturally disturbed me.

IT ALSO prompted me—a combination student-journalist—to ask questions which U.S. press relations' officers considered "embarrassing." But by persisting I ascertained this much: That the jungle fighting front in South Viet Nam remains in a state of "flux" and "uncertainty."

Most of the specially-trained fighters are loyal to the Saigon government. Others, however are secretly sympathetic and in league with the North Viet Cong regime. Unobtrusively and artfully they manage to infiltrate the ranks of South Viet Nam units.

This can prove doubly disastrous out in the jungle zone. For, there, small patrols must depend upon the loyalty and cooperation of each member. Months ago, I learned during my fact-gathering trip, two and sometimes three traitors would seize upon an op-

That's how patrons react to the halibut steak at Hoe fly's restaurant, 4911 E. Second St., which has been serving distinguished cuisine for more than 36 years. It is not ordinary halibut. It is the extremely thick center cut from a whale halibut, a huge fish which sports happily in the cold blue waters of the Northwest Pacific. Hoe fly's serves it with drawn butter on an epicurean repast which includes fine soup, tossed salad, potato, beverage and dessert.

That halibut ($3.75) will be but one of the wonderful entrees served on Hoe fly's special Mothers' Day menu today from 1 to 10 p.m. Among the others will be roast prime ribs of beef au jus, a superb selection of charcoal-broiled steaks, baked Virginia ham, roast leg of lamb and tender Australian lobster tails.

Host at Hoe fly's, which has a gracious old English atmosphere, is slim Irving Solomon, a modest, quiet civic leader who is extremely active in Long Beach's business life and who has given years of service to such charities as the City of Hope hospital. # A Feeling for Writing

Ray Bradbury set himself a spartan goal and the regime has made him a successful writer.

By Aubrey B. Haines

MILLIONS of persons wish to become writers. Ray Bradbury became one by promising himself when he was 21 that he would complete a short story a week (or its equivalent in novels, plays, or film scripts) for the rest of his life. Having more than kept his promise, he has made himself a writer of distinction.

Ray Bradbury has sold more than 300 short stories alone and still found time to give a few away—to new magazines that need something good to grow on and to old magazines that need material to survive on. He writes novels, articles, and television scripts with the same fine hand, has a workshop with other writer friends, and travels around Los Angeles by cab, campaigning for public transportation.

As a boy Ray wanted to be onstage, literally working magic. When Ray was 10, Blackstone, the magician, gave him his first rabbit. Not until he was 19 did Ray get out of the wings and really write, although he began writing when he was 12.

"AT THAT TIME I wanted to be a famous writer like Steinbeck, Faulkner, and Cather," he recalls. "I had to wear glasses since I was 10, so I couldn't do much else than write. By the time I got out of Los Angeles High School, I was writing a good deal, and I said that if I didn't sell anything by the time I was 21, I'd quit. I had a story published on my 21st birthday. But I was still selling newspapers at Los Angeles Olympic Boulevard and Norton Avenue. I was making $10 a week and living with my folks. I kept that up until I was 22."

When he speaks, Bradbury's voice rises a decibel or two, and his laughter sometimes grows shrill.

"Soon after I wrote the one-act play, 'The Pedestrian,' I read it to a group of friends," Ray recalls. "Shaking their heads, they said that it was a shame it would never be suitable to produce on the stage. I tore it into bits and threw it in the trash can. Then in the middle of the night I reconsidered, retrieved the shreds, and taped the manuscript back together. I gave it to director Charles Rome Smith and the Desilu Workshop on television. They put it into private production, and 'The Pedestrian' played successfully. That was lesson Number One for me. A writer must remain a student all his life."

RAY DOUGLAS Bradbury was born Aug. 22, 1920, in Waukegan, Ill., where his childhood was profoundly influenced by Edgar Allan Poe, Willkie Collins, The Wizard of Oz, and Buck

Rogers. Ray first saw his name in print at age 21 and graduated from Weird Tales to the American Mercury four years later. He married Marguerite Susan McClure in 1947, and the Bradburys have four daughters.

"An ancestor of mine was tried as a witch in Salem, Massachusetts," he says. Perhaps this gave rise to his "Fahrenheit 451," a short novel that attacks book-burning, thought-control, and mass-hypnosis.

Christopher Isherwood describes Bradbury as "a great and unusual talent" and objects to calling him simply a science-fiction writer. "If one must attach labels," says Isherwood, "Bradbury might be called a writer of fantasy and his stories 'tales of the grotesque and arabesque' in the sense in which those words are used by Poe."

ALTHOUGH Bradbury's fantastic stories and novels coincide roughly with the formula of science fiction, their impact is more often directed towards probing the human psyche. Or their impact is political and social. For Ray Bradbury the wide universe of science fiction has enabled his busy imagination to roam, unhindered. His tales, at their best, bring new insights into present-day culture and almost always spine-tingling chills.

"When I used to sell newspapers in Los Angeles," Ray recalls, "my friends would walk by my corner and laugh at me, saying, 'Bradbury, why don't you get a job with Standard Oil?'"

"I'd say to myself, 'Some day I'm going to be famous and surpass them.' Now they still have their jobs with Standard Oil, and when I see them, I never tell them anything about myself. I'm too lucky and too sorry for them."

Advice on Selling

Don't redecorate your home if you're planning on selling it.

That's the advice of James C. Brody, president of the Massachusetts Association of Real Estate Boards.

"While sensible improvements may add 25% to the resale value of your home," he says, "redecorating can often lose the sale. This is so because while most prospective house buyers can see the value in a modernized or extra bath, their tastes in interior colors and decoration may be as varied as there are prospects."

From Ideas a Den Evolves

FOUR BARE WALLS and the rectangle that is a room come to life when ideas come through the door. Drapes in the background are of the same colorful pattern as the paper covering the wall behind them. Adequate desk surface is provided and the wall is devoted to shelves, knickknack space, drawers and similar storage facilities. IMPORTANT to Californians today because their rugged beauty is ideal for a state park, the Santa Monica Mountains were important in 1769 also, for they formed a barrier that nearly stopped exploration. Jose Remundo

Carrillo, a member of the Portola expedition, the group of white men who were the first to walk the Indian trails now known as El Camino Real, told his descendants a story of the mountains, of a tired priest and how the thought of Saint

Monica influenced the course of history.

The story began in Laredo, Mexico, starting place of the Spanish expedition that set out to explore upper California and open it for settlement. Or perhaps the story rightly began 227 years earlier when Cabrillo sailed along the coast and wrote in his diary about the many off shore islands and the bay of San Diego. Another chapter, an important one, was added in 1602 by Vizcaino who sailed into and described a beautiful bay now known as Monterey Bay. This was the place the 1769 expedition hoped to reach.

THE EXPLORERS went first to San Diego Bay and established the first white settlement in Alta California, San Diego. From there Father Junipero Serra, the church head of the group, sailed with part of the men for Monterey. The 63 others, led by Capt. Gaspar Portola (later to be California's first governor) and Father Crespi, went by land. This group of men—soldiers, priests and Indian muleskinners—were daring adventurers. Although it was less than 200 years ago—and hard for modern minds to realize—there were no maps, no assurance that food and water would be found or that the Indians encountered would be friendly, no radio to bring search parties or planes to drop medicine and food, According to the diaries that are a record of the trip, these foot travelers seemed to feel that an average of three miles a day was good. Of course they were mapping, exploring, studying, not hiking for fun.

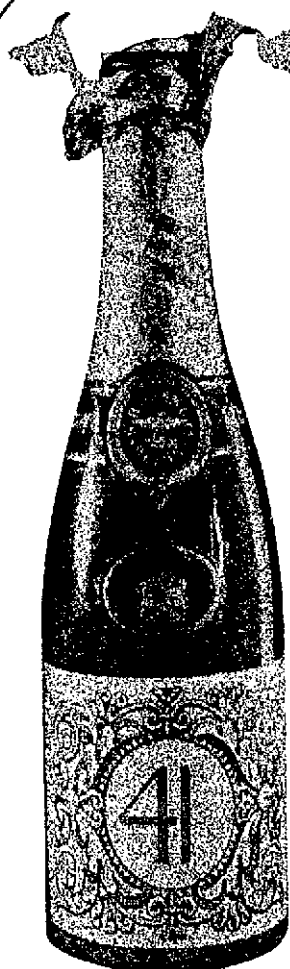

The Crespi-Portola party had many adventures before they reached the mountain barrier. Mountains at the south end of the cup we now call the Los Angeles basin were low enough to cross easily. Father Crespi's diary tells how the northern edge was a barrier that seemed impassable to tired and undernourished men.

THE LATE Leo Carrillo, the loved descendent of Jose Carrillo, told the story his great great grandfather revealed in his book, "The California I Love." Camp was made of an August evening without a decision being reached about continuing the journey. Father Crespi left camp and walked toward the beach hoping to see a way to travel around the mountains by walking along the water's edge. He saw the Palisades and as he wrote, that the mountains seemed to go into the sea.

The priest followed a little stream that emptied into two pools shaped like a woman's eyes. He exclaimed "Las Lagrimas de Santa Monica" (the tears of Saint Monica). To the devout man this was a reminder of that saint's characteristic—she never gave up. The mother of a wayward worldly man, she wept, prayed and worked until he was reformed and became Saint Augustine. The woman who is famous for her tears and determination inspired Father Crespi and brought new

Jenny to Jet

Nation's progress in aviation symbolized at vast March Air Force Base.

By EV HOSKING

FOR SOME, a ghostly air armada of the past will be soaring over March Air Force Base today as the nation opens its celebration of Armed Forces Week. For those whose memories can span 47 years or more there will be a dual sensation.

Their eyes will take in the skyscraping white missile at the entrance to March Air Force Base; will see the airstrip with the long-range jets roaring aloft.

But their ears will ring to the racket of ancient OX5 engines as they power a ghostly fleet of ancient "Jennys" over the field.

It will be only a fleeting memory, though. The Jennys are long gone. And so are most of the men who flew them.

AIR PIONEERS of the past, however, must be heaming with pride wherever they are in eternity—for March Air Force Base near Riverside, from its humble beginning in 1918, has become one of the most famous military installations in the world and the center of one of the most elaborate defense complexes in the nation.

Only 47 years ago, it housed the kids who first dared to challenge the "Wild Blue Yonder." Today it is the headquarters of the Strategic Air Command's fabulous Fifteenth Air Force, allied units and also operating base for the 452nd Troop Carrier Wing of the Air Force Reserve.

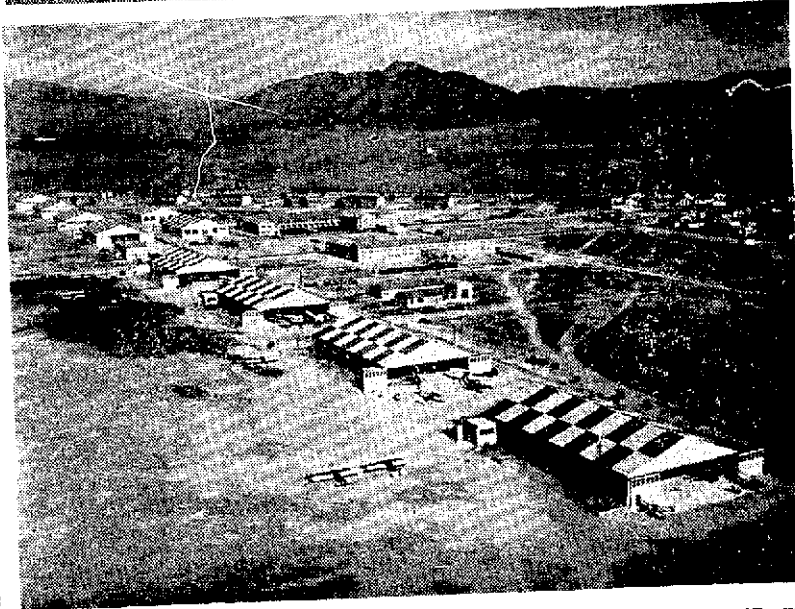

Forty-seven years ago top speed of the famed Jenny was in the neighborhood of 80 miles an hour. Today 800 miles an hour is just a starter.

Under the direction of Lt. Gen. Archie J. Old Jr., famed flying commander of the Fifteenth Air Force, March Air Force Base today is the headquarters for a manned bomber-missile complex that includes most of the Western United States and extends westward past Guam.

MARCH AIR FORCE BASE itself houses the 22nd Bomb Wing with its B52 long-range jet bombers and the KC135 tanker planes needed for its global flights as well as a computer-equipped combat operations center that is second to none in the world.

The maze of electronic equipment enables Gen. Old and his battle staff to maintain control over the vast missile-plane complex at all times wherever its units may be in the world.

This is a far cry from the day the base was activated in 1918 after an advance Sunday, May 9, 1965

Crewmen rush to their planes from underground quarters at March Air Force Base in practice alert and in sharp contrast to the days of the famed JN4Ds, shown lined up at the field in early-day photo (top).

This aerial view shows how March Air Force Base appeared to a pilot as he came in for a landing in 1930. The land area is now completely filled with buildings.

party of four men from Rockwell Field in San Diego had scraped off a scanty, single dirt runway.

The field was named as a memorial to Lt. Peyton C. March, son of the Army's World War I chief of staff. Lt. March died in a Texas plane crash in 1917.

During World War I, March Field's primary mission was to train Jenny pilots for overseas duty. Later the base was closed down for a few years and reopened in 1927 as a primary flying training center. Among the famous Air Force leaders who received their training there was Gen. Curtis E. LeMay, recently retired chief of staff of the United States Air Force. His instructor was Gen. Nathan E. Twining, former chairman, Joint Chiefs of Staff.

ONE OF THE early commanders of the base was Gen. H. H. (Hap) Arnold, who became the Army Air Force's chief of staff during World War II and who is generally regarded as father of the present-day Air Force.

Crews for every major heavy bomber in the Air Force history from 1920 were trained at March. These included the old Martin B10, forerunner of the super, high-speed bomber, later the B12, B17, B24 and B29.

The base even achieved fame in the fighter field. After World War II, Lockheed P80 fighters arrived with the First Fighter Group in 1945, which was the first fully equipped jet tactical unit in the nation's history.

Many outstanding achievements have been recorded at March Air Force Base over the years, contributing to the science of aviation.

In the late 1920s, an aerial refueling record was established when "The Question Mark" took off from March and flew around the vicinity for five days, refueling in midair by primitive means.

MANY YEARS LATER, Gen. Old commanded the "round-the-world" flight of three B52 jet bombers in the first non-stop jet aircraft circumnavigation of the globe.

In 1949, headquarters of the Fifteenth Air Force was transferred to March Air Force Base from Colorado Springs, Colo., under the command of Maj. Gen. Emmett O'Donnell Jr.

Equipped with World War II B29 Superfortresses, the Fifteenth's 22nd Bomb

Group, later the 22nd Bomb Wing, was alerted for overseas on July 3, 1950, and made its first combat mission against North Korean Communist forces exactly eight days later. The 22nd has been stationed at March Air Force Base since May 1949.

With the advent of jet bombers, personnel and planes from March continued to pioneer in the air. In early 1954, a flight of B27 Stratojets of the 22nd Bomb Wing flew nonstop from England to March in slightly over 12 hours. Again, in 1947, another B47 commanded by Maj. Gen. Walter C. Sweehey Jr., then Commander, Fifteenth Air Force, flew nonstop from March to Japan.

TODAY, March Air Force Base is the home of a full wing of B52 bombers and its accompanying force of KC135 tankers—airborne filling stations for their worldwide missions.

Presently most of March's bomber force is deployed at other bases, primarily on Guam in the Western Pacific, but the permanent manpower needed to fly, fuel and staff and supply this mighty air arm is retained at March Air Force Base.

Command of this global force is vested in tough, sharp Gen. Old who was respon-

Dr. Walter H. Munk conceived big drilling idea.

How Old Is Earth?

What is world's origin?
How did oceans fill with water?
How did life on this planet begin?
Project Mohole--deepest holes
ever drilled--may give the answers.

Above, diagrams show problems involved in drilling hole deep into the earth. Left, a scale replica of the $10 million drilling platform to be used in probe of earth's mantle. Drilling is scheduled in the Pacific, giving West Coast an edge in bidding on contract to build platform.

The optimum depth believed obtainable by drilling is about 35,000 feet.

DRILLING of the Hawaiian hole is to begin in 1968 and is expected to last three years. Work on the secondary holes off the West Coast is scheduled to begin in 1967.

Selection of the Pacific areas for the drilling could mean that a West Coast shipyard, possibly in Southern California, will be chosen to construct the drilling platform-vessel.

The 21,500-ton drilling craft is to be a 279x234-foot platform standing 135 feet above the water on six huge columns which stand on a pair of giant submarine-sized pontoons.

Described as the most sophisticated drilling machinery ever conceived, the platform, which will have three decks, is to be capable of operating during gale force winds, and should remain afloat even if one entire column is flooded.

IT WILL COST in the neighborhood of $10 million, and its construction is expected to get under way by April.

While plans go forward to put the operation into effect, NSF scientists plan to continue to search for another drill site.

"If we can cut a few thousand feet off the total depth to be drilled, the chances of a success on the first try would be materially increased and the cost materially cut," explains NSF director Dr. L. J. Harworth.

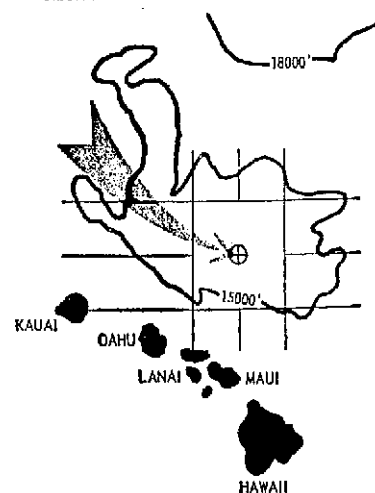

The idea of tapping the inner core of the earth was conceived over breakfast, in 1957, by Dr. Walter H. Munk of the Scripps Institution of Oceanography at La Jolla and Dr. Harry Hess of Princeton.

THE PROJECT hopes, by bringing up samples of earth's internal materials, to provide clues or answers to some of man's profoundest scientific mysteries including:

How old is the earth? What is its origin? How old are the oceans and how did they become filled with water? Is the earth getting hotter or colder? Why are the ocean basins fundamentally different from the continents? How did life on earth begin?

Mohole is also expected to produce numerous technological by-products including improved oil drilling and ocean mining techniques and improved oceanographic research capabilities.

By LOU JOBST

SCIENTISTS are going to poke some very deep holes into the earth in an attempt to learn how this 4½-billion-year-old world was made and what makes it tick.

The audacious undertaking by the National Science Foundation, costing about $68 million, is called Project Mohole, so named for the mysterious Mohorovicic Discontinuity lying between the planet's thin outer skin and its fiery six-to-20-mile-deep mantle.

The plan is to sink six strategically situated shafts into the ocean floor under the Pacific, including the deepest hole ever dug by man, one 30,000 to 35,000 feet deep between California and Hawaii.

Another, but shorter penetration, will be made in the so-called San Diego Trough just off the Southern California coast between Long Beach and San Diego.

OTHERS ARE to be drilled off San Francisco, Seattle and Panama.

The Southland hole is meant to tap bottom sediment lying under 1,000 to 1,500 feet of water.

Groundwork for Mohole was laid four years ago off Guadalupe Island in Mexican waters.

Drilling through 12,000 feet of water, scientists, for the first time in history, successfully penetrated the "second layer" of the earth's crust.

They found, among other things, that this section of the planet skin was volcanic in origin, and, in drilling through 500 feet of bottom ooze, that life existed on this ocean floor about 20 million years ago.

THE SUCCESSFUL Guadalupe preparatory work was done from the Long Beach-based drill ship, CUSS I.

Total depth of the Mexican Mohole was 12,300 feet.

The deepest land hole ever drilled was a dry well down to 25,340 feet in Texas in 1958.

The "big hole" site 170 miles northeast from Oahu and 2,556 miles west of Long Beach was chosen because the earth's crust is believed the thinnest in this location.

The ocean floor lies at a depth of 14,000 feet with the distance from the floor to the mantle somewhere between 14,000 and 17,000 feet.

Mother Morticia Teaches 'Respect and Love'

By BERT RESNIK
TV and Radio Editor

THE INSCRIPTION on the welcome mat said "Go Away" but Carolyn Jones said to "Come on in anyway."

Her year-old French poodle, Beauty, disagreed with the invitation and barked that disapproval while 13-year-old Victoria, a dachshund, looked embarrassed over her younger colleague's obvious lack of restraint.

"The mat appeals to my sense of humor," said Carolyn. "I stole the idea from a girlfriend who lives near the beach in Miami. Her friends know if the mat's out, they can't come in."

Carolyn put the dogs out, seated herself in a chair in the library and talked about Morticia.

Morticia is the curvy, black-gowned, off-beat housewife-mother of ABC-TV's Friday night "The Addams Family." Morticia is Carolyn, or vice versa.

"The housewives," said Carolyn, "are very pleased with Morticia. They're terribly impressed by the fact that my husband still passionately loves me."

THERE ARE MEN, too, who are pleased with Morticia.

"Sure, I get lots of romantic letters from them," said Carolyn. "But anytime that any person will write something personal to someone they don't know, they're simply trying to get rid of their inhibitions."

Inhibitions?

Carolyn explained further: "These men really don't want to meet me," she said. "They simply want to retain the type of mental picture they have of me."

"The type of men who write these letters have some kind of mentality that can't function normally with other women."

"It's a man that's just extremely lonely."

"He would be destroyed if he ever personally met me. Because nobody can be as perfect as they appear on that screen."

"They don't really want me to be a human being. They want something else."

AS A HUMAN BEING, Carolyn would like to be seen with "The Addams Family" for three years.

She is pleased with the type of mother she portrays. "In our show, we teach only love and respect between the children and the parents. There is no thought of disobedience. Never do we take anything away."

"And we have respect for the children as well as they do for us."

Also, despite the sounding-off of other television actors, Carolyn doesn't believe making a half-hour series is "really that difficult."

"Ok," she said, "so you work from 4:45 a.m. to 7 p.m. three days a week—that's not going to ruin you."

"And besides having four days off a week, you get a vacation from the 15th of May to the 15th of July."

"It is, believe me, a great way to make a fortune."

Such a great way, in fact, that she hopes she moves into another series when "The Addams Family" moves away from television.

★ ★ ★

TRUE, SHE REALIZES she'll never become a "superstar" by merely appearing in television series.

In her book that's a gain, not a loss.

"I'm perfectly content with my particular status," she said. "I don't want to go up. It's too much of a strain."

By strain, she meant the sort of fame that accompanies someone like Elizabeth Taylor.

She referred to the fact that Miss Taylor's father recently had a stroke and the actress returned from London to see him.

"There were people yelling at her and pushing her all over the place," said Carolyn. "She was even pestered in the hospital elevator."

"If it happened to me, I think I'd kill six people."

"I couldn't live Liz Taylor's life of having people all over me like measles."

There's another reason why Carolyn doesn't want to be a super-star.

"When the chins start getting double," she said, "I don't want to have to go see any fancy doctors in Europe."

"I want to start playing roles that go along with double chins."

Who are the shoplifters,
and why do they do it?

The Booster and The Snitch

Hoping to make off with the item, undetected, a teen-ager palms a lip-stick in a variety store. She's one of a growing number of shoplifters.

By KAY DUNN

SHOPLIFTING activities across the country leave a trail of "deficits" and "shrinkage" in its wake. Yearly losses run into the billions. Prices rise and the buyer picks up the tab. It is estimated that every consumer in the United States pays up to 1% more for his food and many other commodities because of "five-fingered" bandits.

Authorities claim that one shopper out of every 10 is a potential shoplifter. And the percentage is growing despite the efforts of security officers, floor walkers, store detectives and modern inventions such as walkie-talkies, two-way mirrors and TV scanning.

Who are these people whose activities are creating the need for such costly security measures? Are they kleptomaniacs, driven by an uncontrollable impulse to steal, or are they hardship cases, forced to steal to survive? They are neither. Modern shoplifters are usually the next-door-neighbor type, nicely dressed, respected locally and seemingly well adjusted.

TAKE, FOR INSTANCE, the housewife who goes to her community shopping center and enters the grocery market. She puts her large-sized purse in the kiddie seat of her shopping cart and begins selecting items from the shelves. After several packages have been stacked in the bottom of her cart, she takes two cans of boned chicken, a can of shrimp and some crabmeat and places them beside her purse.

Continuing on through the store she reaches a secluded corner and quickly slips the luxury items into her purse and at the same time slips her billfold into her pocket. Closing her purse securely she proceeds to the check-out counter. There she pays for the stable groceries from her billfold and walks out with $3.23 worth of "extras." The tid-bits will enhance her menu and give it that special flare that her limited budget would not allow.

In general, this description applies to the amateur, the "snitch," who steals for his own use. On the other hand, the professional, known as the "booster," operates differently. He's engaged in the serious business of making a living, or, possibly, supporting the narcotics habit, and the stakes are higher.

LIKE THE SNITCH, he takes a shopping cart when he enters a supermarket but his modus operandi differs. He selects tall thin packages such as detergent and lines them around the outer edge of the cart. In the center he places a box or large paper bag and when he reaches the cigarettes or liquor he packs the box full and heads for the point nearest an outside door. There he quickly passes the box to an accomplice who takes the shortest route to a waiting car. Instead of a mere $3.23 worth of merchandise, he has made off with closer to $30 or $40 worth!

A variety of techniques are used by lifters. The snitch usually relies on his regular pockets or purses but the booster is armed with devices that range from cleverly concealed pockets, loose-fitting coats, specially constructed boxes and bags to hooks of all sizes and shapes. And, of course, the "pregnant" woman is often found concealing a bouncing eight-pound ham!

Although boosters get away with more merchandise at any one time, snitchers give authorities more trouble because there are several times as many of them. Ages and types vary according to geographical locations. For instance, in downtown Long Beach where there is a concentration of senior citizens, oldsters comprise the majority of lifters. But in other areas, such as Lakewood, teen-agers are the principal offenders.

FROM VARIETY stores the oldsters take items such as greeting cards, thread, gadgets, accessories and hardware. From drug stores they take patented medicines, and from department stores cosmetics, billfolds, small articles of clothing and jewelry. The teen-ager prefers cosmetics, records, candy, school supplies, billfolds and clothing. The booster, however, takes more valuable merchandise like cameras, luggage, radios, coats, dresses and suits.

Where teen-agers are involved, surprises are often in order. Recently when a 16-year-old had lifted and cleverly concealed nine articles from a variety store, she was asked, "How did you learn to shoplift so efficiently?" Her answer was, "I went to shoplifting school." Her admission led to the arrest of a mother, father and three teen-age daughters who were actually conducting classes in shoplifting!

Another teen-ager admitted belonging to a club. To qualify for membership she had to steal $25 worth of merchandise. And to maintain her standing she was required to lift an additional $5 worth each week!

When asked, "Why do you steal?" teen-agers give a variety of answers. Some shrug and say, "Just for kicks." Others say, "Why pay for it when you can get it for nothing?" Another answer is, "So what! It's not really stealing. Everybody in my gang does it."

IT IS VERY seldom that either teen-ager or adult steals from necessity. Bill Gerber, director of security for a Long Beach market chain, says, "Out of 2,300 shoplifters who were apprehended in our 26 stores during 1964, only three were hardship cases." He said that it is not unusual to find that a person stealing a 25-cent article has anywhere up to $30 in his billfold. "Neither do they steal because they can't help it," he adds. "Research proves that only about one in 300 lifters are kleptomaniacs."

The reason most adults give for their petty pilfering is, "I have a tight budget. I just wanted to add a few extras to my regular purchases. When asked, "But don't you consider this dishonest?" the answer is usually, "Well, not really. The little I take isn't going to break anybody."

A recent study shows that most shoplifters do not think of themselves as dishonest. One explanation for this delusion is that many may have started when quite young and became used to excusing themselves as "naughty" children. Now that they are adults they still tend to see themselves as delinquent youngsters rather than as thieving adults. One woman, when apprehended, said, "Sure I stole the purse. But does that make me a thief?"

IT SEEMED that very few of those studied had a clear idea of what stealing really means. Most agreed that stealing is wrongfully taking something that belongs to another. However, further questioning revealed that they did not practice strict adherence to the definition. Most agreed that petty pilfering, under certain circumstances, is excusable.

While declining morality may be a contributing factor to the widespread scandal of shoplifting, it is also true that modern methods of merchandising invite thieving. Never in the history of the world has stealing been made so easy.

The prevalence of shoplifting has grown in step with new trends toward self-service stores. Open shelves, fewer barriers between the customer and the merchandise, goods attractively arrayed to entice impulsive buying, and displays that encourage the customer to handle the stock in trade are all factors that induce thieving. These conditions are calling for new programs to curb the outbreak.

James E. Hinton, chairman of the Long Beach Downtown Associates' shop thieving committee, working in close cooperation with the Long Beach Police Department, is conducting such a program. Although he admits that the present function of his committee is to control and prevent rather than to cure, he maintains that results are good. Several hundred lifters were apprehended during the past year.

A CENTRAL registry is one of their most helpful facilities. This enables merchants to check out suspects who claim that this is their "first time." If it is found that they have been apprehended previously they are hurriedly put under arrest. But if it is ascertained that this is their first offense, they are occasionally released. In these cases intent and attitude play an important part.

While programs such as these are vital, most authorities agree that unless morals and merchandising methods both change, it will take an ever-growing army of detectives, special agents, security directors and law enforcement officers to cope with the mounting problems in years to come.

Paeans to Mothers

By Enola Chamberlin

"ALL THAT I am or ever hope to be," Abraham Lincoln once said. "I owe to my angel mother." And James McNeil Whistler painted a portrait of his mother which makes her seem not much less than an angel in the way she looked to him.

Benjamin West, who painted a portrayal of Ra-phael and Mrs. West, once said, "A kiss from my mother made me a painter." Thomas Carlyle gave his mother credit for what he became because of her trust in him. Ruskin, who so cruelly criticized Whistler's portrait of his mother, was full of thanks and appreciation for his own. Thomas Edison once declared he would have been nothing without his mother. She taught him, gave him hope, encouragement, love after a teacher had sent him home from school, calling him a dunce. Benjamin Franklin, Eugene Field, John Wesley all paid quiet but heartfelt tribute to their mothers.

Some way we do not ordinarily connect Edgar Allen Poe with his mother. We think of him and Lenore, whom he eulogized in the poem, "The Raven." But he was terribly intense with his declarations about his mother. But then he was Poe and the circumstances were a bit out of the usual.

MRS. POE, it is remembered, was an actress, and in her time people of the stage were not held in esteem by the world at large.
Yet Poe was defiantly proud of his mother. He was proud of her as a mother, proud of her as a woman, proud of her profession. At one time he wrote:

"The artist of talent is poor indeed, if he does not look with contempt on the mediocrity of a king. The writer of this article is himself the son of an actress—has invariably made it his boast—and no earl was ever prouder of his carload than he of his descent from a woman, who although well born, hesitated not to consecrate to the drama her brief career of genius and beauty."

Thomas Gray, famous for his "Elegy Written in a Country Churchyard," had this inscription put above his mother's grave: "The careful, tender mother of many children, one of whom alone had the misfortune to survive her."

BUT WE DO NOT have to go afield to discover the deep reverence in which people hold and have held their mothers. We know that Mother's Day itself came into being because Ann Jarvis so adored her mother, as did everyone else who knew her. Gen. Douglas MacArthur felt such a deep love for his mother, held for her such a debt of gratitude, he enclosed a small garden dedicated to the perpetual memory of "A Lovely Lady."

He once said of her:

"She taught me a devotion to God and such a love of country which have ever sustained me in many lonely and bitter moments of decision in distant and hostile lands."

"FINE ACTING by George C. Scott and Michael Parks," comments review of the pair in their "Bob Hope Theater" appearance about a submarine crew in World War II.

Excerpted Reviews on Recent TV Shows

Program: "Bob Hope Theater" presentation of "A Time for Killing," aired April 30 on channel 4.

Screenwriter Edward Anhalt's directorial debut was auspicious, but the vehicle was fragile. While interesting at times, it lacked over-all impact. Such a story of introspection, a man soul-searching, is a subject rarely suitable for a visual medium.

Anhalt scripted the drama, based on a William Hardy tome, dealing with a U.S. submarine patrolling the coast of Japan in the closing days of World War II. The skipper doesn't believe in what he regards as senseless killing. The bomb has devastated Hiroshima and obviously the war is near its end. So when he sees Japanese vessels, he doesn't try to sink them. His aide, however, doesn't see it that way, so there is a sharp conflict. The aide feels it's their job to kill, and the commander's reply is he lacks the quality of mercy. Eventually, however, the skipper sinks a ship. Ironic ending sees the Japanese captain he rescues kill the compassionate commander. The Japanese has a gun in his possession — an obvious hole in Anhalt's script. Even a "merciful" officer would have had the POW searched.

The plot seems to take forever in the telling principally because there is relatively little action, with accent on the skipper's struggle with his conscience. There's some fine acting by George C. Scott as the troubled officer and Michael Parks is satisfactory as Scott's aide.

Program: "Lorne Greene's American West," aired last Monday on channel 4.

"Lorne Greene's American West," an NBC special, was an attempt to wrap up the color and scenery of "Bonanza" with the rhythm of a musical variety show. The result was moderately successful.

Greene's West was less real than the Ponderosa but it gave him a chance to sing some sad ballads in a handsome outdoor setting. It was an attempt at something off the well-beaten variety path and for this deserves a Silver Star.

Critic Cynthia Lowry of AP

The title probably caused many to murmur, "here we go with another travelogue." They couldn't have been wronger (a good early western word). It was closer to a diversion of "Oklahoma" than a guided tour of early American museum pieces and, to boot, one of the spiciest musicals of a season devoid of such inspired outings. The title may have cost the show points but the presence of tv's "father image" — Lorne Greene, should have balanced the books. Producer George Schlatter and his director, Alan Handley, both proficient in telemusicals, moved it along the hour with the speed and merriment of cowpokes living it up after a long cattle drive.

Critic Helm of "Variety."

Program: "Melina Mercouri's Greece," aired last Monday on channel 7.

The charm of Melina Mercouri is the charm of a mature woman in love with life — and Greece.

This you feel and share with her as she stands in front of the Acropolis and says:

"Hundreds of times I come up here and each time I get — how you say — emotional."

She smiles and adds:

"I am a very emotional Greek."

She tells a story of a battle between the Turks and the Greeks. The Turks had seized the Acropolis and, in the battle to defend their position, had run out of ammunition.

They planned to melt down the columns of the Acropolis because the supporting structures had been fortified with lead.

The Greeks sent them a message urging them not to destroy the Acropolis.

"We will send you bullets," actress Melina quoted the message.

"And they did," she added.

Critic Bert Resnik of "TeleVues"

Except for one absurdly staged early scene in which Mercouri's friends tell her what to show on her tour, the hour was a thorough charmer.

The color was breathtaking, the photography and script were mostly excellent — and the combination of Greece, Greek music and the irresistible naturalness and mature flirtatiousness of Mercouri made for a joyful end to a long and rare day.

Critic Rick Du Brow of UPI

Program: "Our Private World," premiered last Wednesday on channel 2.

"World" is a well-produced half hour. Based on the initialer, even though it was slow due to the customary intros of characters and problems, it looms as a strong commercial entry.

Elleen Fulton is seen as a divorcee trying to make a new life for herself in the Windy City, where she gets a job in a hospital — an ideal spot to find multiple problems.

Music Around the World

By Bob Loeffelbein

BOAST of a Southland University is a unique feature not found in any other school of its kind in the world—the Institute of Ethnomusicology at the University of California at Los Angeles.

In short, the name means that it is a research center for the study of music around the world, except for the Western "classical" tradition.

Classes and study groups in these various musical cultures are part of the regular curriculum of the Department of Music of UCLA and are designed to enable students to learn to communicate with these areas through the media of their music and dance.

As Dr. Mantle Hood, director of the institute, states: "In this latter half of the 20th century it may well be that the very existence of man depends on the accuracy of his communications. . . . Communication is accurate to the extent that it is founded on a sure knowledge of the man with whom we would hold intercourse."

"The significant trend in great universities of establishing integrated centers of study based on geographic areas and dedicated to the quest for comprehensive knowledge of societies offers the potential of accurate communications. Music and the related arts . . . are principal carriers of his tradition and vividly reflect his actual identity. The musical cultures of the world, a sine qua non of configuration studies, are very little known and even less understood.

"The Institute of Ethnomusicology—its staff, facilities and environment—offers an interdisciplinary atmosphere for training and research in this field of knowledge and welcomes cooperation and exchange with others having related interests."

CARRYING out his thesis, a unique aspect of the program is practical training in the performance of various types of non-western music, using the authentic instruments of the culture.

More than 1,000 instruments from more than a dozen non-western countries are included in laboratory studies by students using the facilities of the institute. Playing experience on these instruments insures an increased sensitivity of ears, hands, voice and breath control necessary to a comprehension of the refinements of melodic and rhythmic characteristics of non-western music. Such preparation, students and professors have found, also ultimately gives greater command over, and understanding of, Western-style instruments and music.

All classes start quite naturally with basic fundamentals, leading up to participation in more formal courses, seminars, concerts and festivals, and group recording for such companies

as Columbia Records, in its Columbia Masterworks Series.

Two types of personnel are in charge of these performance groups: (1) the American specialist who has had practical experience and training in the field, and (2) the non-western musician who is brought to UCLA both to assist in the program and to be trained in international musicology.

CURRENTLY on the staff of the Institute training study groups in the music of their countries are: Tjokorda Mas, Balinese gamelan; Tsun-Yuen Lui, Chinese music; Gayathri Rajapur, South India; and Hardja Susilo from Java. Suenobu Togi, court musician of the Imperial Household of Japan, has just returned to his country after two years with the institute, guiding the Gagaku study group. Two master drummers from Ghana also recently spent nearly two years with the institute.

Studying under native teachers leads naturally to the next step: depth study of the music "in the field"—that is, in the country whose music it is and within the context of the society that produces the music. Currently individuals or teams have projects active in the Far East, the Philippines, New Zealand, Indonesia, South and Southeast Asia, the Middle East, Africa, Western Europe, the Balkans, North America, South America and Alaska.

The institute and the music department also offer specialized training courses for foreign visiting musicians who do not wish to pursue a formal degree. These musicians, recognized professional artists in their own countries, may take a two-year course individually designed to fit their needs.

THE INSTITUTE also cooperates in arranging special orientation programs for the American who will be stationed abroad and who desires an empathetic understanding of the peoples among whom he intends to live and work. Members of the Institute have participated in the training of Peace Corps volunteers going to Nigeria, Ghana, Ethiopia, Togo, Sierra Leone and Indonesia.

The Institute's varied activities, guided by Dr. Hood and Dr. David Morton, his assistant, are carried out by a rather unusual staff. It includes two research musicologists, a teacher of the psychology of music, an editor, a librarian, a museum scientist, technical translators for books on music in Chinese, Japanese and Indonesian, a recording technician, an office staff of administrative assistant and two secretaries, and specialists in the music of Africa, the Balkans, Latin America, Thailand, Persia and Indonesia, as well as instructors in Indonesian and African dance.

A select advisory committee also cooperates with the institute. It includes members of the African Studies Center, the Center of Mythology and Folklore, and the Departments of Dance, Theater Arts, Music, Anthropology and Art.

Imagination Creates a Setting

By Stella George

DECIDEDLY different is the interior decorating theme of the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Carver, 3252 Rowena Ave., Los Alamitos, where imaginative use of materials and units establishes a Spanish decor.

The house has no entry as such but positioning of furniture has created the impression of such an area. The living room is sufficiently large to create an entrance hall but leaving the area open increased the idea of spaciousness.

Mrs. Carver combined efforts with interior designer Bryan Waller in carrying out the desired theme. Predominant colors are avocado, shocking pink, and shades of red. A long sofa upholstered in a rose and floral linen faces the windows of the living room in the front of the home. Across the room, backing the entry, are two occasional chairs done in shocking pink velvet and flanking an end table that matches another at the far end of the sofa. The tables are of wormy chestnut finished in a rich brown-black tone. A high-backed, Spanish-type occa-

Imagination is evident in the decoration and furnishing of the living room of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Carver.

NO 'SECRET AGENT' KILLINGS

Patrick McGoohan, Series Lead, Prefers 'Character Nobility'

By JOAN CROSBY

NEW YORK (NEA)—Meet Patrick McGoohan, the man who had a chance to play James Bond and turned it down.

"Take the promiscuous sex and violence out of James Bond and what have you got? A man who knows how to order the proper wines for dinner."

If Bond, as 007, has a license to kill, McGoohan, as CBS-TV's Secret Agent John Drake, has to be called Just Plain 7. "I have never killed anyone on one of our shows," the tall, handsome New York City-born Irishman said. "I don't even carry a gun."

Secret Agent is a slick, suspenseful, British production which has been on English television for six months (as Danger Man). Five years ago, the series also ran on British television (it was a half-hour long then; it's 60 minutes now), and was imported into the U.S. as a summer replacement, airing Saturdays on CBS-TV.

"There was a gap of three-and-a-half years when the show was not on television," McGoohan said, during a trip to New York with his wife to meet his many relatives, and a trip to Arizona to see the sights "because my wife and I are Zane Grey fans." But McGoohan had a contract with ITC, the British commercial channel, and they had an option for his services for another show.

"I didn't like most of what they offered me, so I thought, 'Why not the same old one?'"

McGoohan is determined that his character have nobility, and that the show not be offensive "to any kids or grannies watching. I get letters from grateful parents because their children can see the show. I don't know if this is really good for business. But I do know you can't have a hero promiscuous in 39 episodes and still have him a hero. James Bond is an anti-hero. I don't want my kids (he has three daughters) to see the Bond movies. You can't teach goodness and nobility through violence and a hero who goes to bed with every woman he meets.

"Generally we have a fight in each of our shows, but that's as far as our violence goes. I'm a fan of Westerns, and the essence of Westerns is violence. But it's a sort of mythological violence. It's games. A barroom brawl or a shoot-out are very different from showing someone breaking a bottle, and then pushing the broken edge in someone's face. That kind of violence is dangerous."

Million Dollars Worth of Luck

Marvin Miller, who dispensed 250 checks for a million dollars as Michael Anthony during the six-year run of TV's "Millionaire" series, gives fans his autograph on checks made out to the International Bank of Goodwill for One Million Dollars Worth of Good Luck.

He has handed out 145,000 checks as his contribution to defraying the national debt.

LONG BEACH BLVD.

sional chair is finished in avocado with an avocado velvet seat cushion. On the opposite side of the room is another occasional chair upholstered in a tweed-like avocado material.

ACCESSORIES in the room are interesting. To break the wood effect in the room, two small cocktail tables in front of the sofa are finished in gold leaf. Lamps have carved cathedral candlestick bases. The gallery wall over the sofa is a combination of former personal treasures of Mrs. Carver with the additional use of carvings — black wall sconces, St. James, a door knob, a gold key, a smaller black key, and framed pastels.

The dining room group is antique olive green with chair seats covered in the same material as the sofa. The table is an old refectory table which, when extended, can seat 12 persons. The kitchen area has been masked off by the use of shutters which match those on the lower part of the windows in the front of the living room.

The candelabra over the fireplace is distressed gilt from the metal workers of Madrid. The chandelier over the dining room table is black wrought iron with dimming candles. A matching fruit bowl rests in the center of the table.

A FAMILY room is a part of the dining room itself. A red leather sofa faces the TV across the room. Bookshelves are at the far end of the room. Carpeting in the entire area is multicolored chenille, primarily red tones with beige.

Daughter Cindy's room is done in Carver blue (similar to Wedgewood). She has a dressing table, chest of drawers, desk (one which her father had many years ago but which is now done in Carver blue), and bookshelves.

The master bedroom is unusual. A four poster bed and matching pieces are pine.

THERE ARE many details characteristic of this home. For example, firewood is kept in an antique round-top trunk place near the fireplace. Small accessories in the kitchen have been sprayed or painted black (by Mrs. Carver) to carry out the Spanish theme. Obviously functional ash trays were chosen for their beauty as well as utility. The wall to the right of the entry is papered in avocado and gold, thus bringing this area into the living room and trying in the color scheme. The low chest which runs along the wall was once the top part of an old buffet. Now, painted avocado and washed with umber, with a gold leaf top, it is unique. The base of the buffet was transformed into a very low table, finished in avocado, placed beside the green occasional chair in the living room.

courage to the party. They, too, would carry on! The next day they found a pass through the mountains and discovered a wonderful valley. The pass is now called Sepulveda Canyon; the valley, San Fernando!

THE NAME Santa Monica, given by the Spaniards to the pools that resembled eyes, was later given to the mountains and a canyon. In 1875, the townsite of Santa Monica was recorded. The large Rancho San Vincente of the Spanish era was divided into lots and today's city was born.

The story of the pools and of Saint Monica's influence upon the explorers cannot be proved for it does not appear in any of the diaries. The legend is widespread, and old timers who remember the early days of the town's growth say the pools were near Sawtelle. One is said to have disappeared as so many springs in this area have done. The other, many believe, is in the grounds of West Los Angeles' University High School. Whether or not this is the spring that refreshed the men of Portola's expedition, it bears a plaque put there by the San Vincente Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution, which reads Father Junipero Serra Spring.

The city that lies at the edge of the mountains has not forgotten its saint. A huge statue of Saint Monica stands guard in Palisades Park at the corner of Wilshire Boulevard and Ocean, a reminder of California's Spanish heritage of fact, legend and soft flowing Spanish names.

Laundry Aid

The basement laundry in apartment houses, in theory a fine way to eliminate the need for individual laundering facilities, may not be quite so successful in practice, especially for the busy housewife and mother who must leave her home for an hour or more or else dash up and down.

Recognizing the inconvenience of commuting from apartment to basement laundry with the family wash, Tandy & Allen Construction Co. has decided to bring the laundry room to the wash in its new Crescent Park luxury apartment in East Orange, N.J. There will be a laundry room on each floor of the 19-story building, with a conventional basement laundry to handle any overflow of traffic.

With the laundry room only a few steps down the hall, household duties need not be interrupted, and mothers don't have to be out of the house for long periods.

Delicate Orange Chiffon Mold is a true harbinger of springtime. (See article below for recipe.)

Orange Chiffon

By Mildred K. Flanary

WHAT could be a truer harbinger of spring, than a delicate Orange Chiffon mold?

It has wonderful sweet-tart flavor and handsome appearance, and also may be molded, made into a souffle, filling for a ladyfinger pie shell, or served in individual dessert dishes. The recipe:

Orange Chiffon Mold

1 envelope unflavored gelatine
 $\frac{3}{4}$  cup sugar, divided
 $\frac{1}{8}$  teaspoon salt      2 eggs, separated

$\frac{1}{2}$  cup cold water
 1 can (6 ounces) frozen orange juice concentrate, kept frozen
 1 cup heavy cream, whipped
 Whipped cream
 Orange sections*
 Strawberries

Mix gelatine,  $\frac{1}{2}$  cup sugar, and salt in medium saucepan. Beat together egg yolks and water; stir into gelatine mixture. Place over low heat; stir constantly until gelatine dissolves and mixture thickens slightly, about 5 minutes. Remove from heat; add frozen

Rose Fete Pre-Dated

Booth with tower (right foreground) was the Long Beach entry in a floral display in Los Angeles that pre-dated Tournament of Roses by 20 months.

By Charlie Jackson

LONG BEACH had a colorful entry in a Los Angeles floral pageant that pre-dated the first one in Pasadena by some 20 months.

A flower encrusted revolving model of a light-house, complete with blinking light, was constructed by Mrs. C. T. Healey, a Mrs. Peebles and others for the flower festival held April 21, 1888. The wife of Capt.

Healey, the surveyor who laid out the townsite of Long Beach, donated the above photograph to Long Beach Public Library.

The Long Beach Journal, the city's first newspaper, had two brief items about the festival in its April 27, 1888, issue.

One read: "Mrs. Belle Lowe has contributed 1,000 callas, 400 roses and 400 carnations to the Festival, all raised within a few hundred feet of the breakers." The date and wording of this item indicate that the festival lasted for several days.

The other Journal piece expresses thanks to all concerned from "the management of the Long Beach booth." Besides the Mmes. Healey and Peebles, Mrs. Fillmore and Mrs. Goucher are mentioned for "procuring from Mr. Goodman the extra train for Saturday night." Mrs. Dodsworth is thanked "for the use of her ladder in constructing the tower."

Jenny to Jet

From his March Air Force Base complex, Gen. Old directs major air bases and missile installations at 20 or more locations in the United States and Alaska.

Operating from these installations are several hundred B47 and B52 bombers and approximately 450 ICBM's poised and ready to fire should the need arise.

CONTROL of this vast Air Force is maintained from the combat operations center, an on-the-top, under-the-ground structure that houses some of the world's most complex electronic equipment. It is the nerve center of a twin-pronged strike force—bombers and missiles always on the alert.

So, while the nation thinks of the past and present, this Armed Forces Week, Fifteenth Air Force and all of the Strategic Air Command will maintain their 74-hour work week to assure the nation's future.

It's a never-ending alert for Gen. Old and his fabulous Fifteenth Air Force.

Recipe of the Week

POT BOI might sound exotic but it's really the name of a good sturdy dish of Pennsylvania Dutch origin, submitted as this week's $5 prize-winner by Mrs. Jack Ruffer, 1280 Oakmont Rd., Apartment 54-G, Leisure World, Seal Beach, Calif. 90840. The recipe:

Pennsylvania Dutch Pot Pie (BOT BOI)

2 lbs. stewing beef, pork or veal 1 onion
Salt and pepper

6 potatoes

Dough:

1½ cups flour

3 tblsp. shortening

1 egg

Little milk or water

1 tsp. salt

Cut the meat into 1 inch pieces and cook in boiling water for 1½ hours. For the dough: cut shortening into flour and salt then add beaten egg and enough water to make dough. Roll out thin and cut into squares. Then into the boiling meat and liquid, slowly drop layers of sliced potatoes and sliced onions and dough squares. There should be enough liquid to boil up over top of potpie. Cover tightly and cook 20 minutes. A pinch of saffron may be added.

What's your favorite recipe? For each recipe published in this space, Southland will pay $5. Men are urged to submit their recipes along with the ladies. Send yours, with name and address to Recipe Contest Editor, Southland Magazine, 604 Pine Ave., Long Beach, Calif. 90812.

Hotel Comforts Orange Chiffon

The modern bedroom is taking its cue from the up-to-date hotel, providing its occupants not only with a place to sleep and dress, but with sitting room facilities as well.

Mary Morrison Kennedy, vice president of Decorating, Design and Architecture for the Sheraton Corp., a leading hotel chain, says the guest who does not rent a suite now is provided with a "daytime" area in the bedroom featuring occasional chairs, a sofa in some cases, a small desk and, of course, a television set.

Following this fashion, really a return to the tradition of an earlier era when the master bedroom always had a parlor area, home builders have been lavishing more space and planning care on the master bedroom. Often alcoves or bay window areas are included that can be used for dressing, watching television or answering mail. In some homes, even the luxury of a bedroom fireplace is included.

(Continued from Page 15) orange juice concentrate and stir until melted. Mixture should mound slightly when dropped from spoon (if not, chill a few minutes). Beat egg whites until stiff but not dry. Gradually add remaining ¼ cup sugar and beat until very stiff. Fold into gelatine mixture. Fold in whipped cream. Turn into 5-cup mold. Chill until firm. Unmold. Garnish with whipped cream, orange sections, and strawberries. Yield: 6 servings.

To section oranges, cut slice from top, then cut off peel in strips from top to bottom, cutting deep enough to remove white membrane. Then cut slice from bottom. Or, cut off peel, round and round, spiral fashion. Go over fruit again, removing any remaining white membrane. Cut along side of each dividing membrane, from outside to middle of core. Remove section by section, over bowl, to retain juice from fruit.

Chiffon Desserts

Turn orange chiffon mixture into individual dessert dishes. Serve immediately or chill until firm. Garnish with whipped cream and orange sections. Yield: 6 servings.

Chiffon Pie

Split 8 ladyfingers. Cut ends off enough ladyfingers to line sides of 9-inch pie plate (they should extend above rim of pie plate to hold generous filling). Line bottom of pie plate with remaining split ladyfingers and ends. Pile orange chiffon mixture into pie shell. Chill until firm. Garnish with whipped cream and orange sections. Yield: 6 servings.

'Inside Job'

Extra living space can be yours right now if your home has an attic that can be finished. This can be an economical way to expand living space, because no new basic construction is required.

Unless the attic is immense, however, make one large room and a bath instead of several smaller ones. Surface the bathroom floor and walls with waterproof ceramic tile to prevent moisture damage to ceilings underneath. You can use low spaces in the attic for cabinets, shelves.

- SPECIAL
- THE PILGRIMS—The dramatic flight to Holland, and the danger-packed journey to the New World in their search for religious freedom is re-created in this season's final program for "Saga of Western Man," at 7:30 p.m., in color, ch. 7. The story is told primarily through the experiences recorded in the journal of William Bradford, with the Mayflower II, a replica of the original ship, used for filming at sea, with other scenes filmed at Scrooby, Babworth, Boston and Hampton Court Palace, all in England; Leiden in Holland; and Provincetown, Plymouth and Cape Cod Bay in the U.S.
- JONATHAN WINTERS—Steve Allen, Leo Durocher and the comedy team of Stiller and Meara are Winters' guests in a full hour of ad lib comedy at 9 p.m., in color, ch. 4. For his sixth and last special of the season, Winters gives an audience "warm-up," performs a zany baseball pantomime, portrays a childless nature show host (afraid of the studio lion), joins Allen for ad lib phone calls and has a family picnic in which he plays all the characters. Alexander Scourby provides off-screen narration.
- FINLANDIA—The Early Bird satellite is used for its first cultural broadcast as CBS observes the 100th anniversary of the birth of composer Jean Sibelius at 10 p.m., ch. 2. Charles Kurali is reporter at Ainola, the rural home where Sibelius lived and worked from 1904 until his death in 1957 and which is now a national shrine, where one of the composer's 5 daughters is interviewed and the University of Helsinki choir performs. Then, from Helsinki, an all-Sibelius concert by the Finnish Radio Symphony Orchestra is seen in progress. (Other Early Bird segments are seen on network news shows today, with the first transatlantic colorcast set for NBC next Monday from London.)
- LETTER From an Only Child—Dan Balluck's symbolic play about a young woman on the verge of either understanding herself of having a nervous breakdown is repeated at 10:30 p.m., ch. 2, starring Amy Fields, William Tomlinson.
- MERV GRIFFIN—Premiere—Formerly the toast of the daytime airwaves, Griffin now returns in a syndicated 90-min. nightly series (successor to the earlier Allen and Philbin series) to be seen at 11 p.m., ch. 11. Arthur Treacher and Colin Romoff's orchestra will be regulars, joined on the opener by Carol Channing, Danny Meehan, puppeteer Larry Reeling and UPI's Merriman Smith.

The Lives of Oscar Wilde

By Vera Williams
Southland Magazine Book Editor

DESMOND Hall's "I GIVE YOU OSCAR WILDE: A Biographical Novel" (New American, $5.95) strips away the glittering facade of the man of letters and reveals the sympathetic and sometimes pathetic figure underneath. It recreates the glamour, excitement and debauchery which typified the literary and artistic circles that made up London's intelligentsia in the fading days of Victoria's reign.

A seldom-mentioned and not widely known facet of Wilde's life, his role as an ardent swain during his courtship of Constance Lloyd, and his role as affectionate husband and father are recounted. The tragedy of Oscar Wilde's conviction and jailing also is recounted by Hall, who wrote that portion of his book in the rooms in London's Canogan Hotel occupied by Lord Alfred (Bosie) Douglas during Wilde's first trial. In that trial, Wilde brought a libel suit against Lord Alfred's father, the Marquess of Queensberry, who had inferred Wilde was a sodomite. Wilde lost his suit, and as a result of testimony brought out during the trial, was arrested and convicted.

Hall has taken great pains to infuse into "I Give You Oscar Wilde" the man's penchant for witty bon mots, puns, jokes, wry comments and brilliant jests.

NANCY HALLINAN interprets a young actress in an extraordinary novel "A VOICE FROM THE WINGS" (Knopf, $5.95) telling the story of an individual's quest for herself through various roles: daughter, child prodigy, rebel, wife, mistress, actress.

WHY HAS Finland, almost alone among the small nations formed after World War I, remained vigorous, productive and creative? David Bradley asks and answers that question in "LION AMONG ROSES" (Holt, Rinehart and Winston, $5.95). The title describes the heraldic emblem of Finland.

Bradley shows the Finns through the eyes of an American family. The family, first engulfed in domestic vicissitudes and confusions of living with a seemingly impossible language and culture, gradually adjust through ski trips to Lapland, summer schools and a long camping trip in war-torn areas of eastern Finland. They come to feel the history of the land of lakes and forests, they grow to understand the people who have shaped the history and been shaped by it. And they get as explosively aroused as the Finns at interference with the election of a Finnish president.

GREGOR Piatigorsky likes a joke — particularly when he is the joker. His autobiography, "CELLIST" (Doubleday, $4.95) is replete with anecdotes—jokes he played, jokes played on him, good musical performances, musical disasters, and times when his temper exploded.

From childhood in Russia, Piatigorsky took a long road to international fame as a virtuoso cellist. He describes inexpensive rooming houses, temporary jobs, membership in trios and quartets. He tells about the four years when the Berlin Philharmonic could be hired by anybody—and was hired by conductors, soloists and composers who wanted to show themselves off.

He recalls the touching moment when Richard Strauss conducted one of his own works and then said "I have heard my Don Quixote as I thought him to be."

Joseph falls in love with a Russian girl; she is banished to the Virgin Territories of Soviet Asia. He and his fellow Negro students hear themselves mocked, they find that terror did not disappear with the ashes of Stalin, but indeed is still very real. The adventures of the Negro students in search of socialism are picaresque, but they are frightening too.

V. S. NAIPUL, native of the Caribbean island of Trinidad and descendant of immigrants from India, has delighted those who have been fortunate enough to read the picaresque doings of the Trinidadian Hindus who people his novels and short stories. In "AN AREA OF DARKNESS" (Macmillan $5.95) he reverses the odyssey of his ancestors and visits the land of his forefathers, India. He arrives there as much a stranger as an American of Mayflower descent is to England.

He finds India fabulously and endlessly fascinating, but he also finds it heart-rendingly sad. He uses, in one hand the scalpel and in the other the paint brush of a brilliant artist. From Madras to Calcutta, from Bombay to breathtakingly gorgeous Kashmir, in New Delhi, wherever he goes, he does not blink at the abject poverty, the grinding degradation, the filth; but he paints the humility and the sweetness of Indians as few have done it.

"The Taj Mahal," he finds, "is exquisite. Transported slab by slab to the United States and re-erected, it might be wholly admirable. But in India it is a building wastefully without a function; it is only a despot's monument to a woman, not of India, who bore a child

Naipul's is one of the finest books about an India where "caste imprisons a man in his function . . . the poor are thin; the rich are fat . . . beggars whine" and "holy men give up all."

"THE BOOK OF PARADISE" by Itzik Manger (Hill and Wang, $5) is a quaint, slit-eyed fable, buoyantly translated from the Yiddish, recounting the adventures of a baby angel (a temporary one) born to an unimaginative couple. The story is based on an old folk tale that children before birth live in Paradise, and just before they are born, an angel taps them on the nose and they forget their stay in

By Maurice M. Gould

A NEW VARIETY of the 1955 Canadian cent has recently been discovered. This item will undoubtedly find its way into all of the catalogs and coin books of the future.

This date comes with and without shoulder straps and the scarce variety is the piece without shoulder straps. As the coin is of recent date, there is always an opportunity to find one of these in your collection or in Canadian change, as a tremendous amount of these go back and forth across the border.

Figures to date show that the no-strap variety is 200 times as scarce as the strap cent. If coins are well worn, it would be difficult to tell whether or not it is of the scarce variety.

A collector in Ontario searched through 75,000 cents before finding one, but these items have been found in every one of the Provinces of Canada and in the United States.

It is difficult to set a price on this item as yet until reliable figures are available and the supply and demand price the coin at the proper level.

WITH THE PASSING of the immortal Sir Winston Churchill, a great many medals and tokens will be struck in his memory.

One medal, which was started in November 1963 and was planned to honor the great statesman at the time of his 90th birthday, had to have an entire new reverse made because of the recent tragic event.

Medals are being struck in England and Canada and will shortly be struck in other countries. The British will strike a 5-shilling piece, which is equivalent in size to our silver dollar, in his memory, and the coin will be eagerly sought after by collectors throughout the world.

THE MOST FAMOUS issue of Hawaiian coins is the series of 1883.

Since Hawaii became the 50th state, the interest in all numismatic material of the islands has greatly increased and a book on Hawaiian coins published.

The 1883 issue was struck in four denominations: 10 cents or one dime, quarter, half dollar and dollar, all minted at the San Francisco mint.

Hawaiian Dollar of 1883

One-half-million pieces of the quarter and dollar were struck; several hundred thousand of the half dollar and 250,000 of the dimes.

The great majority of the dollars were withdrawn from circulation and melted, leaving approximately 10% of the issue outstanding. A great many of these beautiful pieces found their way into various forms of jewelry and many were holed for this particular purpose. It is very difficult to obtain any of these pieces in uncirculated or brand new condition.

FOR ANYONE who wants a Hawaiian coin in the least expensive category, I suggest the 25-cent piece, which retails at from $7.50 to $15, depending on the condition.

The 10-cent piece runs $10 to $25, the 50-cent piece sells at from $35 to $75, and the dollar sells at $75 to $200, with the price range depending on whether they are in fine or uncirculated condition.

Proofs or specially struck coins for collectors are known and all of these are very rare.

'Slattery' Star Takes High-Finance Road

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI)—Richard Crenna, star of the "Slattery's People" series, has parlayed his television earnings into a booming personal fortune.

In video's swaddling days Crenna played the dimwitted high school kid Walter Denton in "Our Miss Brooks." He was only slightly more bright as Luke McCoy in "The Real McCoys." But his image as a sophisticated, polished politician in the new show is very much like the real Crenna.

The actor has invested his television gains in real estate, a dry cleaning establishment, a laundry, a television production company and various prosperous corporations.

An unactorish fellow with a serious outlook, Crenna and his wife Penny are the sort of people you'd like to have for neighbors.

They've been married seven years and have two youngsters, a daughter, Seana (pronounced Shawna) and a son, Richard.

THEIR HOME is situated on an acre and a quarter in the plush Royal Oaks section of Encino in the San Fernando Valley. Their neighbors are Shirley MacLaine, Dennis Weaver, Gale Storm, Roger Williams and Julie London.

The house is a low, rambling ranch style modern which Penny has converted into a French farm house. She is responsible for the decor which is principally French antique and Italian provincial.

Her kitchen is done over in farm kitchen style with plenty of room for family gatherings around the table. There's an indoor barbecue pit where Penny does much of the cooking, and the kitchen table is where the Crennas thrash out the problems of the day when he returns from the studio.

The family moved into the house five months ago. They had lived only three doors away, but felt the need for more space. And space is what they have.

THERE ARE five bedrooms, a maid's room and seven baths. There is also a spacious patio, a swimming pool, an office-den, a workshop and a three-car garage. Dick's particular hangout, however, is a huge play room with soda fountain for the youngsters.

"When they grow up and leave the nest I'm going to convert it into a tavern room," Crenna says.

To complete the picture of gracious living there is a badminton court and a driving range (with net) on the grounds. Crew members of Crenna's new CBS-TV show provided the golf paraphernalia.

Majestic Park of the Pinnacles

By Earline M. Gladstone

FANTASTIC and picturesque, the peaks of Pinnacles National Monument rise eminently from the surrounding terrain. The Monument, with the exception of a very small corner which spills over the line into Monterey County, is located in San Benito County. Not too often publicized, it is interesting, restful and majestic.

Thirty million years ago the area was not peaceful. Violent volcanic eruptions tore the earth's surface, and poured tons of boiling lava over the land. These flows built a mountain which geologists estimate must have been 8,000 feet high, about three times as tall as the present day pinnacles. The spasmodic convulsions of the earth subsided in time, but the faulting of the land continued, and Nature's sculptors, the wind, water, frost and heat have relentlessly chiseled away at the original volcano until only a small portion remains. They have formed the tapers and spires as seen today, and their work continues.

In 1794 George Vancouver, accompanied by a small group of equestrians, looked upon this southern extremity of the Gabilan Range, and "was gratified with the sight of the most extraordinary mountain" that he had ever seen. In describing the view he said that one side "presented the appearance of a sumptuous edifice fallen into decay." After his visit these unusual rock formations were sometimes called "Vancouver's Pinnacles."

THE GREAT American educator and naturalist, David Starr Jordan, was instrumental in the selection of the Pinnacles as a national monument and President Theodore Roosevelt proclaimed it as such in 1908.

The Monument contains 23 square miles. There are 15 miles of hiking trails, and visitors are urged to use them for many of the scenic wonders can be viewed in no other way.

One popular trek is the one-hour, one-mile "Caves and Moses Spring Trail." There is no human guide, but the visitor is handed a leaflet with explanatory descriptions, and number corresponding to those on markers along the loop trail.

Along this route one passes through caves which were formed by parts of the cliff walls falling like bridges over the canyon floor. There are more than 150 steps to ascend on this trail.

"THE BIG ROOM" is about 100 feet long. It was created when a 64,000-ton rock arched the canyon. It is said that this room was once the hideout of bandits. Tiburcio Vasquez, a bad man of early California, is supposed to have hidden in the Pinnacles on several occasions.

Moses Spring, along the way, has a unique story. In the early 1920s, two home-steaders along Chalona Creek—Z. N. Marcott and Herman Hermanson—were working on this trail when they noticed a damp spot. Marcott said, "Moses smote the rock and water came forth. I'll smite this one." He struck a few times with his pick and the water flowed.

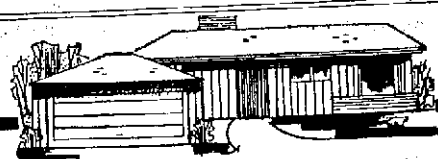

Chaparral is the predominating plant life, furnishing food and protecting wildlife, but there are groves of live oak and digger pine. Deer, raccoons, foxes, rabbits and wood rats are permanent residents. The Monument is well known for the many species of birds.

CAMPING and picnicking are allowed in designated areas. Park rangers are on hand to assist visitors and to enforce regulations, and a park naturalist will explain geological and other natural features of the Monument. The park is open all year, but is especially beautiful in the spring and early summer when myriad wild flowers weave Persian carpets on the green hillslopes.

Pinnacles National Monument is located just off State Rt. 25, 35 miles south of Hollister and about the same distance north of King City. The preferable ingress to the monument is a paved five-mile road that leads west from Hwy. 25 to the east gate of the Monument. It is a pleasant tree-shaded road and the motorist is likely to pass deer feeding close by.

KKK: "Society of Bigots"?
—For the third time in 100 years, Ku Klux Klan crosses burn with fury throughout the south, and Imperial Wizard Robert Shelton squares off against President Johnson's warning to get out of the Klan. From bits and pieces the mosaic is assembled for a chilling, factual presentation of "ABC Scope" told by Howard K. Smith at 10:30 p.m., ch. 7. In a small South Carolina town feelings ran so high over the Klan, pro and con, that an ABC camera crew was run out of town at knife point.

Antidepressant Drugs Queried

By Ben Zinser

Southland Magazine Medical Science Writer

A LARGE-SCALE study of anti-depressant drugs has prompted VA hospital researchers to question their efficacy in the treatment of depression.

Following four studies involving 443 patients, VA researchers say findings indicate these drugs "do not offer any conspicuous advantage over other possible treatments."

Among the drugs evaluated were imipramine, isocarboxazid, desipramine, amitriptyline and thioridazine.

Among the study group were some schizophrenics. The drug thioridazine did help these patients. But researchers were mainly interested in anti-depressant properties of the drugs.

The research projects were reported to the American College of Clinical Pharmacology and Chemotherapy.

A NEW DEVICE—the endoscope—has been developed to permit visual examination of the middle ear with a minimum of discomfort to the patient.

Under local anesthesia, a small incision is made on the ear drum to permit insertion of the small round probe into the middle ear.

Through an attached surgical microscope, the surgeon may observe the functioning of the middle ear. The tip of the probe is electronically illuminated, with light conveyed by optical fibers.

The scope was devised by Dr. S. Bruce Mer of the National Institutes of Health and built by the Illinois Institute of Technology Research.

DUTCH researchers have found a close relationship between chronic bronchitis and lung cancer.

A recent study of 150 lung cancer patients admitted to the University Hospital in Groningen, The Netherlands, over the past few years showed that 144 (96%) had had chronic bronchitis for many years.

Among a comparison group of 100 patients who had the same smoking habits but no lung cancer, only 28% had chronic bronchitis.

The researchers define chronic bronchitis as frequent coughing over a period of years, shortness of breath and the expectoration of mucus.

A NEW anti-anxiety drug, oxazepam, has proved "exceptionally effective and safe" in a study of 148 patients suffering a wide variety of behavioral disorders.

An excellent to good response was seen in 85% of those treated, Oak Forest, Ill., researchers report. Responses were obtained without the drowsiness and loss of balance that frequently stem from use of other drugs used to alleviate symptoms of acute and chronic anxiety.

Oxazepam is expected to be available for general use by June under the trade name Serax.

(This column frequently reports advances in medical research and opinions of medical authorities not yet accepted in general practice.)

Pan and Fan Mail

I saw that fabulous English group Freddie and the Dreamers on the Ed Sullivan Show and I just had to write to say I think Freddie is the most adorable little guy alive next to John Lennon of the Beatles, that is.

Man, he's so smashing! I love the way he runs around doing that tough new dance called The Freddie.

Kathy Noone, Long Beach
Thing are tough all over.

Charlie Weaver of the now defunct Dennis Day Show

and the incomparable Burl Ives, are they one person?

Also, I would like to know when Steve Lawrence starts his TV weekly show.

Dolores Narita, Long Beach
Weaver and Ives are incomparable individuals—separate.

Lawrence starts Sept. 13 on CBS-TV.

Recently I saw one of the "Man from UNCLE" series with David McCallum's wife, Jill Ireland.

Enjoying it very much, I wondered if, in the new fall series, Jill Ireland would get a permanent role in the show.

Pauline Daniels, Long Beach
She'll guest-star again.

All of the permanent roles have not yet been decided at this point.

What happened to the "Hullabaloo London" segment of "Hullabaloo"? That's my favorite part of the show.

Sherry Melton, Long Beach
The producers of the series couldn't agree less. In revising the format of the program, they eliminated London and intend to keep it that way. "Better-paced show without it," they claim.

Why are some of the "Branded" episodes in color and the others are not?

Gary Hacker, Long Beach
The three-part "Mission" sequence was made in color to be released overseas as a movie. All the rest of the "Branded" segments will be in black-and-white.

TODAY is a busy one for dogs and their owners. At Pan American Park in Long Beach, the San Gabriel Valley Cocker Spaniel Fanclubers have a puppy match, with entries closing at 9:45 a.m. Obedience trained dogs are striving for "legs" at North Hollywood Park in the Hollywood Dog Obedience Club trial. Members of the Basset Hound Club of Southern California and spectators will laugh all afternoon as hounds enter contests such as longest ears, loudest howl, saddest face, and a costume parade. San Fernando Valley Kennel Club has its event at that city's Recreation Park, and the Boxer Club of Southern California has its sanctioned match at El Nido Park, 182nd and Kingsley Streets, Torrance.

owned by Ruth Anderson, Torrance. Don't let the formidable appearance of the boxer send you up a tree. Almost all are amiable, although they will protect their owners and property very capably. As puppies, boxers are seemingly tireless and romp with great enthusiasm. They need someone with whom to play, or another boxer.

WHEN GROWN, the boxer is still vigorous and gets bored if left alone long hours every day. If there are school children in his family, they can give him a romp in the morning and greet him gaily when they return. And there should be a good-sized yard and safe toys. Beef hide strips are fine. Get the large size for large dogs. They are available in quantity from California Animal Products Co. The smaller ones are often quickly eaten. They are not greasy, and they provide chewing exercise. The active boxer and other dogs usually benefit from obedience training. There has been some unrest recently among obedience people. They feel there should be another class beyond U. D. (Utility Dog) other than Tracking Dog. Some owners have actually turned to training their friendly dogs to be attack dogs. In case you have this in mind, you should know that an attack dog is considered a lethal weapon. It can be very difficult to turn an attack dog or war dog back into a dog suitable for community living, although in many cases it can be done. For dogs in the armed service there are classes at Fort MacArthur, San Pedro. Usually it takes six weeks to readjust the dog to civilian life.

Even Dust Can Be Colorful

By Ruth C. Ikerman

ONE OF MY first tasks as a child helping my mother keep house was to run the carpet sweeper over the floor. It was a real honor to be permitted to use this one piece of equipment which the average home had in those days. No doubt it was put into my hands to keep me from using the broom to sweep the dust under the carpet.

For the carpet sweeper had a marvelous pan which fastened onto the bottom so that you had to turn it upside down when you wanted to empty out the assortment of fuzzy dust, black and white thread, paper scraps, and hairpins which you had picked up running the sweeper over the floor.

CAME THE DAY when the vacuum cleaner burst into popularity, and it had been a long time since I had thought to use anything which didn't plug into a switch into the wall or on the floor. But recently I went shopping for a carpet sweeper and was amazed to find the beautiful bright blues, pinks, greens and yellows available. They were dressed as if going to a party instead of to do a routine household job as did the previous black and brown models.

Selecting a turquoise sweeper to use in a new work area, I discovered the dirt pans are on top, the easier to dump out the dirt into the handiest wastebasket. My sweeper has such a bright luster I can see how to straighten up my messed up hair before going to answer the doorbell, if caught in the cleaning process.

The sweeper is as quick and easy to grab as a broom and still keeps me firm putting dirt under the carpet, supplementing the plugging in of the vacuum for the heavier cleaning. But the surprising thing is that in the emptying I discover that not only is the sweeper a rainbow shade, but much of what it picks up from the floor is colorful.

OCCASIONALLY there is a piece of lint from a bright

rose electric blanket, a piece of candy stripe carpet from where Smokey, the cat, tested his paws, a strip of multicolored yarn from the new sweater being knit for the man of the house, and a scrap of silver foil from the wrapping of a candy bar that fell to the floor. It's a colorful world when the new carpet sweeper and the dust it picks up match in supercolor.

SPECIAL

POLYNESIA — You can take a 90-minute visit to six enchanted islands of the Pacific without leaving your easy chair—and Bill Burrud's color cameras did the same trick without leaving the multi-million dollar "Disneyland of Polynesia" built by the Mormon Church on the island of Oahu. The unique Polynesian Cultural Center includes six villages—Tahiti, Samoa, Hawaii, Tonga, Fiji and New Zealand (Maori)—each with authentic grass huts, swaying palms and natives in the traditional garb of their own island. At 8:30 p.m., in color, ch 13, you'll see native crafts, fierce Fiji warriors, grass-skirted Tahitian maidens, and a lovely young Samoan girl adorned in a costume of taro leaves.

SUSPENSE THEATRE — An East German refugee, whose pregnant wife didn't make it with him through the Berlin Wall, devises a conscienceless scheme to bring her over during an Easter weekend of relaxed travel restrictions. He meets an American look-alike, woos her to steal her passport and switch the women's identities, leaving the American girl alone and unidentified behind the Wall. Richard Beymer stars at 10 p.m., in color, ch. 4, with Katherine Crawford in a dual role.

Dragon in the Garden

By Virginia M. Crill

TERROR of ancient fairy tales, the fiery-tongued dragon may not have been as completely imaginary as we always believed. For he has left distant relatives and apparent descendents living among us. If they were not now in miniature they could be as frightening today as in ages past when they stole lovely princesses and gobbled up inhabitants of whole villages.

The miniature descendents still have voracious appetites. But the villages they gobble up now are considerably smaller. They are little, dragon-type lizards that like to eat ants. They like red ants, black ants, big ants and small ants — for breakfast, lunch and dinner, as well as for snacks.

The horned-toad as this ugly but welcome small creature is commonly called has an unending appetite. When he finishes the ants in a backyard he pleases all gardeners by next dining on sow bugs, spiders and other pesty insects. Although he has never been seen to spout fire as the dragons of old, his stomach appears to be lined with it for one of his species was observed sitting outside a beehive eagerly swallowing the bees as fast as they flew near him.

SINCE the horned toad is native to this region, many persons without even knowing it may have some of these small lizards living in their yards. They are colored so that they blend into the ground where they live. Even the spots on their backs look like variations in the ground. Insects also seldom notice them—until it is too late. Their bodies are so constructed they do not even cast a shadow when sitting quietly. Close watchers can almost never see them actually catch an insect. The only noticeable motion is the swallowing of the horned toad as the insect suddenly vanishes.

Ugly and slow, horned toads seem completely vulnerable for they apparently never fight, are non-poisonous, and so small that when full grown they can sit comfortably in the palm of a hand.

But they do have a built-in defense. The rows of spines around the backs of their heads and necks are not just decorations. Animals that eat one seldom live to eat another for these spines pierce the throat of the bird or snake or other reptile trying to swallow one, and usually kill it. There is a record of a young western diamond rattlesnake killed by having its neck pierced by the horns in an attempt to swallow one of these small lizards.

WHEN frightened they usually squirt a drop of blood from one eye at or on anything which bothers them. These tiny creatures have been known to squirt blood several yards although the average is only a few feet. In Mexico they are referred to as the lizard that cries blood.

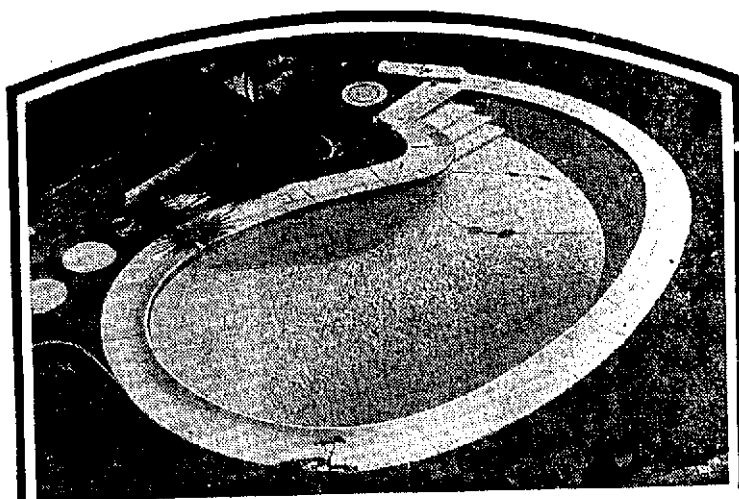

Although they never obviously show affection they can apparently be tamed. Miss Ann Crill, Long Beach, has owned several and can pick them up and carry them around as though they were delicate dolls. They show no sign of fear and do not even try to jump away. And there are no ants around her home.

The horned toad is one of more than 3,000 kinds of lizards, only 20 of which are poisonous. The Gila Monster of Arizona and Mexico and Horrid Heloderm of Mexico are the only poisonous lizards in this part of the country. They are easily distinguishable by their fat, sluggish bodies about two feet long. The largest distant relative of the harmless horned toad is the Dragon Lizard of Komodo in the East Indies. It may grow to 12 feet long and may weigh up to 250 pounds.

Meanwhile the horned toad grows more welcome each day to gardeners and homemakers who understand it, as it sits or moves in near invisibility, quietly eating many times its weight in unwanted insects.

Pet horned toad sits on knee of Ann Crill. Reptiles devour vast quantities of insects.

'Wide World of Sports' Makes the Unusual 'Routine'

By RICK DU BROW

HOLLYWOOD (UPI)—The big Saturday treat in the New York neighborhood where I was brought up was to be packed off, with lunch in a brown paper bag, to a local movie house fondly nicknamed "The Itch" because of its general condition.

The matrons there all looked like Wallace Beery, and I don't know how many times they slugged us kids for howling with gleeful disbelief at those crazy short films about exotic, remote-type sports (to us) that filled in during the double- or triple-feature breaks. I mean, here we were sitting in "The Itch," and there they were showing us some films with a guy sailing his yacht off Ceylon. Or maybe it was about tree-climbing in Tasmania or polo in Algiers. It all seemed like that, anyway. I never saw a film about baseball or football.

Well, times have changed—maids own boats, brown paper bags simply aren't what they used to be, and ABC-TV's "Wide World of Sports" has made events like the National Skydiving Championships almost as routine an occurrence for the televiewer as the World Series. And what I am getting around to is that "Wide World of Sports" marked its fourth anniversary recently—showing the Tournament of Champions Golf competition at Las Vegas and stock-car racing at Daytona, Fla.—and I just wanted to say "Happy Birthday, 'Wide World of Sports.'"

I WANTED TO SAY THAT because "Wide World of Sports," with rare exceptions, is really an accomplishment each week. Although ABC-TV is the smallest network, "Wide World of Sports" is still the best sports show on national television and has caused its competing broadcasters to come up with imitations, none of which has survived as steadily or as long. It was the core of this "Wide World of Sports" staff that was responsible for ABC-TV's brilliant coverage of the last winter Olympics with same-day prime-time specials.

I don't know about tree-climbing in Tasmania, but "Wide World of Sports" has shown events in 29 countries, from the Davis Cup to barrel-jumping championships, from the English Derby to lumberjack competition, from billiards to the Japanese All-Star Baseball Game, from the St. Patrick's Day Irish hurling showdown in Dublin to American-Russian track meets in Moscow. It is worth your time.

Tips on Mums and Dahlias

Mums are easily grown if certain rules for their culture are observed by the gardener.

By Joe Littlefield

MUMS are easily grown but many mum fans still haven't mastered the trick of making these plants produce bushy, sturdy branches with green foliage well down on the lower branches.

Gardeners must be consistent in pinching back the new growths at the right time, instead of cutting the branches each time they grow long after previous cutting back.

A well-cared-for chrysanthemum, whether pompon, decorative, exhibition, or one of the numerous fancy types, can be trained to grow sturdy, well foliated and massed with flowers, simply by pinching tips back each time new growth develops after a previous pinching, and new growth has two pairs of leaves. Pinching must stop around four to six weeks before flower buds set. (Nothing is a sadder looking sight in the garden than vine-like branched mums, the gardener has to stake early in the season, then tie and retie them after each time he cuts them back and new weak leggy stem branches grow out.)

FERTILIZE the plants every three or four weeks with a balanced plant food. Protect them from aphids, and leaf hoppers and possible other stray pests, water them preferably in the mornings.

You'll make those mums serve two purposes by selecting certain branches and snap off all the young buds but one remaining. The single larger flower blossoms should be cut for indoor decoration. Branches not disbudded will have many more but smaller blossoms that may be left on the plant for color in the garden.

Choose some mum varieties that flower early, some in mid-season and, unless you live in an area where frosts come early, some late kinds, too. Thus you'll have mums from September through December and into January.

PLANT DAHLIAS now for summer and fall color. Green plants or roots with sprouts started should be set out. Place stakes while planting. Dahlias upon growing, develop fattened roots right away. Driving a stake alongside a growing plant may pierce the main root, or damage smaller roots, possibly causing rot.

Label, after planting. We can't always remember just what's been planted where.

Watering and spraying are the two routines to start this month. The frequency in watering depends somewhat on possible late rains; overcast, foggy weather, and type of soil. Don't overwater; that might cause weeds.

"Spray early. We start spraying as soon as the dahlia sprouts are above the surface of the soil. Thrips seem to be the common early pest.

Pinch off tip growth after three pairs of leaves develop. This forces six side shoots to grow. For flower show growing, pinch tip off large flower variety after second pair of leaves, forcing four side shoots for huge blooms.

Dorothy Digs

All sorts of pests are starting to appear on my flowers and shrubs since the late rains have everything putting on real rapid growth.

I have already sprayed my roses twice with a dual purpose rose spray because I want to prevent mildew and/or black spot.

However, for the other pests I like to use a multi-purpose bug killer that is a combination for killing both chewing and sucking bugs. With one spray I can get them all at once and not have to use a different one on each pest.

One year I neglected to spray my Madonna lilies and before I woke up there was a nice round hole in each bud and not one opened up.

Gardenias are now covered with buds and two thorough sprayings 10 days apart will be real insurance for a full blooming.

GARDEN CLUBS

Members and guests of Long Beach Garden Club will have an armchair trip to the New York World's Fair in a program to be presented by the Dilday Family at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday in Linden Hall, 208 Linden Ave. New officers will be installed. They are Florence Sunn, president; Patricia Dailey, vice president; Blanche Ashby, treasurer; Grace Bonnewitz, corresponding secretary, and Adelaide Keating, recording secretary.

"Plant Life and General Culture" will be the topic of Bert Slatter at a meeting of Long Beach Fuchsia Society at 7:30 p.m. Thursday in Machinist Hall, 728 Elm Ave. There will be a plant table.

Long Beach African Violet Society will have its annual African Violet Show from 1 p.m. to 9 p.m. Monday and from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Tuesday, May 17 and 18, at the Woman's City Club, 1309 E. 3rd St. Show theme will be "A Garden of Violets" and will be carried out on the stage and in arrangements and compositions. The public is invited.

Berry Seeds

Do you know that you can grow strawberries from seeds? There's a variety named Baron Solemacher which will flower eight weeks after planting and will produce large, sweet, very fragrant berries for weeks. This is an Alpine type strawberry which does not produce any runners, but will remain small.

This little strawberry is especially useful as a border to a path or a flower bed, near the house of course so you can pick the berries as they ripen.

New Soil Aid

LAWN and flowering plant fanciers bedeviled by barren ground will suddenly see greener pastures, literally, in a new discovery that attacks the problem of alkaline soils.

Already patented, the idea is being introduced after extensive research in Southern California coastal areas where "alkaline" means that the dirt under lawns and plants has too much mineral salt. Much of this dirt is ex-ocean bottom hardened by lack of rain.

The new preparation contains food elements, micronized iron and bacterial activating elements—including humusite which has been a popular plant-growth activator for the past decade and Green Gard, a patented iron preparation that will not burn the soil.

THROUGH a deliberate but gradual process, the new dressing breaks down—unlocks—the hard-sticking soil, commonly known as "hardpan."

The dressing seeps down into the hard layers of alkaline soil which are packed as tightly as new shingles on a roof. It loosens up the earth into small bunches or an overall porous condition, thus it unlocks the soil so that its nutritive values are free to reach up to the grass and plant roots above.

A partial analogy is drawn from the oil-well drilling procedure in the Long Beach area: the operator mixes water with his drilling mud so that it will seep more readily into the cracks and fissures along the walls of the hole he is drilling.

The preparation's manufacturer, Black Magic, Inc.,

states it has found the new product far outlasts sludge, manure or even peat moss as a mulch. It is odorless and contains no filler, sludge or manure.

"HORTICULTURAL experts have declared that Southern California needs a particular kind of mulch—one without salt content. We have the same faith in this new formula that we had in our indoor plant mix discovered in the Forties," said Miss Martha Parks, president and board chairman of Black Magic, Inc., Hermosa Beach, now the world's largest manufacturer of plant aids.

Recent examples of the successful use of the dressing are in evidence in the South Coast Botanical Gardens in Rolling Hills, who have reported excellent results since the dressing was applied on a large new fill of earth that had not been seeded as a lawn before.

Another experiment proved very successful at the base of a eucalyptus tree where there is usually a ring of earth that will not grow grass. Ten days after the dressing was used, the bare ring filled with new shoots of grass (see picture).

Garden Tips

Garden Tips for the week . . . Shrubs that have finished blooming need feeding now to develop strong new growth. Lawns should be fertilized now, and pay particular attention to chrysanthemums and fast-growing annuals and perennials.

A good pair of hedge shears can be the gardener's best friend. Even if you don't have a hedge, they're worth the investment for shearing back ground covers and perennial edgings after bloom. Use them on alyssum, ajuga, candytuft, chamomile, and snow-in-summer.

Geraniums are blooming in pots at the nursery, and this is an excellent time to add them to your collection.

QUESTION: IS BALDNESS INHERITED?

ANSWER: Definitely NOT. WE MAY INHERIT A TENDENCY to baldness, not baldness itself.

QUESTION: WHAT CAUSES BALDNESS?

ANSWER: Many things, among them excessive dandruff, poor circulation, neglect. It takes a professional to determine the factors in each individual case.

QUESTION: WHAT CAN BE DONE ABOUT BALDNESS?

ANSWER: No matter WHAT stage of baldness you have reached, your hair can be regrown with proper treatments, if the roots are alive.

FIRST REMARKABLE TREATMENT TO NEW CLIENTS
$2.00 NEXT 6 DAYS

What ARE the Danger Signals

There are definite warnings and everyone can recognize them. DANDRUFF means there are bacteria at work. If they are not removed, they choke off the hair roots, a bald spot soon appears, and baldness spreads until you are completely bald. The same is true of EXCESS FALLING HAIR and ITCHY SCALP. In fact, anything but a healthy, good-looking head of hair means something is wrong and you MAY BE ON THE WAY TO BALDNESS. The longer one waits, the more advanced the condition.

AMAZING NEW METHOD MUST BE EXPERIENCED TO BE APPRECIATED

$2 is the complete charge for your first remarkable TUROFF treatment during this SPECIAL CLINIC, for the next 6 days. IF YOUR HAIR is thinning, over dry or over oily—if you are troubled with dandruff, increasing hair loss, come in and see us during this special clinic, for the next 6 days. If the FREE examination shows we can help you, your very first TUROFF treatment will cost you just $2.00. # Tall Gals Like Short Fellas

VIOLETING all of the accepted rules of reason, tall, blonde beach bunnies Mary Hughes and Mary Sturdivant, featured players in American International's new musical comedy "Beach Blanket Bingo," prefer to date fellows on the short side.

Mary Hughes is 20 and stands 5 feet, 8 inches tall. Mary Sturdivant is 19 and stands 5 feet 8½ inches tall.

Neither finds her height a disadvantage. On the contrary, Mary S. is convinced that tall girls have all the best of it.

"You can wear more things and look better in them even carrying 10 pounds of overweight," she says. Mary S. weighs 123 pounds.

"IT'S QUITE an advantage," says Mary H. "When I walk in some place, everyone sees me immediately, and I can also see them. What's more, a girl with long legs can wear things other girls wouldn't dare put on."

Mary H. prefers sportswear, with a strong leaning to pants and bikini bathing suits. "A girl with long legs likes to show them off," she confides.

Both beauties say they have rarely dated a boy as tall or taller than they though they admit that most modern youngsters are growing taller and larger than their forebears.

But Mary S. gives some provincial insight into their reasoning when she says,

"In Hollywood the boys tend to be so strikingly handsome a girl needs something to make her stand out so she doesn't get an inferiority complex."

White House

Originally known as "The Palace" or the "Executive Mansion," the White House got its name around 1814 after it was severely burned by the British and had to be painted white to hide the traces of charring on its buff colored freestone walls. Shortly after the repainting, the name "White House" began to be used on Capitol Hill and stuck through the years.

Your Name

TER with a similar meaning, originated from a forefather who lived at the south German city of Hochstadt, Bavaria. The family shield is gold on the upper half, emblazoned with a red rampant lion; blue on the lower half, decorated with a gold, 3-tiered fountain.

DEAR MISS RULE: Would like data on MENDENHALL.—D. M., E. M., Long Beach; I. S., Bellflower.

MENDENHALL is an unusual English name with an ancient origin. The source was the old Teutonic German term "Mandjan" meaning "most happy and glad one." Mandjan evolved in Britain as Menden, to which was added the word "Hall" for the owner of a large, imposing manor house. No shield is available for Mendenhall. American ancestors include John Mendenhall, born in Wiltshire, England, 1659, who settled in Chester County, Penn., about 1680 and left many descendants.

DEAR MISS RULE: Kindly analyze COLBERT.—Mrs. C., Los Alamitos.

C.: COLBERT, French in nationality, began in the 1300s as a hero-warrior name. The source "Koll-Berht," portrayed "man with the shining helmet." The Colbert armorial shield from Paris is gold, embossed with a springtime blue serpent. The Colberts originated in the old northeast French province of Champagne. Family descendants are exemplified by the noted Jean Baptiste Colbert, Marquis de Seignelay, 17th century financier.

DEAR MISS RULE: Would like data on MAZZANTTI.—M. S., Long Beach.

M. S.: MAZZANTTI, of Italian background, was handed down from a forefather baptized Giacomazzo, a nickname for Giacomo (James in English) meaning "The Supplanter." Giacomazzo was shortened to Mazzo, then enlarged as "Mass-anti," or "son of Mazzo." The Mazzanti armorial shield is gold, emblazoned with an arm in red holding a war club, placed below a blue stripe engraved with three gold fleurs-de-lis (lilies).

DEAR MISS RULE: I would be fascinated by genealogy data on the south French Basque name SERRES.—C. M. S., Pomona.

M. S.: SERRES, from the old Iberian-Spanish "Serre" means "from the mountains." This southern French lineage achieved an armorial shield in Gascony. Their shield is in four parts, two blue with a pair of gold eagle claws on each; two red, centered with a dove holding an olive branch in its beak.

THEY TOUCH it lightly with a fork. Ah, yes...
It cuts almost as easily as rich whipped cream. They raise a morsel to their lips.
Ah, yes... It has a delightful charcoal-broiled fragrance. They taste it. Ah, yes, it is scrumptious...

That's how patrons react to the halibut steak at Hoe-fly's restaurant, 4911 E. Second St., which has been serving distinguished cuisine for more than 36 years. It is not ordinary halibut. It is the extremely thick center cut from a whale halibut, a huge fish which sports happily in the cold blue waters of the Northwest Pacific. Hoefly's serves it with drawn butter on an epicurean repast which includes fine soup, tossed salad, potato, beverage and dessert.

That halibut ($3.75) will be but one of the wonderful entrees served on Hoefly's special Mothers' Day menu today from 1 to 10 p.m.
Among the others will be roast prime ribs of beef au jus, a superb selection of charcoal-broiled steaks, baked Virginia ham, roast leg of lamb and tender Australian lobster tails.

Host at Hoefly's, which has a gracious old English atmosphere, is slim Irving Solomon, a modest, quiet civic leader who is extremely active in Long Beach's business life and who has given years of service to such charities as the City of Hope hospital. A former president of the Independent Businessmen's Association, he has devoted himself to seeking new ways of bringing additional commerce to the city. Since purchasing the restaurant in 1945, he has redecorated and enlarged it, turning it into one of Southern California's foremost dining establishments.

The restaurant accommodates luncheon and dinner banquets for up to 100 persons in its attractive Waterfall Room.

SUNDAY TREAT — Outstanding Mothers' Day fare will also be featured today from 2 to 10:30 p.m. at Francois Manhattan restaurant, 1909 E. 4th St., where the accent will be on continental cuisine. Prepared with a flare of extraordinary flavor will be such entrees as beef stroganoff, lobster thermidor, veal parmigian, breast of capon, roast duckling, prime rib au jus and many others. The prices, from $3, will include the Manhattan's famed table

Q. Governor and Mrs. Rockefeller announced the birth of a baby last year at about this time. I have never seen a picture of the baby or heard anything about it. Is it because the baby is abnormal, or is Mrs. Rockefeller trying to shield the baby from publicity? Do not print my full name, as I live only a few miles from the Governor's mansion.—M. V. D., Castleton, N.Y.

A. The baby, Nelson Aldrich Rockefeller, Jr., is healthy, normal in every way. It has long been the policy of the Rockefeller family not to publicize its offspring.

Q. I have missed Sander Vanocur of NBC-TV. What's become of him? What's he doing? — R. Culhine, Washington, D.C.

A. Vanocur left NBC because of a salary difference. He lives in Washington, reportedly is working on a book.

Q. Jackie Gleason is always shown at the beginning of his TV program drinking a liquid from a coffee cup. Tell us, what is Jackie really drinking from that cup? — Worthing Snow, Bristol, Conn.

A. Champagne.

Q. Why has the Internal Revenue Service revoked the tax exempt status of Texas millionaire H. L. Hunt's Life Line Foundation?—L. O., Dallas, Tex.

A. The status was revoked on the grounds that Hunt's foundation is political, not educational, in purpose.

ALL SHE WANTS IS A LEGAL HUSBAND

Sophia Loren and husband, Carlo Ponti: couple annulled recent Mexico marriage, plan to wed in France.

by LLOYD SHEARER

At age 30, screen star Sophia Loren has it made. She is stunningly beautiful, disgustingly healthy, enormously rich.

She earns $1 million per film, makes 3 or 4 a year, owns a spectacular $3 million, 50-room villa outside Rome, a magnificent chalet in Burgenstock, Switzerland, a lavish 3-story penthouse on the Rue Charron in Paris. She drives around in a $21,000 Rolls-Royce, and her collection of jewelry and furs, once foolishly uninsured, is now covered for $2,500,000.

Generous to a fault, she supports her mother in a style to which Mama was never accustomed, and she even subsidizes her father, Riccardo Scicolone, who refused to marry her mother, plus a small army of indigent paisanos.

She is warm, friendly, down-to-earth, widely loved, admired and undoubtedly now reaching the peak of her intensely photogenic beauty and her surprisingly successful career.

"I have everything," she says in sweet sadness, "except what I have always wanted most—a legal husband and some babies. Last year I was so happy. I said to Carlo, 'At last, we are going to have a baby.' But then I lost it after 5 months. Today it would be almost one year old."

The "Carlo" this tall, lovely actress refers to is Carlo Ponti, 53, a charming, brilliant, bald, little roly-poly of a lawyer who discovered Sophia 14 years ago when she was a thin, starving Neapolitan waif.

He was then a film producer from Milan, happily married to Giuliana Fiastri, daughter of an Italian Army general, and someone asked him to serve as a judge in the "Miss Rome" beauty contest.

"I think," he recalls, "that Sophia was then 16. She and her mother had come to Rome from Pozzuoli—that is near Naples—to get work as extras in a big American film, Quo Vadis.

"To tell you the truth I don't remember how I voted in the beauty contest. Sophia says it is my fault that she only came in second. But I remember after the awards, I said to her, 'You may have some possibilities as an actress. Come and see me tomorrow.'"

"She did not come," Ponti continues. "She says she lost her way. I think now she didn't have the fare. She was very poor and so skinny. But she was a tall girl with good features and eyes the color of honey, and she carried herself well, and there was a nice kind of clean, young beauty about her. Later when she took her screen tests, we found the camera could catch it only from certain angles. In some of the tests she photographed badly. In others she looked well. But she was eager and ambitious, and most important, she was willing to listen and learn. And of course, I could sign her for very little money."

"Even then she had much sex appeal. She was skinny everywhere except in the right places. 'Carlo,' I said to myself, 'I think maybe with a little luck—one must have luck in this business—you can develop this stringbean of a girl into an international screen star.' Thirteen, 14 years ago, I deliberately planned to do that."

AN OPTIMIST

"You must believe me when I tell you I had no idea that in the process I would fall in love with her. It has brought problems, many problems, but I am sure I will work them out. I am an incurable optimist."

Ponti's major problem involves finding some way in which he can marry Sophia and still live legally in the Italy they both love.

The crux of the difficulty is that there is no divorce in Italy.

In 1946 Carlo Ponti married Giuliana Fiastri. They have two handsome teenagers, a daughter, Guendalina, and a son, Giorgio. When Carlo in true Pygmalion style fell in love with his protégée, Sophia, his wife was marvelously understanding. She agreed to ask for an annulment, which, if granted, would permit Carlo and Sophia to get married in Italy.

Unfortunately the petition for annulment was denied by church tribunal.

Sophia, of course, was violently disappointed. "I proposed to Carlo," she says frankly. "I said to him, 'Surely, there must be some place in this world where two people who are in love can get married. You do want to marry me, darling, don't you?' And he said, 'Of course, but first I have to find some place to get a divorce.'"

In 1957 Ponti obtained a divorce from his wife by proxy in Juarez, Mexico. Then on September 17th of that year he married Sophia Loren by proxy in the same Mexican border city.

Three months later the Italian authorities began bigamy proceedings against Carlo and Sophia, who were living in Rome. The couple presently moved to Switzerland where they purchased a home. Sophia continued, however, to make films in Italy, but whenever Carlo joined her, they were again threatened with bigamy proceedings. The Italian authorities maintained that Ponti already had one legal wife.

A few months ago a Rome court ruled that the Mexican marriage in 1957 of actress Sophia Loren to film producer Carlo Ponti was null and void because Ponti was legally married at the time, a decision paving the way for the state to press bigamy charges against the couple. If convicted they could receive prison sentences of up to five years.

To forestall the bigamy count, Sophia and Carlo succeeded in having their Mexican marriage annulled in Mexico. To the Italian authorities they presented a copy of the Mexican court decision, ruling that their

And he said, 'Of course, but first I have to find some place to get a divorce.'"

In 1957 Ponti obtained a divorce from his wife by proxy in Juarez, Mexico. Then on September 17th of that year he married Sophia Loren by proxy in the same Mexican border city.

Three months later the Italian authorities began bigamy proceedings against Carlo and Sophia, who were living in Rome. The couple presently moved to Switzerland where they purchased a home. Sophia continued, however, to make films in Italy, but whenever Carlo joined her, they were again threatened with bigamy proceedings. The Italian authorities maintained that Ponti already had one legal wife.

A few months ago a Rome court ruled that the Mexican marriage in 1957 of actress Sophia Loren to film producer Carlo Ponti was null and void because Ponti was legally married at the time, a decision paving the way for the state to press bigamy charges against the couple. If convicted they could receive prison sentences of up to five years.

To forestall the bigamy count, Sophia and Carlo succeeded in having their Mexican marriage annulled in Mexico. To the Italian authorities they presented a copy of the Mexican court decision, ruling that their wedding by proxy was invalid because of technical reasons. They pleaded that they were never married and therefore could not be prosecuted in Italy for bigamy.

Since other countries also recognize the Mexican annulment, Sophia Loren and Carlo Ponti are no longer man and wife anywhere. In addition, Ponti still has his first wife in Rome.

A few weeks ago the diminutive producer became a naturalized French citizen. He now plans to divorce his first wife in Paris. When that decree is granted, Sophia will also probably become a French citizen. Then as two French citizens, married to each other, they could probably live in Rome without constant fear of prosecution. That, at least, is their plan.

As for Ponti's first wife, constantly in the company of a handsome naval captain, Marcello Mainetti, she says, "A divorce would suit me fine. My feelings toward Carlo and Sophia are most friendly, and I will do almost anything to co-operate, but these legal things move most slowly. I hope Carlo will work things out, but I am not nearly as optimistic as he is."

Sophia Loren, however, guilty of wishful thinking, is "sure Carlo will bring it off. After all," she explained to me from the set of Lady L here (her 40th film, in which she plays a girl who starts out as a laundress in a French house of pleasure and ends up a member of British nobility), "Carlo is a fine lawyer, a calm, methodical, brainy Milanese. I know he will find a way. My faith in this man is boundless. Look what he has done for me. So much of what I have, so much of what I am, I owe to him. You know my story."

Sophia Loren was born in Rome in 1934. Her father is a tall, gray-haired, beak-nosed man who refers to himself as "a construction engineer." Sophia's feelings toward him are ambivalent. She dislikes him, because while he was willing to have two daughters by her mother, Romilda Villani, he steadfastly refused to marry her. Instead, he married a movie theater usherette by whom he had two sons, Giuliano and Giuseppe Scicolone, Sophia's half-brothers.

BLAMES HER FATHER

Depending on her mood, the actress tolerates, hates, understands, refuses to forgive and forgives her father. She does in general, however, hold him accountable for the misery, poverty and trauma of her youth.

She was raised by her maternal grandparents in Pozzuoli, on the Bay of Naples, one of the most squalid towns in an area of squalid cities. Her mother, a tall, strikingly beautiful actress-type redhead, was weak and undernourished. As an infant Sophia was turned over to a wet nurse for 50 lire a month. The wet nurse remembers Sophia as "the ugliest baby I ever saw in my life. It was my milk who made her beautiful. She drank so much of it, much more than 50 lire's worth."

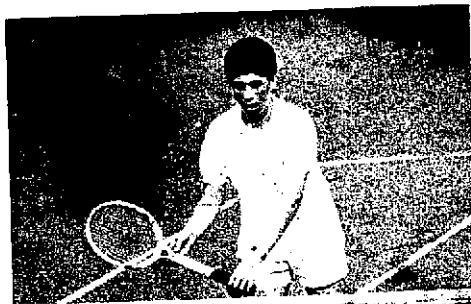

In her first 14 years, Sophia Scicolone, the name she went by, saw her father infrequently. "In all those years, he gave me just one birthday present—a toy automobile and a pair of roller skates. He wanted nothing to do with us, except once in a while he would visit Mama."

Sophia and eight relatives lived in a four-room apartment in Pozzuoli which had two bedrooms. She shared a bed with her grandparents and an aunt. Her mother worked intermittently as a piano teacher. Poverty was omnipresent and depressive.

Sophia was a quiet child. In school her classmates, cruel as only children can be, taunted her "because I had no father. They made me feel different, a stranger, and because I was so thin—they used to call me steccetto [little stick]—and because I had no father to talk to, to come home to, I was different. All my life

Countess Giuliana Fiastri, Carlo Ponti's first wife, is tall and beautiful, would like to wed naval officer.

Giorgio Ponti, son of Carlo's first marriage, is a tennis enthusiast. He and sister see all Sophia's films.

Ponti's teenage daughter Guendalina lives with mother and brother has friendly attitude toward Sophia Loren.

this not having things proper and legal has bothered me.

"I remember when I was 14, 15. I went off to Rome with my mother to look for work. We tried to find my father in Rome. He wasn't in. So we took our bags to Cinecittà where they were hiring extras for Quo Vadis. Mama and I got in line with hundreds of other women. When my turn came, I stepped forward and told the man my name was Sophia Scicolone. Then suddenly some woman jumped out, she began screaming at the top of her voice that I had no right to use that name, only she had the right. She called me all sorts of things. I wanted just to sink into the ground and fade away. I was so humiliated, so ashamed. That woman was Nella Rivolta, the woman my father had married. She, too, was looking for extra work."

After Sophia and her mother earned $33 in Quo Vadis, they went to live in a small furnished room on the Via Cosenza. Sophia got odd jobs working for the funetti, popular magazines with cartoon strips, for which she did some posing in the seminude. It was during this period that she entered the "Miss Rome" beauty contest in Oppian Park, where she met Carlo Ponti.

Carlo put her under "personal contract," gave her voice lessons, found her bit parts, agreed to it when a fellow producer suggested that she change her name from Sophia Lazzaro (her modeling name) to Sophia Loren.

Four years and 20 films later, rounded out in many ways, Sophia Loren had become a full-fledged Italian motion picture star, thanks in part to Ponti's careful guidance and her own ceaseless ambition for money, fame and recognition. Ponti was cautiously in love with her, but still living at home with his first wife.

LIKES ITALIAN FILMS

Unwilling to share her Carlo with anyone, in desperate need of a combination father-lover-husband-and-adviser, desperately seeking a normal husband-and-wife relationship, Sophia suggested that they try Hollywood. Ponti was agreeable. He worked out a fabulous deal with Paramount, and the two lovers flew westward. The Hollywood films they made turned out badly. "The truth," the actress says, "is that I am much better in Italian films than in British or American, because I understand them better. I understand the characterizations. I am part of them. I have a feel for them. When I work with an Italian director like Vittorio De Sica—it is the most harmonious and complete collaboration."

In 1957 Ponti arranged a proxy Mexican marriage to Sophia; thus began their tangled legal hassle still not unraveled.

A religious zealot in Milan and a Signora Brambilla, in the name of some Italian association for the protection of the family, accused the couple of bigamy. Subsequently, to save themselves from going to jail, Sophia and Carlo disavowed their proxy marriage.

"At the moment," says Sophia, "I guess we are not legally married anywhere. But you know, we both feel very much married. But I guess feeling married is not enough in this society. That's why once and for all I would like everything settled, everything to be absolutely legal."

"If I sound a little impatient, a little anxious, a little too hopeful, and I try not to, it's only because I know how awful it is for children who have to go to court to claim their name. I remember what happened to me as a child, what happened to my sister. I want no such anguish for my children. I want my marriage to Carlo to be legal everywhere if possible."

"I don't worry. I don't worry. I know Carlo will work it out. I don't worry." But, of course, she does.

wedding by proxy was invalid because of technical reasons. They pleaded that they were never married and therefore could not be prosecuted in Italy for bigamy.

A few weeks ago the diminutive producer became a naturalized French citizen. He now plans to divorce his first wife in Paris. When that decree is granted, Sophia will also probably become a French citizen. Then as two French citizens, married to each other, they could probably live in Rome without constant fear of prosecution. That, at least, is their plan.

As for Ponti's first wife, constantly in the company of a handsome naval captain, Marcello Mainetti, she says, "A divorce would suit me fine. My feelings toward Carlo and Sophia are most friendly, and I will do almost anything to co-operate, but these legal things move most slowly. I hope Carlo will work things out, but I am not nearly as optimistic as he is."

Sophia Loren, however, guilty of wishful thinking, is "sure Carlo will bring it off. After all," she explained to me from the set of Lady L here (her 40th film, in which she plays a girl who starts out as a laundress in a French house of pleasure and ends up a member of British nobility), "Carlo is a fine lawyer, a calm, methodical, brainy Milanese. I know he will find a way. My faith in this man is boundless. Look what he has done for me. So much of what I have, so much of what I am, I owe to him. You know my story."

Sophia Loren was born in Rome in 1934. Her father is a tall, gray-haired, beak-nosed man who refers to himself as "a construction engineer." Sophia's feelings toward him are ambivalent. She dislikes him, because while he was willing to have two daughters by her mother, Romilda Villani, he steadfastly refused to marry her. Instead, he married a movie theater usherette by whom he had two sons, Giuliano and Giuseppe Scicolone, Sophia's half-brothers.

BLAMES HER FATHER

Depending on her mood, the actress tolerates, hates, understands, refuses to forgive and forgives her father. She does in general, however, hold him accountable for the misery, poverty and trauma of her youth.

She was raised by her maternal grandparents in Pozzuoli, on the Bay of Naples, one of the most squalid towns in an area of squalid cities. Her mother, a tall, strikingly beautiful actress-type redhead, was weak and undernourished. As an infant Sophia was turned over to a wet nurse for 50 lire a month. The wet nurse remembers Sophia as "the ugliest baby I ever saw in my life. It was my milk who made her beautiful. She drank so much of it, much more than 50 lire's worth."

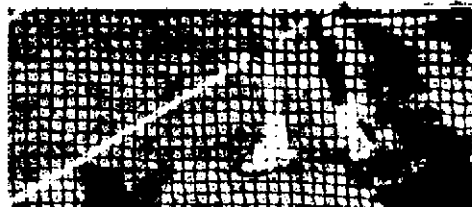

In her first 14 years, Sophia Scicolone, the name she went by, saw her father infrequently. "In all those years, he gave me just one birthday present—a toy automobile and a pair of roller skates. He wanted nothing to do with us, except once in a while he would visit Mama."

Sophia and eight relatives lived in a four-room apartment in Pozzuoli which had two bedrooms. She shared a bed with her grandparents and an aunt. Her mother worked intermittently as a piano teacher. Poverty was omnipresent and depressive.

Sophia was a quiet child. In school her classmates, cruel as only children can be, taunted her "because I had no father. They made me feel different, a stranger, and because I was so thin—they used to call me stecchetto [little stick]—and because I had no father to talk to, to come home to, I was different. All my life

Countess Giuliana Fiastrì, Carlo Ponti's first wife, is tall and beautiful, would like to wed naval officer.

Giorgio Ponti, son of Carlo's first marriage, is a tennis enthusiast. He and sister see all Sophia's films.

Ponti's teenage daughter Guendalina lives with mother and brother has friendly attitude toward Sophia Loren.

this not having things proper and legal has bothered me.

"I remember when I was 14, 15. I went off to Rome with my mother to look for work. We tried to find my father in Rome. He wasn't in. So we took our bags to Cinecittà where they were hiring extras for Quo Vadis. Mama and I got in line with hundreds of other women. When my turn came, I stepped forward and told the man my name was Sophia Scicolone. Then suddenly some woman jumped out, she began screaming at the top of her voice that I had no right to use that name, only she had the right. She called me all sorts of things. I wanted just to sink into the ground and fade away. I was so humiliated, so ashamed. That woman was Nella Rivolta, the woman my father had married. She, too, was looking for extra work."

After Sophia and her mother earned $33 in Quo Vadis, they went to live in a small furnished room on the Via Cosenza. Sophia got odd jobs working for the funetti, popular magazines with cartoon strips, for which she did some posing in the seminu. It was during this period that she entered the "Miss Rome" beauty contest in Oppian Park, where she met Carlo Ponti.

Carlo put her under "personal contract," gave her voice lessons, found her bit parts, agreed to it when a fellow producer suggested that she change her name from Sophia Lazzaro (her modeling name) to Sophia Loren.

Four years and 20 films later, rounded out in many ways, Sophia Loren had become a full-fledged Italian motion picture star, thanks in part to Ponti's careful guidance and her own ceaseless ambition for money, fame and recognition. Ponti was cautiously in love with her, but still living at home with his first wife.

LIKES ITALIAN FILMS

Unwilling to share her Carlo with anyone, in desperate need of a combination father-lover-husband-and-adviser, desperately seeking a normal husband-and-wife relationship, Sophia suggested that they try Hollywood. Ponti was agreeable. He worked out a fabulous deal with Paramount, and the two lovers flew westward. The Hollywood films they made turned out badly. "The truth," the actress says, "is that I am much better in Italian films than in British or American, because I understand them better. I understand the characterizations. I am part of them. I have a feel for them. When I work with an Italian director like Vittorio De Sica—it is the most harmonious and complete collaboration."

In 1957 Ponti arranged a proxy Mexican marriage to Sophia; thus began their tangled legal hassle still not unraveled.

A religious zealot in Milan and a Signora Brambilla, in the name of some Italian association for the protection of the family, accused the couple of bigamy. Subsequently, to save themselves from going to jail, Sophia and Carlo disavowed their proxy marriage.

"At the moment," says Sophia, "I guess we are not legally married anywhere. But you know, we both feel very much married. But I guess feeling married is not enough in this society. That's why once and for all I would like everything settled, everything to be absolutely legal."

"If I sound a little impatient, a little anxious, a little too hopeful, and I try not to, it's only because I know how awful it is for children who have to go to court to claim their name. I remember what happened to me as a child, what happened to my sister. I want no such anguish for my children. I want my marriage to Carlo to be legal everywhere if possible."

"I don't worry. I don't worry. I know Carlo will work it out. I don't worry." But, of course, she does.

A LOOK AT STATE LOTTERIES

by R. H. HUBBARD

New Hampshire's controversial Sweepstakes — the state-operated lottery for millions of dollars in prize money—grossed nearly $6 million, attracted record throngs of tourists and gained world-wide publicity for the state last year. Impressed by the success of this "painless" way of supplementing tax revenues, every other state in the Northeast is now considering similar programs.

"We need something like this," says state Representative Hugo L. Ricci of Providence, R. I., whose proposal for a state lottery has passed the lower house. "Taxpayers always feel put upon, but the state has to raise more money all the time. With two Sweepstakes races a year, along with some other form of monthly or biweekly lottery, I think we can raise $20 million a year. We could put off a tax increase for the next 10 years, at least."

In New York, which for years has been considering legalized off-track betting as a cure for tax woes, lawmakers are now strongly advocating a Sweepstakes patterned after that of New Hampshire. According to Democratic State Chairman William H. McKeon, such a lottery would provide a minimum of $250 million a year for primary and secondary schools. Maine, Vermont, Massachusetts and Connecticut have also jumped on the lottery bandwagon, as have a number of states in other parts of the country. There has been revived talk of a federal lottery.

But does New Hampshire's experience really prove that a government-sponsored lottery will work in the U.S.? Is it really a painless way for a state to raise money? Can it really be kept free from corruption, gamblers and gambling fever and a tendency to pick the pockets of the poor? In short, should New Hampshire's "success" be copied?

According to some elements of the clergy and press, it should not. Although the National Council of Churches has taken no public stand on state lotteries, a spokesman quotes the "feeling" that "A lot of people will be buying lottery tickets week after week with money needed for essentials." Another practical churchman added: "Legalized gambling is bound to invite political corruption and have detrimental effects on society. Besides, states that use a lottery are just putting off the day when they will have to raise taxes."

drop in the bucket?

One tax expert even questions the value of the lottery as a revenue source. Estimating the potential return from a proposed federal lottery, he concludes it would be about $1 billion—a drop in the bucket compared to the

Yet here in New Hampshire, while no one relishes the idea of competition, many agree that the Sweepstakes proves state-sponsored gambling will work—although perhaps only in a state like this one. Gov. John W. King, for example, minimizes the possibility of competition from neighboring states on the ground they couldn't operate as effectively as New Hampshire does. "We have some unique features in this state that make a Sweepstakes workable," the Governor says. "New Hampshire is relatively small and sparsely populated, so that every phase of the program can be closely supervised. And an important factor is our long history of political integrity. Unfortunately, that's not true everywhere else in New England. I sincerely believe that what we've established here will be extremely difficult for other states to imitate."

King is a Democrat in his second term of office in this traditionally Republican stronghold, and he thinks that's one reason the Sweepstakes has succeeded. "I came into office with no political obligations," he says. "As a matter of fact, I believe I was the biggest single contributor to my own campaign. Since I signed the Sweepstakes bill, no one has tried to influence me in any way. And even those who opposed the program haven't been able to find fault with the operation. With our banks handling all funds and tickets that have been sold, there can be no doubt about the integrity of the program."

The steep rise in the cost of education, financed in this state by property taxes, was a key factor in getting the Sweepstakes bill passed. Net proceeds are divided among New Hampshire's local school districts—and even those towns whose voters turned down the Sweepstakes proposal didn't refuse the money. Nevertheless, one adamant opponent complains, "We teach our children that it's wrong to gamble—in schools that now are partly supported by gambling!"

The theory that the Sweepstakes appeals chiefly to the poor is still prevalent among the antigambling faction. A leader in the fight against the New Hampshire program recently stated that "65 to 75 per cent of the Sweepstakes tickets are bought by people with incomes below $4,500."

survey coming up

This contention is vigorously refuted by Governor King. "A program like ours doesn't generate gambling fever. A lottery like the one proposed in Rhode Island, with frequent opportunities to win large sums of money, could be overly tempting to the poor man, but here we have just one Sweepstakes race a year; no one is likely to squander the rent money or the welfare check on a once-a-year chance to win $100,000." The argument may soon be settled, since the University of New Hampshire is conducting a study of last year's 1,992 winners to determine their income level, how many tickets they bought and other pertinent facts.

But while other states are debating the lottery question, there is one point on which all sides agree: If there's going to be gambling, New Hampshire's way is the best. Last year, $2.7 million was realized for the state's schools from a $5.7 million gross, and Governor King calls it "gravy." Perhaps longer experience will reveal serious flaws, but in the meantime neighbor states are eager to take their own dips in the gravy bowl—and that could turn out to be the lottery's fatal flaw.

Yes... MIRACLES Happened at Fatima!

You may not agree with the Catholic belief in miracles.

Perhaps you don't believe in miracles at all... and especially not in miracles attributed to the prayer of the Blessed Virgin.

But if God does look with special favor upon Mary... and does wondrous things at her request... is it not of vast importance to you to find out? It is not worth the few minutes required to examine the evidence?

What, for example, did God's angel mean when he said:

"Hail, full of grace, the Lord is with thee; blessed art thou amongst women..."?

Was she to be full of grace only temporarily—and "blessed amongst women" only during her life on earth?

This is not reasonable in view of Mary's unique role as the earthly mother of the Son of God. Nor can we discard and forget Mary if we believe Holy Scripture, for there we find Mary's words (Luke 1:48): "...henceforth all generations shall call me blessed." Where, excepting among Catholics, does anyone honor Mary as did God Himself?

"But," you may insist, "show me a miracle! And prove that Mary had anything to do with it."

We might, of course, recall that Christ's mother appeared to Bernadette at Lourdes in France, and that scientifically-authenticated cures have been occurring there ever since. Or we might cite similar apparitions to the three children at Fatima, Portugal, and the subsequent awesome spectacle of the sun spinning and dancing on its axis and then seeming to plunge toward the earth... a spectacle witnessed by 70,000 persons. And we could mention Mary's prophecies concerning the conditions under which Russia would be converted.

But Catholics don't require earth-shaking supernatural demonstrations to attest Mary's love, nor to prove her influence at the throne of God. It's the little "miracles" that take place in their daily lives when... in faith and trust... they pray: "Hail, Mary, full of grace, the Lord is with thee..."

Catholics pray for one another and ask the saints in Heaven to join them in prayer. "I believe," says the Apostles' Creed, "in the communion of saints." And Mary is in Catholic hearts the greatest of the saints. So we ask her to intercede for us with God, Who has often performed miracles in answer to her prayer.

An exciting and authentic pamphlet—describing the miraculous happenings at Fatima and a peace plan from Heaven—will be sent you upon your request. And nobody will call on you. Write today for Pamphlet No. PR-41.

A FABULOUS NEW NATIONAL PARK

by NEAL ASHBY

MOAB, UTAH.

Congratulate yourself. As a U.S. citizen you have just become part-owner of some of the world's strangest, most breathtaking scenery, lying within our newest National Park—Canyonlands, in southeastern Utah.

As you can see by the photos on these pages, it's a weird, sunny land of vast canyons of staggering depth and towering rock eroded into the forms of arches, castles, faces, bridges, needles and mushrooms. It's an open-air museum of picture writing and dwellings of ancient Indians and petrified dinosaur remnants.

Our newest National Park is an incomparable geologists' laboratory. For in some mysterious way this area became the site of upheavals and faulting of the earth's crust, and of the disappearance of seas that once covered the land. It has left thousands of acres of rock from the depths of ocean or earth thrust high into the air, exposed to the sculpturing of wind and water.

Canyonlands is a prize gained in the accelerated expansion of our National Park system. Other recent additions are Ice Age Park in Wisconsin and Fort Larned in Kansas. There are new National Seashores like Padre Island, Tex., and Point Reyes, Calif., and National Recreation Areas such as Lake Powell on the Arizona-Utah border and Land Between the Lakes in Kentucky.

Canyonland's 257,640 high desert acres, 4,000 to 7,000 feet above sea level, lie some 30 winding road miles southwest of this quiet mountain valley town. They became our 32nd National Park last September, and now work forces of the National Park Service are making as many improvements for the convenience of summer visitors as time and available funds allow.

Within 5 years there'll be access roads to all major points of interest, picnic areas, fully improved camp grounds, hiking trails and a visitor center. Even now you can take jet boat rides through deep river canyons, ride through on horses rented outside the park, take jeep tours and camp in designated sections.

But at present visitors will find facilities meager. And they'll find much of Canyonlands passable only on foot, horseback or in 4-wheel drive vehicles. But this should deter no one. Sections you can traverse by family car promise rich experiences, enhanced by hiking beyond the car's safe limits.

family tour

With a young, visiting family, Mr. and Mrs. Ken Iverson, daughter Shawn, 5, and son Shane, 2, PARADE has just taken two rugged day-long guided trips into the park. Come along as we go first to:

ISLAND IN THE SKY. This is a skyline plateau high above the canyons of the converging Colorado and Green Rivers. It is reachable via a dry-weather dirt road which begins at U.S. Highway 160, a few miles north of Moab.

We were traveling by jeep, and lanky guide Mitch Williams took our party on a couple of side trips. Off Route 279 near Moab, he pointed out fossilized dinosaur tracks in a slab of rock on a hillside and Indian caves at the top of a cliff. Then we twisted up bumpy, steep Shafer trail, and at the top we stared down 2,000 feet to the floor of Shafer Canyon.

Next we joined the Island in the Sky road, passing among the sandstone ridges, their reddish sides tufted with green junipers and pinion pines. We crossed the car-wide "Neck" and registered at the Park Service Ranger Station, where visitors may get instructions.

A not-to-be-missed geological phenomenon on the

BRINGING UP BABY,* HINTS COLLECTED BY MRS. DAN GERBER, MOTHER OF FIVE

My, we're busy blossoming out!

The life of a six-month-old is a busy and spirited one indeed. So many new things to try, to see, to do. Today your Jack-be-nimble may roll over like a champ... tomorrow that do-it-yourselfer may sit up alone and stay put. Watch carefully and you'll notice little eyes focus expertly, examine intently. Note how eyes and hands work together, improving graspability and reachability. Countless are the skills your little one will acquire and each day will delight you with his progress.

Meaty subject. During the first year babies are really "on the grow" physically as well as mentally. Now, more than ever, protein foods are in order to give that growth a great big helping hand. Gerber Strained Meats are high in protein and extra-low in fat for easy digestibility. Made from special cuts selected by Armour, they're prepared by an exclusive process which helps protect precious food values and insures a marvelously smooth, moist texture. Nine succulent varieties.

Hand-y idea. Once your baby has a few teeth and a "good grasp" on things, you can help his hand-to-mouth co-ordination with Gerber Meat Sticks.

Incentive and inventive plans. Naturally it's important to encourage baby's efforts by providing incentives "to do." But baby should also be left to his own devices from time to time. Six-month-olds are usually content to play alone for periods of time and they need this time to find ways and means of doing things for and by themselves. In short, fending for themselves at times helps them learn inventiveness and the fine art of self-reliance.

Nutrition note from Dan Gerber. "Of course, your baby's foods must be thoroughly digestible, if he is to get full nutritive benefits from them. Take our cereals, for example. Gerber specialists developed an exclusive cooking method which breaks down starches to assure digestibility. In addition, Gerber Cereals are scientifically formulated to fulfill some of your baby's early nutritional requirements... all 5 are enriched with iron, calcium and important B-vitamins."

For your baby's well-being: Gerber prepares over 100 baby foods—infant formulas, cereals, strained and junior foods—to meet your baby's nutritional needs. We're proud to say:

"Babies are our business...our only business!"

way is Upheaval Dome, really a huge sandstone crater inside which a jagged, light-colored mass of stone was violently thrust up millions of years ago. This is a half-mile hike from where you leave your car. Jeeps get closer. The Iversons sounded a warning to their children here that visiting parents will echo often: "Don't get too near the edge!"

Now came the amazing, 200-degree, 75-mile view from Grandview Point. Below and beyond stretch the Colorado and the Green at the bottoms of their winding canyons, monstrous Junction Butte near where they meet, the Needles formations, the little-explored Land of the Standing Rocks and the snow-covered Abajo and Elk Mountains.

Next day we trekked to:

THE NEEDLES. We took U.S. 160 south to Church Rock and cut westward on a gravel road on the 40-mile trip. Beside the road, soon, stood Newspaper Rock, bearing one of the nation's best examples of Indian petroglyphs. Into the flat face of the rock, blackened with "desert varnish" applied by centuries of rainwater drainage, Indians have chipped kindergarten-like figures of animals, Indian hunters and signs of the sun. Some have been there 1,000 years.

by jeep only

It's jeep only for the present, for a close-up look at the Needles, up over near-perpendicular Elephant Hill, down S.O.B. Hill and onto a plateau walled in by the oddly shaped pinnacles.

Until there's been time for road-building, jeeps will be the means of seeing all the remote and rugged sections of Canyonlands. If you own a 4-wheel drive vehicle, you're free to tackle the rocky trails—after consulting a park ranger. The Chamber of Commerce here at Moab can advise you about jeep tours.

SOME THINGS TO REMEMBER if you plan to drive in Canyonlands: Have a full tank of gas and recently checked brakes. For a party of four, have a five-gallon can of water. This is a hot place in summer, and water is available at few places inside the park. Moab people advise you to figure out how much camera film you think you'll need—and then double it.

Canyonlands is unique in a state full of unique landscape. It was designated a National Park, at the urging of Interior Secretary Stewart Udall, even though Utah already had two others. Its wonders seem unending. "I can take you out 10 straight days," says guide Mitch Williams, "drive hard every day, never retrace our path and you won't hardly have started to see it all."

Mother and Dad boost the youngsters to give them better view of 1,000-year-old Indian picture writings on Newspaper Rock.

Guide Mitch Williams points out layers of stone in wall of canyon which has been cut by the Colorado River.

With stones the Indians left behind, Shawn demonstrates how grain was ground. Park ranger is at right.

My Favorite Jokes

by Buddy Hackett

EDITOR'S NOTE: Buddy Hackett, 40, star of the Broadway musical I Had a Ball, is a graduate of night clubs and borsch belt hotels. In the past 20 years Buddy has played every major night club and television show in the nation. He has appeared in countless Hollywood films—It's a Mad, Mad, Mad, Mad World, The Music Man, The Brothers Grimm. He has starred in his own TV show, Stanley. There is no avenue of show business on which he has not successfully appeared. He was born in Brooklyn, pulled a hitch in World War II, won the comedy lead in a revue, Call Me Mister. After that, he played Billy Gray's Band Box in Hollywood, was signed for films and Broadway musicals. Short (5-feet-6), fat and constantly dieting, intelligent, curious and perceptive, Hackett lives with his wife Sherry in a 6-room ranch house in Leonia, N.J., bordering the 13th hole of the Englewood Golf Club. The Hacketts have three children, all of whom are immensely proud of their daddy and the hit he has made of I Had a Ball. Herewith some of Buddy's favorite funnies:

Two women were gossiping in a theater during matinee intermission. The first asked the second: "Where did you go on your vacation?"

"We went to Majorca."

"Majorca? Where is that?"

"How should I know?" the first lady replied. "We flew."

Two weeks after their marriage the groom tells his bride, "I'm going out to play a little golf, dear."

"Why don't you take me with you?" she asks.

"I didn't know you could play golf."

"I play fairly well," the sweet young thing says.

"You mean you play pretty well for a girl?"

"No, I play from the men's tees."

The couple plays golf, and she beats him badly on the first round. The second day she beats him again, and he begins to get a little annoyed. On the third day, playing a long hole with a par 5, she reaches the green in 2.

"Oh, boy!" the blushing bride exclaims. "That's the first time I've reached this green in 2. If I can only sink this 40-foot putt, I'll have my first eagle, and I'm telling you, I'll drop dead."

Poker-faced, the groom declares, "It's a gimmie."

One of President Johnson's top economic advisers received a phone call the other day from St. Paul, Minn.

"Sir," a small, soft voice began. "I've called in reference to the article you wrote in this month's Economic Review. I'm sorry to tell you that I disagree completely with your premise and the statistics you offer as evidence to bolster your argument. The cost of living has not escalated. The purchasing power of the dollar has not diminished as badly as you make out. In fact, my wife and I and three children live very nicely on 83¢ a week."

"Eighty-three cents a week!" the economist repeated. "Did you say 83¢ a week, or did I misunderstand you? Would you please explain to me how you could possibly survive on that small amount . . . I regret, sir, but I can't hear you. This must be a very bad connection. Would you please speak louder."

"I'm sorry," the thin voice replied. "I can't speak any louder. I'm a goldfish."

A guy wanders into a bar and yells to the bartender, "I'll have a double scotch. Give a drink to everyone in the house, and bartender, take a stiff one for yourself."

The bartender serves all the people in the bar, in addition to the host and himself. "That will be $21.40," he says.

Smiling broadly, the guy answers, "I don't have any money."

Red with anger, the bartender bounces the guy into the street. A few minutes later the guy wanders back in.

"Drinks for everybody," he shouts, "and a double scotch for me." Then, turning to the bartender, he says, "But nothing for you. When you get drunk, you get nasty!"

An agent calls on the producer of a TV variety show with a shaggy mongrel dog. "Max," says the agent, "you can have this mutt for 20 bucks."

"Why should I buy that mutt for 20 bucks?"

"Because he's a talking dog."

"Listen," says the producer, "I'm sick and tired of that talking dog routine. I've got no time to kid around. Take the mutt and get lost."

Suddenly the dog jumps up on the producer's desk.

"Please, sir," he begins, "have the goodness of heart to purchase me from this brute. I know I don't look like the most attractive dog in the world. But that's not entirely my fault. My present master never feeds me. Once in a while he throws me a scrap. He's an agent. Let's face it, Mr. Producer: Do you know anyone as low, miserable, dishonest, conniving, cheap and unprincipled as an agent?"

"This man," the dog continues, "has made a fortune booking me into the largest theaters and night clubs all over the world. I have played for presidents, noblemen, dignitaries, the crowned heads of Europe, the sheiks of Arabia. I plead with you, sir. Buy me from this rascal, and I will make you half a million the very first year."

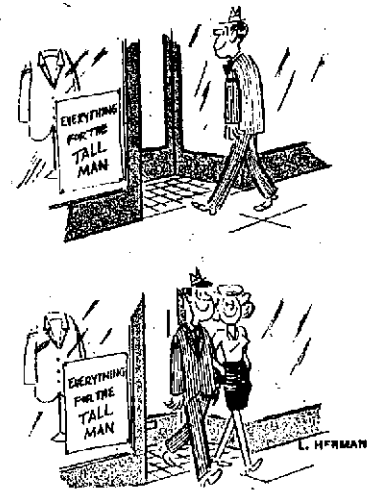

The producer is amazed at the dog's fluency, his power of speech, the extent of his vocabulary. "For Pete's sake," he finally manages. "This dog talks like a Rhodes Scholar. Why do you want to sell him to me for 20 dollars?"

"Because," says the agent, "I'm fed up to the ears with his constant lying."

ANECDOTE OF THE WEEK

■ One of Hollywood's veteran actresses, long past the prime of her beauty but still very shapely, was taking dinner with an ex-husband. "You wouldn't believe it," she said, "but the men in this town still pursue me. Three or four are always following me wherever I go. Frankly, I don't know how to stop it."

"Easy," suggested the former husband. "Just turn around."

My Favorite Jokes

by Buddy Hackett

EDITOR'S NOTE: Buddy Hackett, 40, star of the Broadway musical I Had a Ball, is a graduate of night clubs and borscht belt hotels. In the past 20 years Buddy has played every major night club and television show in the nation. He has appeared in countless Hollywood films—It's a Mad, Mad, Mad, Mad World, The Music Man, The Brothers Grimm. He has starred in his own TV show, Stanley. There is no avenue of show business on which he has not successfully appeared. He was born in Brooklyn, pulled a litch in World War II, won the comedy lead in a revue, Call Me Mister. After that, he played Billy Gray's Band Box in Hollywood, was signed for films and Broadway musicals. Short (5-foot-6), fat and constantly dieting, intelligent, curious and perceptive, Hackett lives with his wife Sherry in a 6-room ranch house in Leonia, N.J., bordering the 13th hole of the Englewood Golf Club. The Hacketts have three children, all of whom are immensely proud of their daddy and the hit he has made of I Had a Ball. Herewith some of Buddy's favorite funnies:

Two women were gossiping in a theater during matinee intermission. The first asked the second: "Where did you go on your vacation?"

"We went to Majorca."

"Majorca? Where is that?"

"How should I know?" the first lady replied. "We flew."

Two weeks after their marriage the groom tells his bride, "I'm going out to play a little golf, dear."

"Why don't you take me with you?" she asks.

"I didn't know you could play golf."

"I play fairly well," the sweet young thing says.

"You mean you play pretty well for a girl?"

"No, I play from the men's tees."

The couple plays golf, and she beats him badly on the first round. The second day she beats him again, and he begins to get a little annoyed. On the third day, playing a long hole with a par 5, she reaches the green in 2.

INTELLIGENCE REPORT

LITERACY RATES. In the 12-34 age group the highest literacy rate in the world is held by the Japanese -- 99.6%. Lowest rate in the age group is the Sudanese -- 1.6% in Africa's largest nation.

COLLEGE STUDENTS. One out of every 8 American college students attends classes in California, which boasts 790,000 college students. Next-highest is New York state, with approximately 540,000 collegians.

NO HEELS. The Louvre and all other state-owned museums in France have banned stiletto heels to save their floors and carpets. Women touring the sites must wear flat shoes or hire plastic slippers at 25¢ per tour.

STORE THIEVES. German department stores are experimenting with a radar system designed to catch nocturnal robbers. When a thief roams about a store after closing, the radar rays form a field which is geared to motionless objects such as counters, cases and closets. A moving object the size of a man disturbs the balance in the ray field, triggering an alarm signal. This signal can turn on all the lights in the store, start a siren wailing, take an automatic photo of the thief or release a silent alarm which is circuited to the local police station. A store in Düsseldorf will soon install the first such radar system.

BIRTH CONTROL. Church spokesmen deny it, but priests impatient with the Vatican's reluctance on the birth control question have for several months now advocated contraceptive methods in Latin America in opposition to traditional Catholic doctrine. Population in Latin America is multiplying at the world's fastest rate, and many churchmen are worried about feeding, clothing, housing, educating and finding jobs for additional millions. Many are hopeful that the Vatican commission will eventually approve the use of pills or other devices. A decision is expected momentarily, if it hasn't already been handed down.

GROWING HAIR. For the first time in American medical history, hair has been stimulated to grow again on bald heads by rubbing a cream containing the male sex hormone, testosterone, into the scalp. Doctors from the University of Pennsylvania Medical School, writing in the Journal of the American Medical Association, report that the testosterone cream was rubbed once daily into the scalps of 21 bald men, inmates of the Philadelphia County Prison or residents of a local home for the aged. In 16 cases where there had been nearly invisible downy hair, stouter hairs appeared. The fuzz thickened, suggesting that common baldness may no longer be regarded as an irreversible process. Testosterone is a dangerous hormone with potent side effects. No one should use it under any circumstances without medical supervision.

IN LATE SPRING YOUR FIRE-PLACE CHIMNEY MAY ECHO WITH STRANGE TWITTERING SOUNDS...

FOR THE CHIMNEY SWIFT WILL BE RETURNING FROM HIS WINTER TRIP TO SET UP HOUSEKEEPING

UNTIL THE EARLY 1940'S NO ONE KNEW WHERE THIS BIRD SPENT THE COLD MONTHS

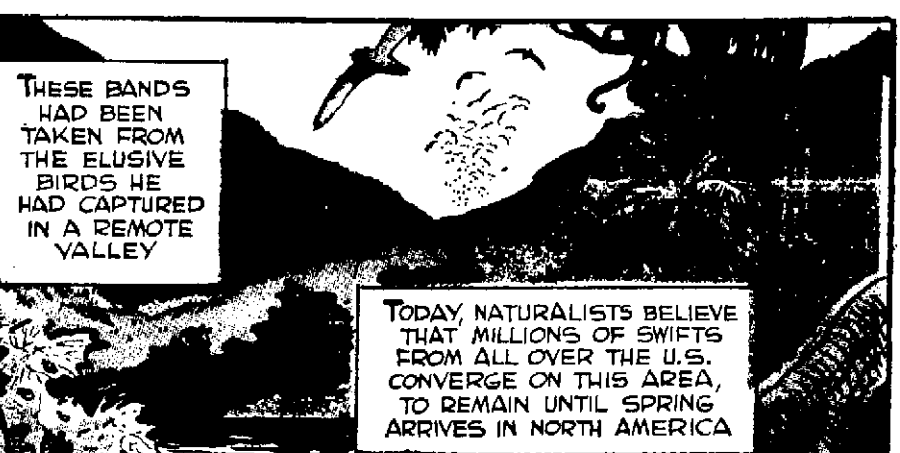

THOUSANDS WERE BANNED IN THE U.S. EACH YEAR WITHOUT RESULTS

THEN IN 1944 A PERUVIAN INDIAN BROUGHT A FEW ALUMINUM BANDS TO A LOCAL MISSION...

THESE BANDS HAD BEEN TAKEN FROM THE ELUSIVE BIRDS HE HAD CAPTURED IN A REMOTE VALLEY

TODAY, NATURALISTS BELIEVE THAT MILLIONS OF SWIFTS FROM ALL OVER THE U.S. CONVERGE ON THIS AREA, TO REMAIN UNTIL SPRING ARRIVES IN NORTH AMERICA

WE'RE STUCK WITH WHAT WE'VE GOT, CHRIS. BUT I MUST ADMIT, THE CITIZENS ARE GETTING PRETTY RESTIVE ABOUT NOT BEING DISCOVERED. YOU GOT ANY IDEAS?

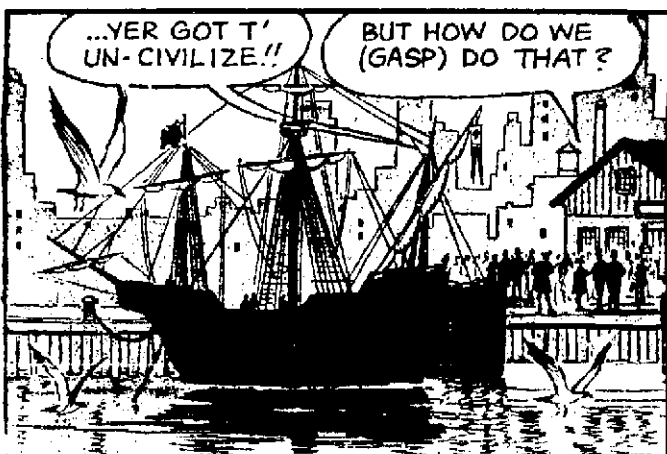

I GOT ONE. GET A GRIP ON YERSELF, MR. MAYOR!

ANYTHING - I'LL DO ANYTHING TO GET THIS MESS SETTLED!

O.K., SINCE YER ANXIOUS T' BE DISCOVERED BY CHRIS COLUMBUS, AND OL' CHRIS HERE HAS GOT HIS HEART SET ON YER BEIN' SOME KIND O' ODDBALLS...

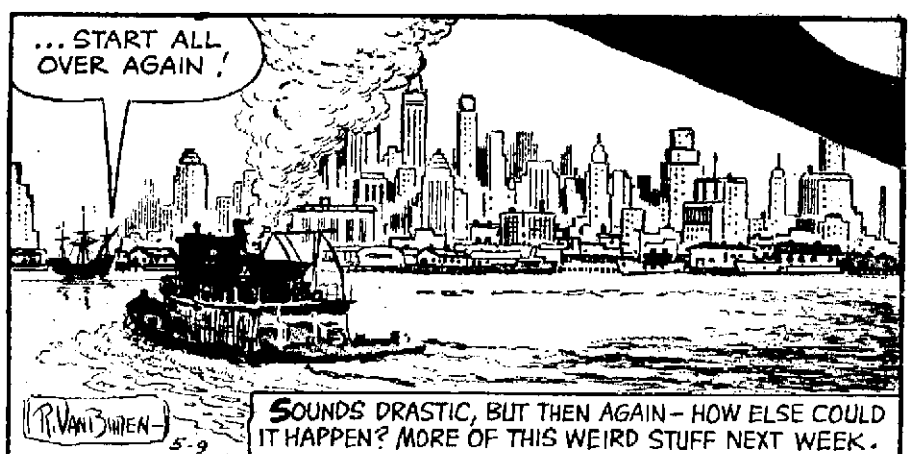

...YER GOT T' UN-CIVILIZE!!

BUT HOW DO WE (GASP) DO THAT?

TEAR DOWN WHAT YER GOT, AND ...

... START ALL OVER AGAIN!

SOUNDS DRASTIC, BUT THEN AGAIN - HOW ELSE COULD IT HAPPEN? MORE OF THIS WEIRD STUFF NEXT WEEK.
